Committee Cuts Fund For WPA to $100,000,000

Sum Is a Third Less Than Roosevelt's Repeated Request; Party Lines Broken

Subsidy Plan Rejected

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT'S cotton export subsidy proposal was rejected by a Senate cotton bloc which moved for direct subsidies to growers. Page 7.

Relief Situation

Opening the way for a three-cornered battle today over the size of the emergency relief fund, the House Appropriations Committee yesterday recommended $100,000,000 for WPA, one-third less than President Roosevelt has repeatedly requested.

While leaders generally expected that the House would approve the $100,000,000 appropriation today, members of the Democratic "urban-liberal" bloc were laying plans for an effort to raise the sum to $125,000,000 or $150,000,000.

On the other hand, some Southern Democrats, enraged by the "liberal" group's tactics in defeating the $250,000,000 farm parity payment bill Tuesday, were seriously considering an attempt to cut the Appropriation Committee's WPA figure still further. They felt certain that in any such move they would receive the support of a majority of the Republicans.

Party Lines Torn

Neither side is making a strict party matter of the relief issue, with the result that the cross-currents of "economy versus spend" and "farm versus city" are tearing party lines to shreds.

However, yesterday's report of the Appropriations Committee, representing "moderate economy" views, will probably be indorsed after the House has debated four hours this afternoon. Of the 25 appropriations committeemen who voted in favor of $100,000,000 as against $150,000,000, 10 were "economy" Democrats and 13 were Republicans—the entire Republican membership of the committee. Thirteen Democrats cast negative ballots.

Offered by Chairman Taylor, Colorado New Dealer, the committee report stated that even the reduced appropriation of $100,000,000 to carry the WPA to the end of the fiscal year "will be adequate to provide work relief for the numbers embraced by the original recommendation" except for recent reductions in the rolls of about 30,000 aliens and 89,000 persons not now in need.

To Save $23,000,000

Elimination of these two categories, the report said, would save more than $23,000,000 between now and June 30. In addition, there was $45,750,000 on hand that had not been counted when the original request was made, the committee declared. However, instead of deducting the sum of these two savings from the original $150,000,000 request, the committee said it would deduct only $50,000,000.

Censuring administrative expenditures of WPA as "unjustifiably high," the report said the administrator "should be able to administratively effect economies which will make unnecessary the expenditure of the entire additional amount now proposed by the committee."

The committee particularly cited expenditures of $500,000 per month for travel and subsistence, and $150,000 per month for communications. Objection was also raised to projects with "disproportionately high labor and material costs." The committee said "a case in point" is the $300,000 WPA building at the New York World's Fair.

A thorough inquiry into WPA, provided for in a recent House resolution sponsored by Representative Cox (Democrat), of Georgia, will be

Cherry Festival To Open With Gala Program

Thousands Converge On Capital for Event; Starts at 7 A. M.

With visitors heading toward Washington from all directions to attend the opening of the Capital's famed Cherry Blossom Festival at 7 a. m. tomorrow, pageant officials will go on the air at 6:45 p. m. today over radio Station WJSV to climax weeks of preparation for the gala affair.

After double-checking with the Weather Bureau and the Greater National Capital Committee, officials announced plenty of co-operation could be expected from both.

Showers are expected this afternoon, and a low of 42 degrees is expected early today.

The forecaster said "unsettled conditions" caused forecasts of rain yesterday to go haywire. The high was 50 degrees at 2:30 p. m.

One of the largest influxes of cherry blossom enthusiasts ever to visit the Capital will begin tomorrow, Curtis Hodges, of the Greater National Capital Committee, reported, adding that there will be sufficient accommodations for all.

Date for the festival—March 31-April 9—has been on display throughout the Nation, by means of five cross-country railroads, Hodges said. The committee has culled the city and has a file of accommodations available for about 10,000 visitors, he added.

The radio program tonight will be highlighted by the National Capital Parks Schola Cantorum's rendition of the festival song, "Cherry Blossom Time," written by Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe. It will be under the direction of Arturo Popalardo.

A sunrise program at 7 a. m. at the foot of Seventeenth street, 600 feet west of Tidal Basin boathouse, will open the program. The Marine Band will play at 1:45 at the same location

Miss Peggy Townsend will be crowned queen of the festival at 4:30 p. m. on the polo grounds of the Mall by Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley.

Wage-Hour Exemptions Are Sought

Amendments Would Exclude White-Collar Workers Earning $200 Monthly, Up

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Norton (Democrat), of New Jersey, of the House Labor Committee, asked Congress yesterday to revise the wage-hour law on the ground that experience had shown it was working hardships in some cases on both employers and employes.

On the basis of suggestions by Elmer F. Andrews, the wage-hour administrator, Mrs. Norton introduced a series of amendments, one of which would exempt from the hours provision persons earning $200 a month or more.

She said in a statement that "a good deal of the objection" to the labor standards act came from its application to white-collar workers—men and women—engaged in work not of a clearly administrative or executive nature but which frequently requires overtime work.

"In the case of bookkeepers, private stenographers, etc., high salaried office workers in the main," she said, "it is felt that the application of the law works great hardship both on the employer and employes.

"In many instances employes such as those described actually work in a quasi-executive capacity and it is utterly impossible to regulate their hours of work."

One amendment which business men have requested states that no provision of the act imposing any liability or disability "shall apply to any act done or omitted in good faith in conformity with any regulation or order of the administrator."

Redraft of Farm Section

If enacted, this section would relieve employers from liability which might arise if they complied with regulations or orders of the administrator and the latter were tossed overboard in court.

Mrs. Norton proposed a complete redraft of the agricultural industry section of the law, which now provides for exemption from the hours provisions of workers engaged in movement of products from farm to market or in their preparation for market, provided the workers were employed "in the area of production."

The House committee chairman proposed instead that exemptions for such workers be based on the seasonality and perishability of products. Her amendment would list the specific operations to which the exemption would apply. Cotton ginning would be exempted from both wage and hours provisions.

Workers engaged in such operations would be permitted to work 12 hours daily, or 56 hours a week, but would be entitled to time and one-half pay for time worked beyond those limits.

Among other changes, Mrs. Norton proposed to remove "a severe hardship" by exempting telephone operators in exchanges serving 350 stations or less.

Senate to Get Amendments

Another amendment would permit the administrator to establish committees to determine whether specific industries in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands might pay wages lower than the 25 cents an hour minimum prescribed in the law.

Mrs. Norton opposed complete exemption of the two possessions on the ground it would "create a great competitive handicap" in some instances.

Chairman Thomas (Democrat), Utah, of the Senate Labor Committee, announced he would offer similar amendments in the Senate today.

Meanwhile, without a ripple of opposition, the House passed and sent to the Senate a $30,831,070 appropriation to run the Labor Department for the year starting July 1.

Postmasters' Chief Questioned on Choice of Secretary

William J. Dixon, superintendent of the postmasters division, Postoffice Department, a tall man in a pearl gray suit, blew tiny cigar smoke rings at the ceiling yesterday while Senator Ellender, Democrat, investigating "petty czarism" in the Federal service, charged him with promoting Mrs. Josephine Smithers three grades, to the disappointment of other eligible women in the department.

Beside Mrs. Smithers sat Miss Leone Adair, a class 4 employe, who said the promotion of Mrs. Smithers, who was her junior in grade, "took the heart right out of me, and I feel no better now." She said she had not been advised that Dixon was looking for a secretary.

Dixon, who was supported in his action by Personnel Director Jesse M. Donaldson, said it was impossible to promote everyone and he wanted to say that everything "is going smoothly in my division."

"Going smoothly!" Ellender cried. "Didn't you just hear Miss Adair say her heart is breaking?"

Dixon replied that there naturally would be some disappointment, "but you have to make a selection."

"But don't you think such as this would put despair into the hearts of others?" Ellender inquired.

"I don't know," Dixon answered.

"You don't know?" Ellender said.

"They have to go up grade by grade," Dixon rejoined.

"But this isn't going up grade by grade," protested Ellender. "It's one grade up and then a leap."

Opening the third day of his investigation, Ellender related the background of the Dixon case, which began in the retirement some time ago of Martin Scranage.

Miss Lombard And Gable Wed In Arizona Town

Kingman, Ariz., March 29 (AP).—Clark Gable and Carole Lombard were married here late today by the Rev. Kenneth M. Engle, of the First Methodist Episcopal Church.

The couple walked into the marriage license bureau about an hour before the ceremony and so startled the clerk, Miss Viola Olsen, she could hardly speak.

Howard Cate, principal of Kingman High School, and Mrs. Engle, the minister's wife, were the only witnesses.

Cate said Gable told him he and his bride would motor on to Boulder City, Nev., tonight and spend tomorrow at Boulder Dam. They probably will return to Hollywood Friday.

Last Fourth Of Spain Surrenders

War's Official End Orderly as 9 Provincial Capitals Yield to Franco

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, March 29.—Spain's 32-month-old civil war came to a sudden and unspectacular end today when the last of the Nation's 52 provincial capitals passed into Nationalist Gen. Franco's hands without resistance.

The final day of the war, in which more than 1,200,000 persons were killed or wounded, gave the nationalists nearly one-fourth of Spain's territory—all that had remained in republican hands.

Final collapse began yesterday with the surrender of Madrid, which had been regarded by republicans throughout the conflict as a symbol of their courage and determination. Other cities rushed quickly to get on the nationalist band wagon.

Nine Capitals Yielded

Nine provincial capitals surrendered today—Valencia, Alicante, Murcia, Cuenca, Almeria, Jaen, Ciudad Real, Albacete and Guadalajara. Cartagena, former republican naval base, also capitulated.

After the fall of Albacete, last to give up, the nationalists officially announced the war was over in these words: "The war has ended—total victory is Franco's."

Playing an important part in breaking republican resistance were nationalist sympathizers in republican territory who in many cases rose against republican garrisons and forced them to surrender today.

Despite the rapidity of the last conquests there were few disorders. Nationalist authorities apparently were well prepared for just such events and quickly took over administration of various cities.

Wild scrambles occurred in some cities, particularly the seaport of Valencia, as republican leaders and others who considered themselves marked for reprisals attempted to escape the country.

Leaders "Detained"

Among the few successful were Gen. Jose Miaja, former chief of the Madrid national defense council, who arrived in Algeria by plane with his staff and some other republicans.

Nationalists tonight declared that all members of the defense council except Miaja and Gen. Segismundo Casado had been detained in Valencia. Nationalists asserted the republican foreign minister, Julian Besteiro, was among those held.

[French merchant ships sailed from Valencia before dawn with almost 2,000 refugees, the United Press said. Hundreds of popular front leaders were unable to find means of escape, however, according to Col. Stephen O. Fuqua, United States Military Attache, who arrived in Madrid today from Valencia.—Editor's Note.]

In Madrid there were many signs of returning normality after 28½ months of siege.

Span Washed Out, 3 Die as 6 Cars Fall Into Torrent

Vicksburg, Miss., March 29 (AP).—Three persons, probably more, were drowned tonight when a half-dozen automobiles plunged through the gap of a washed-out bridge on the Vicksburg-Jackson highway.

Leroy Meeks, of Jackson, said he escaped after his car went into the rain-swollen stream. He believed his brother and two girls drowned.

J. McIntosh, 45, of Vicksburg, said he swam to shore after his car plunged in. He noticed several in the raging torrent clinging to driftwood. He saw his young son swimming toward the opposite shore.

The accident occurred near the Big Black River, 10 miles east of here. State and city officers of Jackson and Vicksburg, doctors and ambulances and volunteers from both cities went to the scene.

Stinson Tells of Money Affairs As Cross-Examination Begins

Stormy and brief though it may have been, the romance between Mrs. Pepita Crounse, wealthy Washington widow, and Joseph Whitla Stinson, artist-attorney, was brightened by an abundance of money, it was shown in District Court yesterday afternoon as attorneys for Mrs. Stinson started their cross-examination of the defendant.

Beginning with $1,000 "in appreciation for my legal services," given before the engagement, and ending eight months later with a $27,000 payment as a separation settlement, Mrs. Stinson's checking account was opened freely to the man she is charging with drugging her into an unsatisfactory marriage, according to bank statements introduced as evidence.

With exception of the final settlement however little was lavished on the defendant after the marriage according to the record. Two days after the wedding, Stinson declared, his wife threatened to go to Reno. About a month later she had his power of attorney over her estate revoked.

After their separation, the trust fund of $230,000 she had set up for him soon after they became engaged

French Reject Italy's Demands as Duce Calls 250,000 to Colors

Fascist Leaders Assert Attitude Of Paris Creates 'Bad Situation'

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, March 29.—Two hundred and fifty thousand trained reserves tonight were returning to active service, answering a call issued as Premier Daladier of France was discussing French-Italian colonial tension.

Facist leaders termed Daladier's speech "virtual rejection" of Premier Mussolini's invitation of last Sunday to negotiate the "problems" of Tunisia, Djibouti, and the Suez Canal, all recently the subject of Italian agitation for satisfaction of her colonial aspirations.

Men of the first four months of the class of 1919, or 20-year-olds, and the entire class of 1918, reported to barracks, where they were given uniforms and dispatched immediately by train for undisclosed destinations.

The general reaction in Rome was that Daladier's speech had been much stronger than anticipated, and the more militant Fascist leaders said France's "lack of appreciation" of Italy's position created a "bad situation."

Premier Mussolini himself apparently did not listen to the broadcast, which was heard throughout Italy. In the midst of the address, Il Duce left by train for Calabria, in southern Italy, reviving recurrent rumors he would confer this week-end with Marshal Goering of Germany and Gen. Franco of Spain.

Mussolini May Reply

Mussolini's trip ostensibly was for a series of speeches and it was suggested he might reply to Daladier in one of them. Calabria, however, is near Sicily, where the reports said the three totalitarian leaders would meet. Goering is vacationing in San Remo.

While no official comment on Daladier's address was forthcoming, there was general disappointment that the French premier has refused to take any initiative in starting discussions.

At best, his words were regarded as having done nothing to improve the situation. The most optimistic Italian comment was that neither side had completely closed the door to conversations, each leaving the next move up to the other.

Some quarters contended Daladier was trying to maneuver Italy into the position of making concrete statements before the start of negotiations, but foreign circles pointed out that the same criticism might have been made of Mussolini's advice to France last Sunday to act before the "ditch" between the two countries became too broad to be bridged.

Italians were particularly bitter over Daladier's insistence that any settlement must come from Italian initiative and be based on the 1935 Laval-Mussolini accord, which Italy formally denounced on December 17.

Settlement Made Difficult

France, according to Fascist leaders, has made it difficult for Italy to find any basis of settlement because Mussolini already has rejected the 1935 accord as inoperative and cannot be expected to re-enter discussions concerning it.

Some foreign diplomats, however, took the hopeful view that since the heads of the two governments have stated their views, there now was a possibility of cautious diplomatic soundings which might lead to definite negotiations.

The broadcast of Daladier's speech could be heard in Italy both in the original French version and its Italian translation, although reception of a part dealing with Ital-

Poles Discuss Danzig's Status With Berlin

Negotiate, but Bar Its Annexation; Beck to Go to London Soon

By the Associated Press.

Warsaw, March 29.—Poland, reluctant to join France and Britain in a bloc against Germany, has started talks with Germany to settle the future status of the Free City of Danzig, it was learned tonight.

It was understood the conversations were intended to satisfy Germany's desire for greater authority over the free city, and at the same time to guarantee Poland's large economic interests there.

Danzig, a city of more than 400,000, is largely German. To give Poland an outlet to the Baltic Sea the port was taken from Germany and made a free city under protection of the League of Nations.

A slice of former German territory, known as the Polish Corridor, also was given Poland so she could have access to the port.

Danzig already is dominated by Danzig Nazis who succeeded in gaining political power there.

Diplomats declared it only "natural that Poland and Germany are discussing the question."

They pointed out that in 1935 when the League of Nations Danzig Commission considered resigning and when the League suggested abolition of the post of League high commissioner in Danzig, a committee composed of Britain, France and Sweden advised that direct Polish-

Czechs Move Here For New State

Chicago, March 29 (U.P.).—Bohus Benes, nephew and private secretary of Eduard Benes, former Czecho-Slovakian president, revealed tonight that a meeting to unify Czechs and Slovaks with the ultimate objective of setting up a new Czecho-Slovakian state would be held in Chicago or New York in about a month.

Navy to Build Mosquito Fleet To Guard Canal and Harbors

The Navy announced yesterday it will soon launch a building program of "mosquito" boats, small craft designed for convoying and for Panama Canal and harbor defense.

While development of "suicide" boats and other small armed vessels has been carried on extensively in recent years by foreign navies, the United States has ignored the type until now. Especially effective in the "close" waters of the Mediterranean and North seas, they have been built by European nations for years.

Meanwhile, on the eve of starting the new Army expansion, the War Department has ordered that employes both here and in the field be fingerprinted. As arsenals and air depots will soon be filled with work, mostly of a secret nature, the move is regarded as an important step in the counter-espionage drive inaugurated by an interdepartmental committee.

Nearly 80,000 employes are affected by the order, officials stated. Temporary unskilled laborers, are excepted from the requirement, while about one-third of the 70,000 classified groups and all officers and enlisted men, already have their

'We Will Not Cede One Foot of Land,' Daladier Says; Offers Negotiations

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 29.—Premier Daladier in an anxiously awaited address to France and the world tonight offered to negotiate France's difficulties with Italy, but put it squarely up to Rome to make the next move by clarifying her demands.

Furthermore, he bluntly warned that "we will not cede a foot of our land nor one of our rights."

Daladier was replying to Premier Mussolini's speech of Sunday listing Tunisia, Djibouti and the Suez Canal as "problems of a colonial character" standing between Italy and France.

In his reply, a 27-minute address which was approved by the French cabinet this morning, Daladier combined firmness and diplomacy.

Strikes at Germany

He struck at Germany, declaring that although France had made every effort for a "lasting collaboration" with Germany, the Nazi dismemberment of Czecho-Slovakia had come as a "heavy blow" to these efforts for peace.

Of the French-Italian problem he said:

"Faithful to the accords she signed (with Italy) in 1935, France is ready to pursue their complete and loyal execution. In the spirit and equivalence of these accords on the basis that I have defined and that I have just recalled, she would not refuse to examine propositions that may be made to her."

Daladier had just said "we cannot accept" the "essential argument" of Italy's stand, which he said was that "the conquest of Ethiopia and constitution of the Italian empire created new rights for Italy."

The premier said Il Duce spoke Sunday as if an Italian note delivered last December 17 "contained the Italian claims with clarity."

Notes Published

Later the foreign ministry published the text of the Italian note denouncing the 1935 treaty and the French reply.

The Italian note said "constitution of the (Italian) empire has created new rights and new interests of fundamental importance" and suggested that a new accord be negotiated to replace the 1935 agreement, but mentioned no precise concessions which the French should make.

Daladier bitterly condemned international force, and he appealed to all powers "who think as we do," with a veiled reference to England and the United States, to unite for maintenance of peace, but against any further aggression. He scored Germany's recent course.

Do Not Want War

"The conquest of Czecho-Slovakia," he said, "and the occupation of Prague by the German army gave the heaviest blow" to French efforts to establish peaceful international collaboration. He continued:

"For years, to justify certain acts, we have heard of the right of peoples to dispose for themselves. Then we heard of natural aspirations. Now we hear of the vital space which is only the eternal result of a desire for conquest.

"As I told you a few moments ago, how could Europe not be in alarm? There is not in fact a single man who does not know in the present hour that war would be a catastrophe for all nations. None would be sheltered from destruction. We do not want that.

"We want to help Europe to save itself. In the name of my country,

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

(Satire is no gentle weapon when witty, brilliant Jerome Frank, member of Securities and Exchange Commission, wield it. Today's guest column, an imaginary letter from John Q. Oldguard, is a good example of Mr. Frank's satirical style. Yesterday came fresh rumors of Mr. Frank's decision to go back to his law practice. Or he might become a judge.)

By JEROME FRANK

COMMISSIONER, SEC., AUTHOR OF "SAVE AMERICA FIRST."

Washington, March 11.

DEAR MR. FRANK:

In a speech you made recently, you said of the SEC: "We are definitely not muck-raking, and if an unpleasant past does not contribute anything to the future, we are only too glad to draw a veil of charity over it."

Jerome Frank
. . . writes himself

And you went on to say that SEC discloses fraud or dishonesty only when the disclosure is useful and constructive.

* * * *

I'm glad you have that much sense. But you're ridiculously superficial. For, if you were intelligent, you'd know that to tell the truth about flagrant dishonesty or gross fraud on the part of any very important businessman can never be useful or constructive.

* * * *

That kind of publicity definitely hurts business confidence. It ought to be supressed. Suppose that, now and then, some leading citizen does defraud a lot of people of their money?

From the point of view of the national welfare, there's no harm in that. The money will be spent. It's merely a question of who spends it, and that's not important.

"—this encourages honesty"

If a broker steals a million dollars of his customer's money and uses it to build a house, a lot of people will be employed. The money goes into the stream of income. The national income will be just the same.

But if you expose the broker's embezzlement, many people get worried and hoard their savings.

Why don't you get wise to yourself and do something constructive like this: Suggest that the SEC be abolished. In place of it, there should be created another commission, known as HUSH.

Its function will be to suppress all authentic news about the dishonesty or frauds of any man or corporation with gross assets of more than a million dollars.

* * * *

It will prosecute and put in jail anyone who uses the mails or the instrumentalities of interstate commerce to spread such truthful news. All citizens will be required to notify HUSH, confidentially, of any such facts.

And HUSH will have the power to enjoin anyone who threatens to spread any such true story about important persons. That sort of an institution will do much to promote business recovery.

"—but this makes people nervous"

Prior to the advent of the New Deal, much business activity was promoted by dishonest conduct which the SEC now does its best to prevent. Business was badly injured by the disclosure of the truth about the illegal conduct of Richard Whitney.

It certainly did not aid the flow of capital into industry, through the capital markets, to have the public learn that there had been dishonesty on the part of an officer of such an important institution as the New York Stock Exchange.

* * * *

SEC by its exposure of crookedness in high places, rocks the boat. Its activities are pernicious. The passion for honesty displayed by SEC is the kind of thing that's bringing democracy into disrepute. More and more I incline to the belief that we ought to amend the Constitution and wipe out the foolish and disturbing right of free speech.

* * * *

I am not, I should add, concerned with suppressing the truth about the frauds or dishonesty of persons of little means. That's desirable. It encourages public belief in law and order.

It is only when there is fraud or dishonesty on the part of men or corporations of considerable wealth that publicity is disastrous.

So I urge you to help close up the SEC and help create HUSH.

JOHN Q. OLDGUARD.

A.F.L. Takes NLRB Fight To High Court

Seeks Injunction Against Ruling for C. I. O. Longshoremen

The Administration is hopeful that peace negotiations between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations will result in at least an armistice between the warring labor factions, it was learned yesterday.

The meeting between the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. peace committees which was to be held in New York tonight was postponed until Tuesday because of the death in Chicago of John J. Stretch, vice president of the A. F. of L. bricklayers' union.

Bates Asks Postponement

Harry C. Bates, A. F. of L. vice president and chairman of its peace committee, asked for the postponement to enable him to attend the funeral. He and Stretch were lifelong friends.

Lingering hopes for labor unity received a new dash of cold water yesterday when the A. F. of L. petitioned the District supreme court for an injunction against the National Labor Relations Board, forcing it to withdraw its decision in favor of the C. I. O. as bargaining agent for Pacific Coast longshoremen

A. F. of L. unions, the petition said, suffered a setback in prestige and good will because the NLRB decided in favor of the C. I. O. The A. F. of L. lost before the District Court of Appeals on an papeal from the NLRB action.

Some labor leaders feel that the decision of the Senate Education and Labor Committee to begin hearings April 11 on changes in the Wagner labor act would retard peace negotiations. The A. F. of L. has insisted that comparative bargaining strength of the two organizations cannot be accurately gauged until the question of what changes Congress will make in the act has been decided.

The Adminitration is said to be banking on the groups to reach some kind of accord—at least, to agree to stop the "cutthroat" competition which is injuring business in spots and, in the opinion of many labor leaders, discrediting the entire labor movement.

Unity Please Pour In

If letters and telegrams pleading for unity continue to pour in, Labor Department officials said yesterday, the number of workers represented by these communications will soon reach 4,000,000.

In view of this heavy pressure, there is a distinct feeling that negotiations scarcely can be abandoned unless some kind of accord is reached. In addition, some A. F. of L. leaders, particularly Bates and Daniel J. Tobin, head of the teamsters' union, are eager to heal the breach in labor's ranks.

Some observers insist that the more conservative A. F. of L. leaders do not want peace, particularly at this time, since postponement would strengthen the hand of the A. F. of L. The 1940 Presidential campaign, likewise, it is said, is a big factor in the situation. Settlement of the controversy would aid the Administration from a political standpoint.

Secretary of Labor Perkins, the House Appropriations Committee revealed yesterday, recently testified that the labor controversy was "one of the most difficult things we have to deal with because it complicates every single thing we do." She revealed that the department never takes any action affecting one organization without advising the other.

The New York joint council, United Retail and Wholesale Employes of America, a C. I. O. organization, recently telegraphed Miss Perkins, as well as John L. Lewis and William Green, announcing its support of the peace move.

Miners Reject Contract Renewal

New York, March 29 (AP).—United Mine Workers' negotiators were reported tonight to have rejected a suggestion by bituminous coal operators' representatives for a two-year renewal of their existing two-year labor contract, which expires Friday midnight.

The miners, a spokesman said, were opposed to a two-year extension because of the possibility that when the Bituminous Coal Commission announces its price scales, mine profits may rise and the U. M. W. would want to share those profits.

Homespun 'Horse and Buggy Doctor' Declares Specialist Won't Replace Family Physician

Dr. Hertzler Affirms Faith in Character His Pen Illumined

He is the kind of an M. D. you can call "Doc" without his taking on the hurt look of offended dignity. Though he never took the trouble to develop a bedside manner, he is one of the country's outstanding surgeons.

Dr. Arthur Emanuel Hertzler, who was brought to the Capital yesterday from his Kansas hospital to be honored by the Washington Academy of Surgery, is just the kind of fellow you would expect to be the author of "The Horse and Buggy Doctor."

Now that the book has gone into its fortieth printing, he still wears the same hat size, is still as homespun and unassuming as ever, which, again, might be expected of a Hertzler but few others.

Yesterday afternoon, between the luncheon given for him by Dr. Charles Stanley White and the testimonial dinner sponsored by the Washington Academy of Surgery, Dr. Hertzler made a few observations on the New Deal, wart removal, pencil collecting, cancer control and medical monkey business.

Looks Like Lincoln

But first a brief introduction. Dr. Hertzler has been practicing medicine, mostly in Kansas, for the last 45 years. He was born in West Point, Iowa, on July 26, 1870, took his M. D. at Northwestern University, studied a couple of years in Germany, wrote a dozen or more learned textbooks on surgery and pathology before he addressed himself to the laity in his "The Horse and Buggy Doctor." He is the founder and head of the Halstead (Kansas) Hospital, which has been functioning since 1903.

He is tall—over 6 feet—and loose jointed. With a fairly good makeup job he could impersonate Abraham Lincoln. His long, bony fingers, which have performed thousands of surgical operations, contribute to the Lincolnesque impression. So does his candor.

The New Deal?

"It's taxes are too high," he said. "Farmers I know in Kansas and others whom I've met in the South tell me, 'I'm a Democrat, all right, but not a New Dealer.'"

The interviewer asks the questions or throws out the leads and Dr. Hertzler comes up with the answers and opinions. No pussyfooting and no question-begging.

Socialized medicine?

"Economically impossible" he replied. "It won't give you something for nothing. You'll get what you pay for."

DR. ARTHUR EMANUEL HERTZLER

Favors Family Doctor

He thinks the old-time family doctor far from being in danger of disappearing because of the rise of specialization, is making a strong comeback. Specialization, in his opinion, is being overdone. In some cases, it is on the borderline of racketeering.

"A man with a wart on his nose goes to his family doctor. Between them they decide the wart ought to come off so it comes off. No one makes a lot of fancy tests and the patient doesn't have to shuttle from one specialist to another."

The whole scheme of medical education, he says, has been to encourage specialization, which is bad. His advice to the individual is to pick a general practitioner as his family physician, one in whom he has confidence, and place full responsibility on his shoulders.

That is to say, let the family doctor decide when and if a specialist should be called in, with the former recommending whom the consultant should be.

"The medical picture is muddied by people who want to make a big noise and don't know how," he said. "We doctors are not as important as we think we are. All this talk about 'adequate medical care!' Who knows what adequate medical care is?"

Admitting that he might be branded a rugged individualist, Dr. Hertzler is skeptical as to the good that will come from pouring millions of dollars in public money into research projects aimed at conquering cancer and other baffling diseases.

"It will take brains to beat cancer. Money won't do it. Some cub working on his own may solve the mystery one of these days."

Last night Dr. Hertzler addressed the District Medical Society on goiter surgery. This morning he will speak to medical students at Georgetown and George Washington universities. At 5 p. m. he will head back to Halstead, population 1,373.

The price of the interview was a pencil. He collects them wherever he goes.

House Passes Report on Reorganization

Controversial Bill Sent to President In Modified Form

The Administration's Government reorganization bill, sharply restricted by modifying amendments and minus controversial features of the President's original program, yesterday received final Congressional approval and was sent to the White House for signing.

By a voice vote, the House approved a conference report on the measure it had refused to pass in its original form last session. The Senate on Tuesday had unanimously approved the measure.

House reorganization committeemen pointed out the President will have to move quickly if he seeks any specific mergers or consolidations this session. The bill requires a 60-day layover of any reorganization plan, which would carry Congress close to its adjournment deadline even if submitted within the next month.

President Expected to Act

On at least one authorization in the bill the President was expected to act this session—permission to appoint six $10,000-a-year executive assistants. Names mentioned as possible candidates include Thomas G. Corcoran and Benjamin Cohen, Administration legal aides; Isador Lubin, commissioner of labor statistics; James Rowe, former secretary to James Roosevelt, and Edward H. Foley, jr., acting general counsel of the Treasury.

One reorganization plan reported under consideration for action this session would consolidate a half dozen Treasury law enforcement agencies under one head—the Secret Service, internal revenue intelligence unit, the narcotics bureau, the alcohol tax unit and intelligence divisions of the customs service and the Coast Guard.

With the exception of a long list of quasi-judicial commissions and other preferred agencies, the bill authorizes the President to submit plans for merging of agencies or units within bureaus, to eliminate duplications and to effect both economy and efficiency. No executive department may be abolished nor may any new one be set up. Under a last-minute Senate amendment, the President was denied power to abolish "functions" of government, which must be transferred to another bureau before any agency is abolished.

Must Act in 60 Days

Left out of the bill were provisions for a single civil service administrator, revamping of the General Accounting Office and authorization for a new Department of Welfare and National Resources Board, all centers of controversy in the original merger program.

Congress may checkmate the President's individual merger plans if both Houses, before expiration of 60 days, pass a concurrent resolution by majority vote, disapproving any proposed change, but once a plan is submitted no alteration may be made by Congress. Each must be approved as a whole or not at all.

Although a Senate amendment by Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, provides an economy preamble to the bill, Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, minority member of the House Reorganization Committee, declared the prohibition on abolition of functions made substantial economies improbable.

Representative Warren (Democrat), of North Carolina, who drew the new bill and guided it through the House, replied that some economy and "far greater efficiency" in Government will result. Warren said no one ever has claimed the bill would balance the budget.

Mail Order Drive Opens To Sell McNutt

Hoosier Backers Seek Support of Leaders For 1940 Nomination

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, March 29 (AP).—Backers of Philippine High Commissioner Paul V. McNutt for the Democratic Presidential nomination launched today a Nation-wide "mail order" campaign to sell the former Indiana Governor to the party's national convention next year.

National Committeeman Frank H. McHale, directing the McNutt campaign, said personal letters soliciting support were being mailed to all Democratic United States Senators and Representatives, national committee members and State chairmen and vice chairmen.

The letters were signed by McHale and Mrs. Samuel M. Ralston, widow of the former United States Senator and national committeewoman from Indiana.

McHale termed the letters a "personal announcement by the Indiana Democratic organization to the party's "official family." The party's State convention last summer indored McNutt for the 1940 Presidential nomination.

The letters praised McNutt as "a leader who can close the party's ranks in 1940." McHale said the former Indiana Governor is being offered as a "middle of the road" Democrat."

Accompanying the letter was a four-page brochure lauding the candidate as "lawyer, educator, statesman—trained in leadership and government—experienced in world affairs," and as a "budget balancer."

Senators to Close Overton Formula Hearing Today

Hearings on the Overton fiscal formula for stabilizing the Federal payment to the District will close today after the Senate subcommittee hears an official of the Census Bureau and Auditor Daniel J. Donovan.

Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, said the sub-committee probably will take a vote immediately after the hearing.

C. E. Rightor, of the Census Bureau, will testify as to the comparative tax burden on Washington residents and tax payers of cities of like size.

Ashurst Likens Self to 'Bifurcated, Peripatetic Volcano;' Garner Ready to Go Fishing

By the Associated Press.

Cover-to-cover readers of the Congressional Record reached in astonishment yesterday for their dictionaries.

This bit had been spoken on the Senate floor by Senator Ashurst (Democrat), of Arizona:

"In the early years of my career, like a bifurcated, peripatetic volcano, I traveled the United States speaking for low tariffs."

ASHURST

The dictionary backs up the conclusion that the Senator, who often reels off rhetorical gems, was comparing himself to a two-legged volcano that did its erupting while traveling about.

Add signs of spring:

Vice President Garner's trailer has been overhauled and is ready for the Texas fishing trip which usually follows an adjournment of Congress.

When will he use it?

"As soon as you boys will let us get away from here," he chuckled to reporters.

Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, said yesterday he had "gained the impression" in conversations with President Roosevelt that he does not want to run for a third term.

Norris said it was possible that Mr. Roosevelt might have something to say about the 1940 campaign if he makes a trip across the country this summer. The President has planned tentatively to attend the San Francisco Fair.

If Mr. Roosevelt should refuse to run himself, Norris said it was possible he would support Solicitor General Jackson for the Democratic nomination. Norris described Jackson as a "thorough liberal," who would be an "ideal President."

A bill to allow Mary Cohen Bienvenu, daughter of the late Maj. John S. Cohen, United States Senator and Atlanta (Ga.) publisher, and wife of a French citizen, to become a full-fledged citizen of the United States, was reported favorably by the House Immigration Committee.

Bishop Schrembs Made Archbishop

The apostolic delegation in Washington yesterday announced that Pope Pius had elevated the Most Rev. Joseph Schrembs, Bishop of Cleveland, to the rank of archbishop. He is the first American to receive a major promotion from the new Pope.

Archbishop Schrembs will observe the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood on June 29. On that day he will preside at a solemn mass of thanksgiving in St. John's Cathedral, Cleveland, where he will remain as ordinary of the diocese.

The new archbishop was named auxiliary bishop of Grand Rapids, Mich., in 1911, and the same year was transferred to Toledo as bishop of the diocese. He remained there until he became Bishop of Cleveland in 1921. During the World War he was a member of the National Catholic War Council, and since then he has been a leader in the Eucharistic movement.

He was born in Germany in 1866 and came to America in 1877.

House Resolution Demands Investigation Of School Board

An attempt was made yesterday to bring Congressional heavy artillery into the war over where Marian Anderson, colored contralto, will sing in Washington on Easter night, April 9.

Representative James P. McGranery, of Philadelphia, who represents the district in which Miss Anderson lives, introduced a resolution in the House calling for an investigation of the Board of Education. He accompanied it with a blast against the school system and the Daughters of the American Revolution for lack of Americanism in their alleged discrimination against the singer.

Mrs. Elise Z. Watkins, secretary of the Board of Education, reported that no further proposals had been submitted for consideration of the board at its next meeting, Wednesday, April 5. A resolution reported passed by a citizens committee Sunday afternoon, asking the board to reconsider the form of its permission, she said, had not been received.

Still Seek School

Charles H. Houston, former dean of the Howard University law school, and chairman of the Marian Anderson citizens committee, called a meeting of the committee last night at the Phyllis Wheatley branch of the Y. W. C. A. He reported efforts would continue to be made to obtain use of Central High School—minus the conditions imposed by the board at its last meeting. Alternative suggestions include holding the concert at the Lincoln Memorial, the Water Gate, or in a bandstand.

Representative McGranery's resolution is expected to go to the House District Committee, and the action on it is uncertain. It calls for appointment of a special committee to investigate the Board of Education's procedure in allowing public meetings in school buildings.

"These things should be made known in the light of the shameful manner in which the School Board has conducted itself since a controversy has arisen over securing a place for Miss Marian Anderson to sing on Easter Sunday night, April 9," he said. ". . . it seems more than appropriate that the Congress should find out what perversion of the rights guaranteed each citizen under the Constitution regardless of race, creed, or color, has been practiced by the District of Columbia Board of Education."

D. A. R. Attacked

Referring to the refusal of the Daughters of the American Revolution to permit Miss Anderson to sing in Constitution Hall, Representative McGranery suggested that "our great and humanitarian First Lady would be fully justified in refusing to receive the Daughters of the American Revolution at the White House when they meet in Washington for their annual convention."

"The time has come," he added, "when the Daughters of the American Revolution should be made to realize that if they want to enjoy the privileges and honors of this democracy they should measure those with whom they deal in the same manner as they would be measured."

Maritime Commission Official to Resign

Marshall L. Wilcox, director of the Maritime Commission's division of operations and traffic, said yesterday he had submitted his resignation to become effective April 8.

Wilcox said he was leaving the commission to return to the United Fruit Co., of which he formerly was assistant to the vice president.

Girls' School Appeal Denied By Zone Board

Application to Build Apartment House Is Also Turned Down

The Board of Zoning Adjustment yesterday acted to prevent establishment of a girls' finishing school and an apartment house in two exclusive residential areas.

The appeal of Mrs. Dorothy Sterling to convert the property at 2134 Kalorama road northwest into a girls' school, and the appeal of Mrs. Grace Sturtevant to convert the old Sturtevant mansion at 2110 Leroy place into an apartment house, were turned down by the board.

Last week a representative of the French Embassy appeared at the public hearing to protest establishment of the school.

In other decisions handed down by the board the Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co. was given permission to build a parking lot at Twenty-second and C streets northwest; parking lot for Sibley Hospital at 28 M street northwest, and construction of four-story apartments in the 1400 block of Euclid street northwest.

Council Session Deferred

The annual meeting of the Washington Council of Social Agencies has been postponed from April 10 to April 24, Mrs. W. A. Rogers, secretary, announced yesterday.

Reciprocal Security Taxes Considered

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, yesterday revealed he would meet today with departmental and Congressional experts to decide whether to propose legislation at this time for reciprocal taxation of Government, State and municipal securities.

If such a move is agreed upon, he will offer an amendment authorizing the securities tax to the House bill for reciprocal taxation of salaries.

This bill is now on the Senate calendar, but has been held up up by amendments offered to impose heavy penalty taxes on imports of foreign vegetable oils. Secretary of State Hull is opposing the tax proposals on the ground that they would interfere with the State Department's reciprocal trade program.

Brown, who is chairman of the special Senate committee investigating the question of reciprocal taxation, expressed doubt whether he would sponsor securities taxation legislation.

Notwithstanding the decision handed down by the Supreme Court Monday permitting reciprocal taxation of salaries, it is generally agreed that before reciprocal taxation of securities will be possible, the court will have to rule expressly that such taxation would be constitutional.

Effort to provide for reciprocal taxation of securities would encounter a hard fight, Senate leaders believe.

Rhodes Awaits Ruling on Plea For Acquittal

U. S. Closes Testimony Banker-Lawyer Swore To False Statement

Fred B. Rhodes, former president of the closed Fidelity Building & Loan Association, today awaited Justice Adkins' ruling on whether he must defend himself against the perjury indictment on which he is being tried or whether the jury will be instructed to acquit him.

The Government yesterday closed its testimony that Rhodes knowingly swore to a false report of the financial condition of the institution, with testimony that certain accounts appeared to have been juggled. The report is alleged to have misrepresented the books to show a surplus when there was a deficit.

Rhodes' counsel immediately moved that the jury be ordered to set the elderly banker-lawyer free, urging that the Government had not proved Rhodes knew the report was false.

Assistant District Attorney Wilson late yesterday began a reply, analyzing evidence of the Government, which included testimony that certain questioned accounts were found in Rhodes desk when they ought to have been at the association. Wilson is expected to finish his argument today.

Attorneys William E. Richardson and William E. Leahy are defending Rhodes.

Parks for Public Began in U. S., Rotary Hears

National parks for the public are an original American idea, Col. John R. White, acting chief of operations of the National Park Service, told the Washington Rotary Club yesterday at a luncheon in the Willard Hotel.

Parks in other countries, he said, formerly were the privilege of the aristocracies. Parks for the people were first urged by Judge Cornelius Hedges, who in 1870 insisted the Yellowstone should not be commercialized, but be a "heritage for all Americans."

Col. White was introduced by Albert W. Atwood, financial writer for the Saturday Evening Post.

Indiana Serologist Develops Speedy, Low-Cost Syphilis Test

Dr. Mazzini's Method Requires Only 4 Minutes; 2 Cents Worth of Beef and Egg Extract Enough for 300 Diagnoses

By the Associated Press.

Indianapolis, March 29.—Development of a new high-speed, low-cost blood test for syphilis was announced today by Dr. Verne K. Harvey, Indiana State health commissioner.

It was developed by L. Y. Mazini, chief serologist in the State Board of Health laboratory, and will be known as the Mazzini test.

Dr. Harvey said wide usage of the new test is expected, explaining that three and one-half years of experimentation had showed it to be highly accurate, fast and relatively lower in cost than those heretofore used.

The test requires only four minutes after preparation of the antigen (test solution) and the serum from blood to be used, he said.

Base of the test is beef heart and egg yolk extract, he said, and 300 tests can be made at a total cost of less than 2 cents for these ingredients.

The Mazzini test was found to be 86.8 per cent accurate in official tests on 207 known cases, Dr. Harvey added.

Development of the test is announced to the medical profession in the current issue of the American Journal of Clinical Pathology.

Reich's Excuse 'Insults U. S.,' Says Hurban

Thomsen Explanation Of Seizure Assailed By Czech Minister

Hans Thomsen, Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, offered "an unprecedented insult" to American intelligence when he gave reasons in an interview for the occupation of Czecho-Slovakia on which "an American high school student would not pass his examination," Col. Vladimir Hurban, Czecho-Slovakian Minister, said yesterday. He spoke at a National Press Club luncheon.

Col. Hurban reiterated his determination not to surrender the Czecho-Slovak Legation to Germany. He affirmed his determination to continue carrying "the banner of the Czecho-Slovak republic as it was created under the leadership of President-Liberator Masaryk and his successor, Dr. Eduard Benes."

"The interview of the German charge d'affaires, Herr Thomsen, published in yesterday's papers," Hurban said, "is an unprecedented insult to the intelligence of the people of the United States. Maintaining that Prague was an ancient Germanic city, that Charles IV, King of Bohemia and Emperor of the Holy Roman Empire, was a German emperor, that he founded a German university at Prague, is an example of the insidious methods used by the present regime in Germany."

In answer to a question, he prophesied that "we will come out of the German stomach just as we went in; digestion will not be possible." To another questioner, who wanted to know what proportion of the Czech population would go along with the German invaders, he replied, "I have no Gallup poll on that."

Col. Hurban rejected as "too preposterous to consider" any suggestion that he turn over his legation to a representative of the government set up by Hitler in the Slovak province of the former republic. He inisted he still represented in the United States the Czecho-Slovak Republic "as it was recognized by the United States and other principal countries even before the Treaty of Versailles."

Among those who heard him were James Clement Dunn, State Department adviser on political relations; Jay Pierrepont Moffat, chief of its Division of European Affairs, and Michael McDermott, chief of the Division of Current Information, and Supreme Court Justice William O. Douglas.

ian-French relations was frequently disturbed.

Berlin (Thursday), March 30 (AP). Premier Daladier's address received only scant attention in the Berlin morning press today. Most papers devoted their prominent space to developments in Spain.

Reichsfuehrer Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter devoted 110 words to the Daladier speech under the headline "Daladier Warms Up an Obsolete Theme." None of the papers commented editorially.

Lokal Anzeiger's headline said, "Daladier's Answer: No! All Concessions Toward Italy Rejected in Radio Speech."

London, March 29 (AP).—Britain welcomed the speech of Premier Daladier as showing French determination not to be intimated in the least by German threats or Italian claims.

There was no official comment immediately.

The Daily Herald, Labor, said the speech "surprised even the French politicians in its challenging ring."

Although Daladier "did not close the door to negotiations" with Italy he left "only a crack open," the paper added.

Ljubljana, Yugoslavia, March 29 (AP).—Reports circulating here tonight said Germany was seeking to establish four more consular offices in northern Slovenia, a region of Yugoslavia in which pro-German propaganda has taken a sharp upward swing in the last few weeks.

Yugoslav authorities obviously were concerned by the growth of agitation in certain Slovenian communities for annexation to Germany.

France Rejects Italy's Demands for Territorial Concessions But Leaves Way Open to Mussolini for Further Discussion

'We Will Not Cede a Foot of Our Land Nor One of Our Rights,' Daladier Warns in Broadcast

Daladier

I invite to confident collaboration all the powers which think as we do, all those who, like us, are ready to persevere in the paths of peace, but which would rise together in a single rush in the face of aggression.

"I know that these words, which have defined the position of France, will find a fraternal echo in the friendly nations across Europe, beyond the channel and beyond the Atlantic."

Daladier's address was broadcast in French over all stations in France and her North African possesions and was relayed throughout the world later in Italian, German, English, Spanish, Portuguese and Arabic.

Yield No Territory

While inviting Italy to submit her demands on France, he insisted his nation would yield no territory to satisfy Fascist ambitions, and that France possessed the strength to defend her rights.

Italy's official reaction was awaited for an indication of whether the address would mark a step toward reconciliation between Paris and Rome.

Daladier said the French-Italian accords signed in Rome January 7, 1935, "were destined to 'settle definitely' and 'liquidate' the questions between the two countries."

Pacts Never Questioned

The pacts never were questioned, he said, until Italy's note of last December 17 informing France that Italy "no longer considered these accords of 1935 as valid."

Then he referred to Mussolini's Sunday speech which said the French-Italian colonial problems were Tunisia, French protectorate in North Africa; Djibouti, French terminus of the French-owned railway into Italy's Ethiopia, and the Suez Canal, controlled largely by a French company.

After offering to examine any proposals made on these issues, Daladier denied there was any mistreatment of Italians living in Tunisia.

French Strength Stressed

Daladier stressed French strength in the present "international crisis." He said this strength was, "finally, the friendships of France, those which consecrate our accords and those which spontaneously associate her with free peoples and peoples who suffer."

"Pacific and powerful France can regard the future with confidence," he concluded.

Foreign Minister Bonnet followed up the Premier's address by publishing the text of the Italian note.

Mussolini and King Vittorio Emanuele of Italy asserted last week that the Italian claims were set forth in the note, while the French have insisted it presented no specific demands.

Ratification Denied

The letter, addressed to the French Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet, in Rome by Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano, cited the failure of the French Parliament to ratify the 1935 accord, lack of a special statute for Italians in Tunisia carrying out that part of the pact, and France's joining in League of Nations economic sanctions against Italy in the Ethiopian war as reasons for denouncing the treaty.

The note concluded:

"Moreover, the constitution of the (Italian) Empire has created new rights and new interests of fundamental importance. In these conditions and in the very interests of their improvement, Italo-French relations could not still have for their base at the present hour the accord of 1935, and precisely if it is wished to improve them, it is evident that these relations must be examined anew by a common accord between the two governments."

French Answer

The French reply of December 25, also published, made three points:

France has undertaken execution of the 1935 pact by handing over 2,500 shares of the Djibouti-Addis Ababa Railway Co. to Italy despite the absence of formal ratification of the accord.

The French government had undertaken to "facilitate the improvement of relations" between the two countries, notably by recognizing the Italian conquest of Ethiopia and sending an ambassador to Rome after that recognition.

Italy knew of the "international obligations" which required French imposition of League of Nations sanctions on the Fascist regime during the Ethiopian conquest.

The French note said the government did not wish to "discuss the consequences" which the Italian note could have, but simply was recalling these facts in acknowledging reception of the Italian note.

Daladier, speaking from his desk in the war office, began:

"It is above all as a man that I, chief of the government responsible for the policies of France, wish to address myself to the French and beyond the frontiers of my country to all those throughout the world who have a loyal and generous heart.

Language of the Heart

"There is a language which has no need of translation to be understood by all! It is the language of the heart. . . .

"Each one of us wonders if his country is not menaced, if his neighbors are sure. This uncertainty obliges governments to take measures and precautions. Treaties are signed, but before even being put into effect they exist no longer—for some as a guarantee for others as an obstacle.

"Those who do not act feel themselves accomplices of force and those who act fear to provoke force.

"Everywhere the frenzy of armaments destroys all other activities. . . .

"What France wants? It is peace for free men.

"The strength if France? It is her material and moral unity realized once more in the face of peril.

"The resolution of France? It is to defend her ideals and rights. . . .

". . . Never has France been more united, never has she been more resolute, never has she been stronger."

France, he said, has realized that a "great effort" was necessary and has accomplished it.

Thus he referred to the voting of decree powers to his government to put the nation to work on defense measures.

France, he declared, has gone to work, and the international crisis does not find her weak. Her financial and economic situation has improved, her production has increased, Daladier said, and gold is flowing back from abroad.

He demanded and was given the decree powers, the premier said, because "it was necessary to act and not deliberate" and because it was necessary to take exceptional measures for the country's defense "with rapidity and in silence."

No Frenchman has failed to respond to the government's call for sacrifices, Daladier said, "because everyone knows France is a just country and does not base its demands for defense on the misery of its sons."

Saying his government has taken military as well as economic measures, he claimed, "our strength is greater than ever in the past."

"Pacific and powerful France can regard the future with confidence," he continued.

"Why not face the problems squarely? The whole world is waiting this evening for me to speak on Franco-Italian relations. I shall speak of them with the greatest frankness, or rather, I shall have only to let the facts speak for themselves.

"To put an end to misunderstandings too long prolonged, Franco-Italian accords were signed at Rome January 7, 1935. They were destined to 'settle definitely' and 'liquidate' the questions between the two countries.

"It is only by letter on the date of last December 17 that Count Ciano informed us that he no longer considered these accords of 1935 as valid.

"Last Sunday Mussolini said in his own terms:

Want World Informed

"'We do not ask the world to judge, but we want the world to be informed. Now in the Italian note of December 17, 1938, were clearly established the Italian problems concerning France, problems of a colonial character. These problems have a name. They are called Tunisia, Djibouti and the Suez Canal.'

"The reference to the letter of December 17 let it be believed, in fact, that this document contained the Italian claims with clarity . . .

"The essential argument," in the Italian note, he said, is that "the conquest of Ethiopia and constitution of the Italian empire created new rights for Italy.

"I have no need to say we cannot accept this argument. What does it mean, in fact? It means that these new conquests or each new concession would open new rights. Thus the demands which could be presented to us would be practically without limit, since each one of them once satisfied would bring future demands.

"Faithful to the accords she signed in 1935, France is ready to pursue their complete and loyal execution. In the spirit and equivalence of these accords on the bases that I have defined and that I have just recalled, she would not refuse to examine propositions that may be made to her.

"Since I speak of Franco-Italian relations I wish also to clear up legends that have arisen on the status of the 94,000 Italians who live in Tunisia with 108,000 French and nearly two and a half million Moslems. It is pretended the Italians are maltreated or even persecuted. These are fables. On the contrary, they benefit in all domains of a most liberal regime for them as well as for their children. Foreigners of all nationalities who live in Tunisia have often given proof of this.

"I wish also, since I speak of Tunisia, to address my cordial greetings to the noble Moslem populations . . .

"They may have the certainty that France will remain always their faithful and vigilant protector . . .

"With regard to another great neighboring people with whom we have had so many conflicts, France has not ceased to give evidence of her good will.

"We signed the Munich accords, and several months later a Franco-German declaration. Several days ago, animated by the spirit of this declaration, we sent a mission to Berlin to negotiate an economic accord, an indispensable base for establishment of lasting collaboration.

Heavy Blow to Peace

"But as I said to the Senate, the conquest of Czecho-Slovakia and the occupation of Prague by the German army gave the heaviest blow to these patient efforts . . ."

"If Franco-British collaboration . . . is as full as it is at the present hour, it is because France and Great Britain have similar thoughts on all these problems. They pursue the same goals by the same means.

"I can then hope that all reasonable men, and there are some in all countries, will heed this language of reason. They will remember that it is free from menace and that it seeks the humiliation of no one. They will see in it the proof that France puts all her strength intact and ardent in the service of peace.

"As for France—our fatherland—nothing will swerve her from the destiny she has freely chosen with the clear knowledge of her right and strength.

"Once more she wishes to show the world what work can do when it has no other goal than to serve the dignity of men, what courage can do when it knows no other guide than justice, what the spirit of sacrifice can do when it is accepted only for the safety of liberty."

Poles Confer With Berlin On Danzig

Poland

German negotiations be undertaken to settle the status of the city.

The government news agency today distributed a statement that an understanding with Germany over Danzig was possible because "our people can understand vital interests of neighbors"

German Ambassador Von Moltke assured Foreign Minister Beck yesterday that Poland had nothing to fear from Germany.

At the same time, it was stressed that Poland will oppose "by all means" outright German annexation of the port.

It has been persistently reported that Germany had suggested negotiations on outright cession of Danzig to Germany without reference to the League, a sovereign German motor road across the Polish corridor connecting East Prussia with Germany proper, increased Polish trade to Germany and Polish adherence to the anti-comintern pact.

Beck to Go to London

It was especially stressed that Poland, due to her policy of maintaining strict impartiality between Berlin and Moscow would not listen to German soundings that she join the pact aimed at the Communist International.

At the same time, sources close to the government reiterated that Poland had not received an ultimatum or "anything resembling an ultimatum" from Germany in regard to the Danzig discussions.

[Col. Boguslaw Miedzinski, marshal of the Polish Senate, however, told the parliamentary group today Poland had rejected German demands for concessions in Danzig, according to International News Service.—Editor's note.]

Foreign Minister Beck will leave for London at the end of the week where it is expected he will hear more of Britain's reported proposals for a military alliance.

While Poland proceeded quietly with her military preparations three persons were arrested on charges of spreading "war scare reports." They were sentenced to a month in jail.

Polish military preparations were said by one foreign diplomat to be continuing so that Poland can "have just as big a revolver on the table as the Nazis."

Britain Puts Militia on Wartime Basis

Army Increased to 793,000; Conscription Is Ruled Out

By the Associated Press.

London, March 29.—Prime Minister Chamberlain today advanced his "Halt Hitler" movement by announcing a vast increase in Britain's military manpower, but ruled out conscription to obtain this gain.

He told the House of Commons that the nation's territorial army, similar to the United States National Guard, would be doubled to a total of 340,000 men, and indicated the territorial army henceforth would be on a wartime basis.

Then, in a significant phrase, he rejected conscription for the time being at least, saying: "We believe we can demonstrate the possibilities of voluntary service to meet all our needs." Conscription has become one of the country's major issues.

Some members of Chamberlain's own Conservative Party had wanted conscription, but the announcement that the government had decided against it was welcomed by the opposition, which promised support for the recruiting campaign necessary to swell the territorial army.

The prime minister also announced that 38 divisions would be made ready to fight in any war involving Britain on the continent instead of the 19 divisions the war office previously had announced would be sent.

French Hail Statement

This statement was received jubilantly in French diplomatic quarters, where is was hailed as a step which might give the two democratic powers the lead necessary in European politics.

The plan for increasing the territorial army calls for increasing its present actual strength of 130,000 men to the wartime strength of 170,000, and then doubling it.

War office informants said this would bring the total of Britain's land forces under arms to about 793,000 men.

This includes the regular army of 204,287 men, a reserve of 139,312, a supplementary reserve of 35,037 and anti-aircraft units totaling 74,799.

The central council of territorial army associations directed that the new setup be put into effect immediately. Instructions were telegraphed tonight to all units.

Defensive Expansion Forecast

Chamberlain forecast further expansion of the Nation's 1939-40 defense program, for which estimates already have exceeded the $2,500,000,000 mark.

He refused to disclose results, if any, of intense diplomatic negotiations among Britain, France, Poland, Soviet Russia and others on the "Halt Hitler" program.

Parliamentary circles, however, said his political strength, which had been on the wane after Hitler's dissolution of Czecho-Slovakia, was now reviving sharply.

This was indicated by the fact that more than 150 pro-government members signed an amendment to a motion which had asked for a broader government and conscription of industry and manpower. The amendment expressed "complete confidence" in Chamberlain and deprecated any attempt "to undermine confidence in the prime minister." Many members predicted that the motion, of which former Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden was a leading sponsor, would not even reach a vote.

Heart of Cuba's Ex-President Machado Fails Under Ether After Surviving War, Revolt

67-Year-Old Fighter Dies in Operation For Large Cancer

By the Associated Press.

Miami Beach, Fla., March 29.—The stout heart that carried Gen. Gerardo Machado, deposed dictator-President of Cuba, through revolt, riot and attempted assassination failed him on an operating table today as five physicians strove vainly to prevent his death from cancer.

Living here in exile, the 67-year-old fighter Sunday entered a hospital for observation preparatory to an operation for removal of a tumor that was affecting his liver.

Dr. Jose Navarro said he and four physicians who came from Havana had sought to remove the big abdominal growth and added:

"We have been keeping quiet about it, but Gen. Machado had been suffering from cancer. He had been in a serious condition for some time. His heart failed while he was under the anesthetic."

The widow, Mrs. Elvira Machado, went to the hospital with her three daughters, Mrs. Baldomero Grau y Triana, Mrs. Jose Emilio Obregon and Mrs. Rafael Sanchez.

She was overcome by shock at the development in spite of advance warnings it might be expected. She was taken home under care of a physician.

Besides these relatives, the general is survived by a brother, Carlos, and five grandchildren.

Machado, born in Santa Clara, the son of a colonel, entered the Cuban independence movement at an early age, started his military career when he was 22, won two citations for bravery and came out of Cuba's successful fight for freedom for Spain a brigadier general.

He was elected president of Cuba in 1925 when a sugar surplus and declining markets troubled the island. Over the years, an election, strikes, riots and revolts failed to unseat him and attempts to assassinate him failed. But on August 12, 1933, Machado had to flee Havana by plane in the face of a revolt by the army. He had depended on the soldiers and his secret police for the stern discipline he maintained over Cuba. It was reported his baggage included a well filled "Treasure Chest."

Recently in an interview, he described his political philosophy: "The Cuban people need a firm hand."

That was his creed as President of Cuba. As an exile here, he lived and looked like a retired businessman—gray and bespectacled.

Von Steuben Bill Disapproved, 9-6

By the Associated Press.

The House Immigration Committee, by a vote of 9 to 6, refused yesterday to approve a bill to admit to this country for permanent residence collateral descendants of Baron von Steuben, a drill master of Gen. Washington's Revolutionary Army.

Representative Mason (Republican), Illinois, urged approval of the bill, which would permit the entry of Anne-Marie von Steuben Rosenberg, her son, Juergen, and her husband, Hugo Rosenberg, German citizens living in Italy.

Objecting to the measure, Representative Allen (Democrat), Louisiana, said "we have great respect for the name of Von Steuben but we didn't all come over on the Mayflower."

Reich Protestant Heads Clear Way for Nazifying of Church

Two Decrees Provide for Removal of Recalcitrant Pastors and Permit Church Members to Choose Minister of Their Liking

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, March 29.—Two sweeping orders by the president of the Evangelical Church Council today advanced the process of nazifying German protestantism.

One decree by Dr. Friedrich Werner, the president, provided that any church member could choose some pastor other than the regular minister for the performance of "the individual duties of his office, for religious instruction or even for his entire churchly ministration."

The other provided that a pastor could be removed from his church against his will if it seemed desirable to redistrict parishes or "if he can no longer conduct his office within his congregation in an advantageous manner or if the preservation of order in his congregation so demands."

German protestantism long has been split by those who favor Nazi control of church affairs and those who oppose it. Today's decrees opened the way for the elimination of recalcitrants and their replacement by churchmen who will conform to Nazi concepts.

All that now is necessary gradually to bring an Evangelical Church under Nazi control is for a group of parishioners to demand that they be assigned a minister to their liking and of their spiritual faith and for the supreme church council later to declare the incumbent no longer able to perform his duties to the advantage of the church.

The Evangelical Church was the state church under the Hohenzollerns and comprises most of the Lutheran Reformed and United churches.

Senators Vote Public Hearing On Neutrality

Committee Rejects Executive Session and Move to Bar Testimony

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday ordered public hearings next week on six conflicting proposals for revising or repealing the neutrality act, overruling a move to act without hearings.

By a vote of 11 to 8, the committee rejected a motion to proceed without testimony, and later turned down viva voce a suggestion that the committee hear witnesses in executive session.

Final action, approving public hearings beginning next Wednesday in the spacious Senate caucus room, was unanimous.

Both Chairman Key Pittman and Senate Majority Leader Barkley are understood to have argued against any public committee procedure that might disturb the international situation.

Draw Up Plans Today

A three-man sub-committee, comprising Pittman, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, was directed to arrange a schedule of witnesses. Pittman said the subcommittee will meet this morning to perfect plans for the hearings.

Neutrality act proposals before the committee range from Pittman's own amendment to permit any nation to purchase arms and munitions in this country on a "cash-and-carry" basis to the Nye-Clark-Bone bill to make "cash-and-carry" provisions mandatory on all commodities except arms, ammunition and implements of war, which could not be sold to belligerents at all.

Senator Lewis (Democrat), of Illinois, and Senator King (Democrat), of Utah, have measures for outright repeal of neutrality legislation before the committee. The Lewis bill would give the President broad authority to conduct foreign relations by executive orders.

Another amendment by Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, would empower the President to designate the "aggressor" in event of war, to embargo shipments to that nation, and, with the consent of Congress, to exempt the victims of aggression from neutrality act restrictions.

Called Logical Approach

The so-called "mandatory neutrality" bloc has two measures pending. One by Senator Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, would ban shipment of arms in peace or war, and another by Nye, Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, and Bone (Democrat), of Washington, would give Congress as well as the President power to invoke the neutrality act, and would strengthen the embargo on shipment of munitions to belligerents.

Administration interest appeared to center on the Pittman amendment, permitting belligerents to purchase arms in this country if they paid cash and carried the cargo in their own ships. Although opening trade in munitions to all nations, it would operate in effect to the trade benefit of countries in control of the seas, notably Britain and France. While there have been no State Department commitments, Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles recently called it a logical approach to the neutrality problem.

Cash and carry provisions of the present law, which permit purchase of commodities, other than munitions, designated by the President, expire May 1. Pittman said he expects neutrality hearings to continue for two weeks and said new legislation should be ready for Congress before May 1 expiration of cash-and-carry sections.

Both Secretary of State Hull and Undersecretary Welles are expected to appear before the committee to outline the Administration's attitude toward revision of the law, while representatives of peace organizations were expected to testify for strengthening provisions.

Meanwhile, Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, acting chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, called a meeting of that group to hear a discussion of the international situation by American Ambassador to Spain Claude Bowers.

$1,500 Is Awarded To Crash Victim

A jury in District Court yesterday awarded Holloway Furrow, 59-year-old printing pressman, $1,500 in his suit against George C. Slicer, of 2918 Twelfth street northwest, for damages received in September, 1936, in a collision near Waldorf, Md. Furrow asked $25,000 for injuries to himself and damages to his automobile.

The jury returned a verdict in Furrow's favor in suits for damages brought by Slicer and his wife. The trial opened Monday, Justice Peyton Gordon presiding. Furrow was represented by Harlan Wood.

Latin America Taking Action AgainstNaziism

Argentina and Brazil Tighten Control Over Foreign Culture Schools

The Pan-American Union, in a survey of Latin American educational trends, said yesterday Argentina and Brazil had taken steps to curb dissemination of German propaganda.

It said control over private schools, especially those associated with foreign cultural organizations, had been tightened considerably in several Latin American republics, notably Argentina, Brazil and Peru.

In Argentina, it said, public opinion was aroused in 1938 by reports that foreign ideological and political propaganda was being spread in about 200 elementary and secondary provincial schools.

"These schools enrolled in 1936 nearly 15,000 children, 90 per cent of whom were of German descent, but born in Argentina," the report said. "Some of the schools were either directly or indirectly connected with the Deutsche Volksbund, an organization with branches in many Latin American countries.

"In response to popular demand, the Argentine ministry of education made an investigation of these schools and shortly thereafter a decree was issued subjecting their activities to strict regulation."

In Brazil, it said, regulatory measures have been enacted not only by the federal government, but also by several states.

"In the states of Santa Catharina, Rio Grande do Sul and Sao Paulo, populated heavily by Germans," it added, "instruction in foreign languages and the teaching of foreign political and social ideals has been prohibited."

The report said also strict regulations governing the activities of foreign-controlled private schools have been enacted in Peru. However, it mentioned no nation against whom these regulations were aimed.

food stores and other purposes by republicans.

Sandbags came away from doors and windows. Shuttered stores began repoening. Traffic resumed a semblance of the normal flow as temporary police took charge pending arrival of civil guards.

Despite the city's war damage, estimated unofficially at $500,000,000, the capital began planning an elaborate welcome for Franco's personal entry, expected before the end of the week.

Heavy explosions were heard throughout the day as Nationalist sappers blew up mines, bombs and shells which reminded the populace of the long siege that left approximately one-third of the city's 200,000 buildings destroyed or badly damaged, and another third slightly damaged.

Double Rations Given

Double rations of bread and the sight of food trucks dimmed memories of hunger and siege.

The traditional Capital already had begun to think about rebuilding. The National Reconstruction Service plastered walls with placards urging Madrilenos to dedicate all efforts to this task.

Celebrations which started with Madrid's capitulation yesterday were renewed today as throngs of bright-faced boys and girls raised cheers in unison. Loud-speakers blared Spanish and Falangist anthems interspersed with American favorites such as "St. Louis Blues" and "Honey."

Valencia, largest republican city after the fall of Madrid, was taken over by nationalists at 1 p. m. (7 a. m. E.S.T.) without disorder. Two planes flying low gave the signal and Franco sympathizers immediately thronged into the streets giving the Fascist salute and shouting "Viva Franco!"

Nationalist troops entered at 4:55 p. m. (10:55 a. m., E. S. T.)

Other Towns Fall

The Murcia radio said "There is complete normalcy in the city. Streets are filled with people wildly acclaiming Franco. All balconies are decked with flags. Murcia is for Spain and Franco."

A message from Jaen said "Falangist units have risen and taken the capital where the enthusiasm is enormous."

Guadalajara, scene of one of the bitterest battles of the civil war, fell into the hands of Gen. Munoz Grande with little resistance.

Franco's armies expected to occupy Alicante tonight and five other provincial capitals—Ciudad Real, Cuenca, Jaen, Almeria, and Murcia—before dawn.

News of the war's official ending came as hundreds of nationalists towns and villages were celebrating the fall of Madrid. New impromptu parades were started, celebrating peace by singing nationalist anthems and shouting Franco's name.

Victory Gladdens Vatican

Vatican City, March 29 (AP).—The Vatican newspaper L'Osservatore Romano said editorially today that the victory of "Catholic Spain" had brought "incalculable moral and political support to Europe," and added: "All who followed the war with Christian and human sentiments cannot but greet the event with a feeling of gratitude to God that Spain (is) returning to respect and to the ancient teaching, to the heroic faith of her fathers . . ."

fingerprints on file. The prints will be filed by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

The Navy Department said it has a similar order under study.

Plans for the "mosquito" boat program were announced in connection with awards in a design competition among shipbuilders. A total of $95,500 was distributed in prize awards among designers of two types of submarine chasers and two designs of motor patrol boats.

The sub chasers would be modernized versions of the World War type. They will carry torpedoes, depth charges, undersea listening devices, antiaircraft guns and 3 to 5 inch batteries.

One function of the small patrol boat is to race up under the guns of large warships and launch a torpedo.

Awards were made to 14 designers, and it was announced that bids will be invited on nearly all of them shortly. By this means a number of private firms will be equipped to turn to mass production of the ships in wartime. Last year's naval expansion bill authorized expenditure of $15,000,000 for development of the small boats.

In the World War frantic demands were made by seacoast cities for protection, and it is expected the construction of large flotillas of the patrol craft will lessen the pressure for detaching vessels from the main fleet for coast defense.

The Navy also announced yesterday the award of two contracts totaling $1,534,915 for airplanes and spare parts to the Douglas Aircraft Co., of California.

Army to Halt All Leaves of Air Officers

Vacations Will Be Curtailed Till Aerial Corps Is Expanded

It will be nose to the grindstone and no time off to play for Army air officers during the next year or two. No extended fishing trips or Newport vacations. No Florida sunshine next winter. Just work, work and more work.

This situation became known yesterday as the War Department revealed it was drafting orders to curtail all leave during the period of the Air Corps expansion. While the instructions are not yet drafted, officials said that leaves of absence probably will not be allowed except in emergencies until the program is completed.

As the Air Corps is to be more than doubled within the next 24 months, both in planes and personnel, all its officers will be working overtime on procurement and training. The task ahead will practically parallel war-time mobilization, it was said.

Officers graduating from service schools this June and those returning from duty overseas are particularly affected by the move. Leaves of a month or two are usually granted to officers transferring from school duty to a new assignment, while those returning from the Philippines or China are encouraged by Military Intelligence to come home by way of Europe. Valuable information is often obtained in this way.

While several other branches of the Army will have their hands full during the expansion program, notably the Ordnance, Signal Corps and Coast Artillery, officials said the leave order will probably not be applied to them. Local commanding officers undoubtedly will greatly restrict absences of officers of these branches, but the War Department contemplates no special instructions in their case, it was said.

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES
This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief
Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.
The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.
Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.
An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.
Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Senate Cotton Bloc Rejects Export Subsidy

Agrees on Smith Plan for Direct Aid to Growers

By Robert C. Albright.

A Senate cotton bloc yesterday turned thumbs down on the President's cotton export subsidy plan and agreed on a counter-move in the Senate today for direct cotton subsidies to American farmers.

A meeting of the Senate Agriculture Committee was set for this morning to consider the cotton group's answer to the White House proposals.

"The Senate is not going to vote to give our loan cotton to foreigners," declared Senator Smith (Democrat), South Carolina, following yesterday's conference.

Alternative Plan

The alternative plan to be laid before the Agriculture Committee today involves splitting Smith's own cotton bill into two parts.

One measure would give the domestic cotton farmer 3 cents a pound subsidy on cotton he sells, in return for an agreement not to seek Government loans. The second bill would permit the farmer to repossess between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 bales of Government loan cotton at 3 cents a pound, if he cuts his own production proportionately.

Senator Smith, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, and Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, explained the new strategy following a conference of a half-dozen Senators from cotton States.

George said his plan is to lay aside his resolution placing the Senate on record against the export subsidy plan if the Senate agrees to consider the revised Smith bill.

"We don't want to take negative action at this time," said George. "This new procedure under the Smith bill will provide affirmative means of relieving the cotton surplus situation without resort to export subsidies."

Meantime Senator Russell (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Senate Agriculture Appropriations sub-committee, announced he will reintroduce in the Senate the $250,000,000 parity price amendment to the farm appropriation bill, which was eliminated Tuesday by the House.

Russell said the Senate farm parity price amendment will be jointly sponsored by Senator Bankhead. If the Senate fails to add the $250,000,000 to the agricultural appropriation bill, the Georgian declared it will be offered as a rider on the 1940 relief bill.

Linked to WPA Cut

The parity price payments were defeated in the House when urban members, angered at rural opposition to the President's $150,000,000 relief estimates, joined forces with a bipartisan economy coalition.

With both the parity item and the WPA relief outlay combined in one measure, he said the rural and urban groups are more likely to co-operate.

A less happy solution appeared in prospect for the conflicting cotton surplus plans advanced by the President and Senator Smith. While opposition to export subsidies threatened Senate defeat of the President's proposal, agriculture committee opposition to the Smith bill rendered House approval uncertain, even if the bill passes the Senate.

Some Senators conceded privately that an impasse might result, in which one measure would checkmate the other. In that case, cotton bloc hopes would lie in the $250,000,000 parity payment proposal, which makes about $100,000,000 available to cotton farmers.

The George resolution, originally slated for Senate consideration today, would make it the "sense" of the Senate that no cotton be sold below production cost. George freely admitted it was aimed at the President's export proposal. He agreed to lay it aside to give right-of-way only to the Smith direct subsidy plan.

George said he favored the "orderly marketing" of surplus cotton stores but declared himself "irrevocably opposed to paying a subsidy to foreign manufacturers" under the Administration's export plan.

Cotton Comes Back

"We have subsidized wheat in foreign trade, but when wheat goes abroad, it never comes back," said George. "It is eaten. But cotton enters into 60 odd articles and will come back to haunt the American manufacturer, the mill workers and the producer."

Smith's plan recently was opposed by the President as too costly. The South Carolinian declared that yesterday's revision of his measure would meet this criticism.

Smith estimated the cost of enabling farmers to repossess 3,000,000 bales of the 11,250,000-bale Government loan surplus, at $60,000,000, and the cost of paying direct subsidies to farmers on new cotton grown at $120,000,000, or a total of $180,000,000.

The President's export subsidy proposal, which would cost $60,000,000 to $90,000,000 a year, involves payment to farmers of $1.25 a bale to release cotton from Government loan, and a flat subsidy to cotton exporters of 1 to 2 cents a pound.

Backing the export subsidy plan, President Edward O'Neal, of the American Farm Bureau Federation, wrote every member of the Senate "that the use of export bounties can move commodities into world trade without lowering domestic market prices and at relatively moderate cost to the Government."

O'Neal charged opposition to the subsidy plan is coming chiefly from "cotton speculators including the foreign speculators and the American owners of gins, compressors and warehouses in Brazil." He urged Senators to oppose the George resolution, which he said would block the export of any loan cotton.

Export Plan Denounced

From Memphis, Tenn., Oscar Johnston, chairman of the National Cotton Council, denounced the President's cotton export proposal as "unfortunate to the farmer" and likely to encourage further subsidized competition from foreign governments.

Besides Senators Smith, Bankhead, George and Russell, those attending yesterday's Senate cotton bloc conference were Thomas, of Oklahoma; Overton, of Louisiana, and Stewart, of Tennessee (all Democrats). Smith said he will move to call up his domestic cotton subsidy plan in the Senate this afternoon. Thomas said he would fight the export proposal "to the limit of my endurance."

"The uncertainty as to what we are going to do has caused this vast drop in cotton exports," said Smith. "We want to remove that uncertainty."

Movies' Mystery Clubber Attacks Child Star; Youth Arrested as Police Study Fingerprints

Woman Belabors Assailant on Street With Golf Iron

By the United Press.

Hollywood, March 29.—Fingerprints on a black patent leather purse were examined today by police in hope they might help solve the murder of one actress and possibly fatal beating of another, 17-year-old Delia Bogart, attacked by a thug on a Hollywood street early today.

Police believed the same assailant attacked Miss Bogart, cast recently in a romantic role opposite Jackie Cooper, and Anya Sosoyeva, Russian dancer and drama student killed on the campus of Los Angeles City College last month.

In addition to the fingerprints, which were on Miss Bogart's purse found in a vacant lot 500 yards from the scene of the attack, investigators discovered clearly defined footprints at the base of a fence which the prowler apparently made when he vaulted the obstruction in flight.

Alphonso Jewells, 22, was held for questioning after his arrest on suspicion of assault with a deadly weapon during a disturbance in a cafe.

A heavy 2-by-4 club, exactly like that used in the assault on Miss Sosoyeva, was used by a "tall man in a gray topcoat" to fracture Miss Bogart's skull. The actress, familiar as Tomboy Taylor in the Mickey Maguire comedies of a few years ago, in which she played opposite Mickey Rooney, was able to give but a brief description of the attack before she lost consciousness.

"He jumped out of the shadow and hit me before I had a chance to shout."

The victim screamed and three women ran to her aid. One, Mrs. Laura Lee, seized a club from her husband's golf bag in the hall of her home and dashed into the street to find the attacker bent over his victim. Mrs. Lee lashed out at him with the club, striking him several times, and he ran away.

Physicians expressed hopes for the recovery of the young actress, who was returning home from a neighborhood movie when she was attacked.

Police found a close parallel in the methods of her assailant and those of the man who killed Miss Sosoyeva.

Similar weapons were used and left behind. A stealthy approach in a public place were features of each assault.

Capt. D. R. Patton of the homicide squad said he was convinced the same attacker struck down both women.

"Liberals" Hold Threat

The "urban-liberal" Democratic bloc of some 40 members, who defeated parity payments because the farm group would not promise to vote for $150,000,000 for WPA, will strive for the higher relief figure today without much hope of success. Unlike the situation Tuesday, they will no longer have Republicans and "economy" Democrats on their side. The one weapon they do hold, however, is the threat to the farm group that they will again defeat parity payments if that form of farm relief is restored to the agriculture bill by the Senate.

At the other extreme of the triple tug-of-war between "spenders," "moderates," and "savers" are some of the Southern Democrats and a large proportion of the Republicans. If the Southerners are angry enough over the loss—whether temporary or permanent—of parity payments, they may try to cut WPA funds even below $100,000,000. Some Southern members promised yesterday that they would propose an amendment to that effect.

The committee reported the bill in such a manner that the parliamentary situation in the House today will preclude a roll-call vote on the question of restoring the $150,000,000 appropriation.

Republican Statement

Although no minority report was issued by members of the Appropriations Committee, the four Republican members of the sub-committee that handled relief declared in a statement last night that the President and the WPA "have approached the matter from an arbitrary standpoint."

Signed by Representatives Taber, of New York; Wigglesworth, of Massachusetts; Lambertson, of Kansas, and Ditter, of Pennsylvania, the statement said that according to the figures supplied by Col. Harrington, WPA administrator, "an appropriation of $55,000,000 would permit him to carry forward the total employment recommended by the President, to the end of June, without any reductions at all."

House debate today will be enlivened by a speech on the appropriation by Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, who was "deposed" from acting chairmanship of the sub-committee handling relief because he was thought not to be sufficiently favorable to the $150,000,000 request. Woodrum, one of the most influential House Democrats, is expected to support the committee stand for $100,000,000.

President Off For Vacation at Warm Springs

To Make 3 Stops In Alabama Today; Hopkins With Him

By International News Service.

Aboard Presidential Train En Route to Warm Springs, Ga., March 29.—Putting behind him spirited Congressional battles over farm, relief and foreign policy issues, President Roosevelt tonight was speeding to his Southern retreat at Warm Springs, Ga., for 10 days of rest.

A series of last-minute conferences with Cabinet members and Congressional leaders occupied the Executive up to the moment he boarded the train.

Problems growing out of the termination of the Spanish civil war and proposals for drastic revision of the neutrality act were believed to have highlighted a brief conference with Secretary of State Hull.

Talks With Farley

Others who called at the White House included Postmaster General Farley, Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee; Chairman Wheeler, of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee; Senate Majority Leader Barkley, Chairman Norton, of the House Labor Committee; Chairman Sabath, of the House Rules Committee; Senator Green (Democrat), of Rhode Island, and Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California.

The discussions were reported to have embraced railroad, labor and relief legislation.

The President was in gay spirits on the train. With him were Secretary of Commerce Hopkins, who is recovering from an attack of intestinal flu, and members of the White House secretarial staff.

Three Stops in Alabama

The Presidential party will make three stops in Alabama, tomorrow. Mr. Roosevelt will speak informally at Tuskegee Institute in the morning and later at Auburn, at Alabama Polytechnic Institute. The third stop will be at Opelika, after which a motor caravan will continue to Warm Springs. Neither of the two addresses will be broadcast.

Mr. Roosevelt's journey to his "other home" at this time fulfills a pledge made at Thanksgiving, when he agreed to return there in the early spring to dedicate a school building and medical center at the Infantile Paralysis Foundation.

The brief Southern vacation is expected to clear up the head cold which the President has suffered for the last week.

Sherwood Mystery Play

The Sherwood High School dramatic society will present "The Case of the Laughing Dwarf," a mystery play, at the school auditorium in Sandy Spring, Md., tonight. The play is directed by Miss Eileen Canada.

Henderson Considered as Head of SEC

Hutchins Declined Douglas' Position, Says High Official

By the Associated Press.

A high Administration official said yesterday that Leon Henderson, economist and secretary of the Federal Monopoly Committee, would probably be appointed soon to the chairmanship of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

The official said the position, vacated by the nomination of William O. Douglas to the Supreme Court, had been offered to Robert M. Hutchins, president of the University of Chicago, but that Hutchins had declined.

Henderson said emphatically that he had not been offered the post.

However, friends recalled that when President Roosevelt appointed him to the NRA board in 1934, he knew nothing of the decision until after the appointment had been made public at the White House.

It was said that appointment of Henderson would fulfill two purposes: It would serve notice on Wall Street that the President was unalterably opposed to any major modification of Federal securities regulation. It would also be a reward for Henderson's devotion to the New Deal objectives for which the President has fought hardest.

The report that Henderson was in line for the job came while friends of Commissioner Jerome Frank were conducting a behind the scenes campaign for Frank's promotion to the chairmanship. Some of these friends said that if Frank were passed over he would probably resign from the commission.

Henderson has long been among the select few whose advice has carried much weight with the President. As an economist for NRA, the Democratic National Committee and the WPA, he has had one motto: Keep your eye on the consumer.

'Dodge City,' It Seems, Was a City to Dodge!

New Warner Film Is Best of the 'Westerns;' Mr. Pollock Stops by for Miss Lawrence; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

IT IS TOO BAD that Wyatt Earp, "Bat" Masterson, Alfred Henry Lewis and a few others of the old boys who were close to the rough-and-tumble cattle days in the West aren't still alive. They would get a terrific "bang" out of "Dodge City," the new Warner Brothers' Technicolor "Western" that was previewed yesterday afternoon by a full quota of drama desks.

BELL

In viewing the turbulent action unfolded during the considerable footage of this film—and it is sufficiently turbulent to make "Jesse James" and "The Oklahoma Kid" look like mere perliminary bouts in comparison—the conviction grew in the mind of at least one observer that the role of Wade Hatton, played by Errol Flynn, had been largely patterned after the actual career of Wyatt Earp, one of the most intrepid frontier sheriffs that ever lived.

The doughty and wiry Mr. Earp, with his shooting irons hazardously parked in his office, was wont to stride out across the town square and take the most venomous of the "bad men" to the hoosegow on a sheer basis of personal courage and a knowledge of human nature. Mr. Flynn does approximately the same thing in "Dodge City" and comes out a fine and handsome hero, who eventually "gets the girl"—whether Mr. Earp ever was mixed up in such romantic goings-on or not.

The reason I mentioned "Bat" Masterson and Alfred Henry Lewis, back there a block or two, was that "Bat"—later a fight writer on the old New York Telegraph—in those wild and wooly days shortly after the Civil War, also was a sheriff of the badlands who used to bring them in with his hands. Alfred Henry Lewis based his famous "Wolfville Tales" on much the same sort of tumultuous business as constitutes the basis and the raison d'etre of "Dodge City." It was this early association with the "Old West" that moved Alfred Henry Lewis to find a "spot" for his old pal of the "six-shooter days" on the New York Telegraph. "Bat" Masterson grew up on fights and wrote about them with high unction. "Bill" Lewis ran the Telegraph in those days. "Bill" was Alfred Henry's brother.

So there you have a bit of "background" that unfurled itself before your reporter while "Dodge City" was being unspooled yesterday afternoon.

The picture is made entirely in Technicolor and is, I think, the best "Western" that has come along in what is technically known as a month of Sundays.

We have no more intention now than heretofore of reviewing a picture in advance, but the temptation is strong to remark that the cast, in addition to Mr. Flynn, includes Olivia de Haviland, Ann Sheridan, Bruce Cabot, Alan Hale, Frank McHugh, John Litel, Henry Travers, Henry O'Neill, Victor Jory, Guinn (Big Boy) Williams, Thurston Hall, Gloria Holden, Douglas Fowley, Cora Witherspoon, Ward Bond, Russell Simpson, Monte Blue and a host more.

If you care for drama in the raw, "Dodge City" should be your dish—when it comes along to the public screen.

So yesterday's welcome visitor to the tesselated elegance of the drama department was John Pollock, brother of the illustrious Channing, here for a little cymbal-whanging in behalf of Gertrude Lawrence's impending engagement, at the National, in John Golden's new production of "Skylark." Beyond the fact that Miss Lawrence is to play here in her latest vehicle, following the D'Oyly Carte Opera Company, Mr. Pollock is not quite sure. I mean to say that Miss Lawrence may decide to take a vacation, may decide to play Chicago or may make up her mind to trek right back to the Pacific Coast. It is all a little perplexing to the former mayor of Leonia, New Jersey. We will know more about this after we have lunched with Mr. Pollock today.

And just to make confusion doubly confounded, or something like that, who should bob up at yesterday's screening of "Dodge City" but Ken Dolan. Mr. Dolan, in private life, is the husband of Shirley Ross, headlining this week's stage bill at the Earle, whom we had in Chicago, New York or some other remote spot, far removed from his wife, in yesterday's column. Ken has a way of flitting about that would baffle even a time-table expert—which we emphatically are not. I dare say, without knowing anything about it, that he even now is miles away from here. Anyhow, there he was yesterday, and a very personable chap, at that.

Leona Powers, former leading woman with the National Theater Players, will return to the environs of the National Capital, come May, to play character roles and second leads with Panjandrum Stephen E. Cochran's Olney Theater Co., holding forth at the Olney Theater, halfway betwixt here and Baltimore, for its second season. Miss Powers will support the guest stars from week to week and take her undisputed place at the head of the resident troupe gradually being assembled by Mr. Cochran. This should be good news to her many local friends and seems to presage a revival of "Sis Hopkins"—which wouldn't be so bad, either.

The first major charity enterprise of the Washington Variety Club under the chief barkership of A. E. Lichtman will take the form of a sponsored first performance of Nazimova in "The Mother," at the National Theater, the night of Monday, April 17. The proceeds will be devoted to the welfare fund of the club, which already has supplied many urgent needs to both institutions and individuals in the Capital—a new ambulance for Emergency Hospital, the incubator sets for Sibley, free entertainment for local shut-ins and so on, ad lib.

Contracts for the benefit were signed yesterday by Chief Barker Lichtman and Manager Edmund Plohn, of the National. There will be no advance in the regular scale of admission charges—55 cents to $2.75—and all tickets will be tax exempt. The welfare committee of the Variety Club is under the chairmanship of Rudolph Berger, Washington manager for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

A-Word-to-the-Wise-Etc., Note

If Mr. Barrymore, at the National, will pardon the allusion, we should say this would be a fine spot to "Kick In."

"Dodge City" was previewed by the press yesterday and may be anticipated as one of the best of the recent crop of "Westerns"

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 29.

THE NOMINATION of William O. Douglas to the Supreme Court bench was approved by the Senate Judiciary Committee . . . There was objection at first that he is not a Westerner—because, although he was born in the far West, he has spent much of his life in Connecticut . . . Senator Borah started to convince the dissenters that such an objection was not a proper one . . . "And, besides," another Senator criticized, "Douglas cusses an awful lot" . . . "Well," said Borah, "that proves he's a Westerner!"

ROLLIN KIRBY, the Pulitzer Prize editorial cartoonist, is considering two attractive offers—one from the New York Times, to become the nucleus of an opposite-editorial page, and the other from Collier's Magazine . . . Dixie Davis and Hope Dare will be married by a clergyman. Because too long a time had elapsed between their first blood tests and the marriage date, Miss Dare was given a second blood test yesterday. Dixie's test was made at the psychiatric division of the Court of General Sessions . . . Although the American Federation of Actors frowns upon any of its members telling WPA jokes, the WPA Federal Theater's new musical, "Sing for Your Supper," will include two skits bitterly satirizing the WPA worker and the Federal Theater itself.

LAST WEEK, when it seemed evident that Great Britain was preparing to abandon its mandate over Palestine, Dr. Solomon Goldman, president of the Zionist Organization of America, approached Prof. Albert Einstein . . . "We would like you to cable an appeal to Chamberlain," Goldman suggested, "and add your great name to the protest" . . . Einstein looked up and naively replied: "But do you think Mr. Chamberlain will know who I am?"

WORKMEN at Delmonico's last week removed the bronze letters imbedded in the facade of the "Road to Mandalay"—the letters which spelled "Harry Richman's" . . . Contrary to any reports, Pathe will not retire from the newsreel field for five years. They'll retire only when the roosters stop crowing . . . The new secretary to Supreme Court Justice Harlan Fiske Stone is expected to be Allison Dunham, of South Dakota . . . A. C. Blumenthal, whose difficulties with Peggy Fears made his presence in this jurisdiction legally uncomfortable, returned to New York last week-end, thus indicating a final settlement . . . A third "Mikado" will be presented on Broadway next week. This one will be called "Red Mikado"—and will be part of "Pins and Needles."

JOE FRISCO is inaugurating a special service for Hollywood stars in connection with the previews of pictures in which they appear . . . "I g-g-get a claque," Frisco explains, "and f-f-for $15 we applaud when your n-n-name is flashed on the s-s-screen. That's our straight s-s-service" . . . "What other service is there?" he was asked . . . "The $25 de luxe s-s-service," Frisco explained. "N-n-not only do we applause your n-n-name b-b-but we hiss the others."

WILLIAM KEIGHLEY, the movie director, is planning to take a cruise around the world. "Don't you read the papers?" Henry Fonda asked him. "With conditions the way they are, you never know what's liable to pop" . . . "I know all about that," Keighley assured. "I'll visit only the peaceful parts of the world" . . . "Oh, okay then," the relieved Fonda replied. "See you in Boston."

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 29.—Our First Lady, Eleanor Roosevelt, packed 'em in, and turned 'em away—at least those who came thinking it was free—when she spoke at the Philharmonic the other night. Smiled when told that the street vendors who usually sell gardenias had switched (for this one night) to her husband's pictures and Winchell's Secret Armies.

HOPPER

One looker-on remarked: "Gee, she's big stuff. Looks just like the other swells with orchids and ruby clips." Before she went on to speak, a paper carrying her picture was handed to her. She waved it aside with, "That isn't the one I want. Bring me the one with headlines about Britain!"

Using only the sketchiest notes for reference, Mrs. Rosevelt answered questions popped at her with machine-gun rapidity. Jokingly confided that her mother-in-law believed politician and democrat were synonymous with horse thief. But got the biggest laugh of the evening when she described politicians as being "peculiarly sensitive to votes." She didn't mean vetoes!

Here's a story I think you'll go for. The Jewish head of a large manufacturing company in Germany saw the handwriting on the wall before the purge came. So turned over his entire business to his Aryan employes who had worked for him for years. He escaped with little money to Paris. Since then, at the risk of life and limb, several individuals, without knowledge of the others, have brought him over $100,000—just to prove their gratitude. He's begged them not to, because if they're caught it means death.

For years Harold Bucquet, whom we all love, has been assistant director on Lional Barrymore's pictures. Just recently he became a full-fledged director. After his first—the Kildare pictures, which were so successful—he was given a new contract. And now, because Barrymore insists upon it, he'll do "On Borrowed Time," which will put him right on top. Atta-boy, Harry, I knew you'd do it!

Don't believe it when Warner's tell you "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" will be previewed in Munich! Warner's had to make their own flags for that picture. No one in town would sell 'em one of the Nazi things.

Walter Brennan's been working steadily since January, 1938. No kicks, you understand, but Walter's so tired he won't have to wear make-up any more to look like an old man.

The Ann Lehr Hollywood Guild party which Ouida Rathbone is running April 15 will be held in a tent in Bel Air with two dance floors, bands, booths, fortune tellers, moonlight gardens to stroll in, and our top stars in attendance. All for $10 and for sweet charity. So, Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Public can really find out how Ouida does it.

Jimmy Cagney is trying to make me believe he's taking a course at University of California—in agriculture. I'll believe that when I see his place at Marthas Vinyard.

Dick Powell had a bad time with W. C Fields. Fields wouldn't go off the air, and misread a joke about a horse in which the keyword was Eadie Cantor, but Fields read it Eddie Robinson!

Of all things, Charlie Ruggles is taking his pet monkey, Schmiel, with him on a ten-day vacation to New York. He thinks his pet should have a little high life. But by the time they return, his friends will be calling Charlie, and not the monkey, Schlemiel.

Dead-Ender Huntz Hall was telling me about his plans to get a horse. "I'm going to buy him in Arizona, ride him back, and save the freight!"

Understand Stan Laurel hopes to break his luck by going abroad to make a picture. Wonder if he'll leave his bad luck bride behind?

Savoyard Series Opens Monday at National; Other New Programs

THE D'OYLY CARTE OPERA COMPANY of London returns to the National Theater next Monday evening for a week's engagement in the Gilbert and Sullivan comic operas. In addition to such familiar Savoyards as Marjorie Eyre, Evelyn Gardiner, Margery Abbott, Martyn Green, Leslie Rands, Sydney Granville, Darrell Fancourt, John Dean, William Sumner and Richard Walker, there are three British favorites making their American debuts with the company on its present tour: Helen Roberts and Viola Wilson, sopranos, and John Dudley, tenor. Isadore Godfrey again will conduct. "Trial by Jury" and "The Pirates of Penzance" is the opening bill. Tuesday evening, "The Gondoliers;" Wednesday matinee, "Iolanthe;" Wednesday evening, "Patience;" Thursday evening, "The Yeomen of the Guard;" Friday evening, "Cox and Box" and "H. M. S. Pinafore," and on both Saturday matinee and evening, "The Mikado."

Palace

"CAFE SOCIETY." With the background of Manhattan elegance made famous in Lucius Beebe's weekly column, "This New York," here is a romance of an earnest newspaperman and a gilded heiress. Madeleine Carroll, the blonde beauty of "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Blockade," Fred MacMurray, whose films are legion, and Shirley Ross, the singing film player now completing a personal appearance at another local theater, are the three stars in a cast which also includes Claude Gillingwater, Jesse Ralph, Allyn Joslyn and a dash of the dashing Mr. Beebe. Opens this morning.

Earle

"BLACKWELL'S ISLAND." John Garfield continues a journalist-conscious film week as a young reporter assigned to prove that a notorious racketeer is running a great prison as if it were his private country club. Stanley Fields, Rosemary Lane, Dick Purcell, Victor Jory and Peggy Shannon are others in this comedy drama. Kay Kyser and his "College of Musical Knowledge" will be on the stage to offer the radio-famed college quiz as well as a full program of his own arrangements of the current melodies. Besides his own orchestra, Kyser will also present other of his other personalities in Ginny Simms, Harry Babbitt, "Ish Kabibble" and Sully Mason. Opens tomorrow.

Capitol

"SERGEANT MADDEN." Wallace Beery, as a New York policeman of the old school, would seem to have a role cut to fit his alternately gruff and jovial personality in this story of a "cop" forced to track down his elder son as a bank robber. Alan Curtis, Tom Brown, Laraine Johnson and Fay Holden lead the supporting cast. Sybil Bowan, whose mimicries have always been sure-fire in her many local appearances, and Eddie Peabody, the popular banjoist, headline "All Star Gambol," the Capitol's incoming stage show. The Allan and Kent Foursome, The Hudson Wonders, Paul Seydell and his dog, Spotty, are among the other stage performers. Opens tomorrow.

RKO-Keith's

"LOVE AFFAIR." Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer continue their engagement in the quietly witty story of two people of the world whose shipboard meeting is an exception to such happenstances. Maria Ouspenskaya, whose last appearance was in the memorable "Dodsworth," Astrid Allwyn, Lee Bowman, Maurise Moscovich and some brilliant players complete the cast of Director Leo McCarey, last year's Academy award winner. Also held over is "The March of Time's" issue on the Mediterranean and Walt Disney's "Society Dog Show."

Metropolitan

"ON TRIAL." The film version of the stirring play which established Elmer Rise as a leading playwright features Margaret Lindsay and John Litel. The case against a man on trial for the murder of a business associate is told through a series of flashbacks of the witnesses' stories, thus developing the true version of the affair contrasting with that of the district attorney.

Columbia

"PERSONS IN HIDING." Based on actual case related by J. Edgar Hoover in his book by the same title, this film's theme is the great influence of beautiful young women who supply the brains and inspiration for some of our most feared and desperate gangsters. Patricia Morison is the ambitious hairdresser who hopes to obtain luxuries and thrills. J. Carroll Naish and William Henry have other leading roles. Opens tomorrow.

Trans-Lux

"COSTA RICA." The colorful land of the royal poinciana trees, orchids and coffee bushes is the subject of the new travelogue at the newsreel theater. A tour through Radio City, featuring brief meetings with radio and film personalities, is the subject of "Screen Snapshots No. 6." "Dude Ranches" in Montana and "Donald's Lucky Day" are the other shorts. The newsreels will continue their emphasis on the European situation. Begins tomorrow.

Gayety

"GAY NIGHTS." Margie Hart is the star of the coming attraction of the Gayety Theater, opening with the customary Sunday matinee. Supporting the display artist are Steve Mills, Dutch comedian; Sammy Spears, Hebrew comic; Vickey McNeely, prima donna; Earl Root, character actor, and a chorus of beautiful girls. This Saturday evening during the midnight show and final appearance of Hinda Wassau, there will be two separate jitterbug contests.

Mount Vernon

OPEN AIR AUTO THEATER. In the second week of its season, this unusual screen will offer "The Mad Miss Manton," with Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda, to continue through Saturday evening. Sunday through Wednesday, "A Man to Remember," with Anne Shirley and Edward Ellis, will be the attraction. "The Mad Miss Manton" begins tonight at 7:55.

Film Biography Is Acclaimed At Premiere

'Alexander Graham Bell' Moves Notable Audience To Enthusiastic Applause

By Nelson B. Bell

"The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" last night was accorded its dual world premiere under the auspices of the National Geographic Society in Constitution Hall before a brilliant capacity audience.

The duality of the occasion was attributable to the fact that Twentieth Century-Fox presented one of its greatest biographical screen dramas simultaneously at the World's Fair, being celebrated on San Francisco's Treasure Island. Something more than 2,000 miles apart, the two premieres of the film must have borne strong features of resemblance in distinction of audience, perfect setting and deep appeal to those who were present to applaud a production that does high credit to the famous scientist to whom it is dedicated and all connected with the fabrication of so splendidly executed a drama of creative genius, courage and purling romance.

It was especially appropriate that the Eastern premiere of "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" should have been given under the sponsorship of the National Geographic Society. The inventor of the telephone was long associated with the National Geographic and his father-in-law, I believe, was its first president. More than a few of his immediate progeny now are identified with the conduct of the society.

Story of Great Benefactor

Thus it was that the 3,500 or more members of the society and their guests last evening found rare pleasure in the film record of the life of one of mankind's greatest benefactors. The picture held the rapt attention of the capacity house throughout the length of its running. The same thing will occur when "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" is released as a commercial product, intended for public consumption in the foremost of our cinema theaters.

Into the warp and woof of the play have been woven not only the desperate struggle for recognition of a fabulously valuable invention, but the gentler aspects of the life of a genius who was not immune to humanitarian impulses and warming romance. We meet Alexander Graham Bell first as a young man who is principally concerned with teaching deaf mutes to talk, or at least to "lip-read" spoken words. From this study of rhythmic utterance, air-waves, and the like, sprang the inspiration to invent a means of speech through a "hollow wire." There is a thrill in the manner in which this miracle is brought about upon the screen.

There is even more of a thrill in the courtroom scenes in which the question of Bell's right to his patents is bitterly contested. The case is clearly made out as completely in the former Washingtonian's favor.

Is Splendidly Cast

"The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" has been cast with unique sagacity. Don Ameche never has had a part before the cameras affording him the opportunities for sustained characterization which he finds at his disposal here. He makes the most of them, and brings to the film by far the best work he ever has contributed to the celluloids. As Mabel Hubbard, the beautiful young woman bereft of her hearing, whom Bell finally marries, Loretta Young may be a trifle on the emotional side, but still is an intelligent and believable foil for the ardent playing of Ameche.

Henry Fonda, as Thomas Watson—who sounds just a mite Sherlockian—has a role that places no heavy demands upon his known capabilities, but one which he plays with fine effect. There are many others in the cast who do much to make this one of the most impressive biographical dramas of this or any other season. Foremost among them are Charles Coburn, Gene Lockhart, Spring Byington, Bobs Watson, Russell Hicks, Jonathan Hale, Beryl Mercer—who here plays Queen Victoria, just as she does with Shirley Temple in "The Little Princess"—Elizabeth Patterson and Charles Trowbridge.

Story Has Substance

There is the substance not only of sound drama but of great scientific achievement in "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell." The scientific aspects of the recital's basic plot never are permitted to overshadow the purely human motivation of a play that embodies not only a tribute to greatness but an equal salute to the warm human impulses that bear so definitely upon the conduct of life.

Twentieth Century-Fox evidently expended the fullest measure of time, research, effort and money upon the making of this picture. The results are such as to redound with complete credit upon Darryl Zanuck and his associates.

When "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell" comes along to the regular theater screen, it will be one of the things that any American, and any Washingtonian, in particular, will want to see.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots —Of the Motion Picture Scene—

San Francisco, March 29 (I.N.S.).—Just before taking the train for the "Alexander Graham Bell" preview in San Francisco, I was told that Anna Neagle, the British actress who gave us "Victoria the Queen" and the sequel, "Sixty Glorious Years," is getting ready to come to Hollywood. She will do "Marie Lloyd," the story of an English music hall favorite of 30 years ago, and I was very interested to hear the reason for making it in Hollywood.

LOUELLA PARSONS

The British public who adore La Neagle since she made their beloved Queen Victoria seem so real, consider it undignified for her to follow the royal impersonation playing a music hall girl. So Hrebert Wilcox decided since he was all ready to shoot, that he would bring his star here to R.-K.-O., the company with whom he holds a contract. The American public has no such scruples. They look upon their stars as actors and not necessarily the characters they play.

Straight from the dashing Rhett Butler in "Gone With the Wind," a priest's role in "Alaska" is the next step for Clark Gable—and that is news so hot off the griddle that it reached me by telephone in San Francisco. If Leo, The Lion, wasn't blushing when he gave me the story, he should have been, for at least a dozen pictures have been announced as Clark's "next" when he returns to M-G-M. But on the level, Anita Loos and Bob Hopkins are putting the finishing touches on the script wherein Clark will play a fighting Padre of the gold rush days. Spencer Tracy and Pat O'Brien have both portrayed priestly roles successfully in the past. But it is certainly an innovation for Clark. "Alaska" is an adaptation of Addison Marshall's novel, "Seward's Folly," and it's set for production the minute Clark and Carol return from their honeymoon.

Pardon me if my tongue is in my cheek over all the hearts-and-flowers sentiments about "The Story of Vernon and Irene Castle" being the swan song for Ginger Rogers and Fred Astaire as a team. It is true that Fred signs off his long-term R-K-O contract with this picture—and after his world tour there's little doubt he will check in at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. But in the meantime plans are afoot at this moment for Fred and Ginger to be reunited for one picture annually at R-K-O—and good business, I call it, because Fred and Ginger are twice as potent as a team as they are apart.

Snapshots of the "Alexander Graham Bell" Cavalcade: The Don Ameches hope to welcome a girl in August—they already have two boys—Annabelle, with her hair cut very cute and tres becoming, showed me a half-heart she wears around her neck—Tyrone Power, of course, wears the other half. She likes the little gold necklace even better than the diamond sparkler he put on her third finger; what fun we had with Loretta Young on the "special" that took us to San Francisco; both he and Annabella like her so much, and Loretta has such a provoking sense of humor. We gathered in her drawing room with Sally Blane and Sally Eilers and Edith and Billy Goetz joining in the laughter which became so loud that Darryl Zanuck was attracted and came ot join us also; Douglas Fairbanks ,sr., has a new gag. He talked to me for 15 minutes narrating a long and rambling story which seemed to be without point or purpose. I couldn't keep a blank look off my face, and finally Sylvia came to my rescue and laughingly told me that the story had no point—he was simply trying to see how long I would remain polite and listen.

Edith Goetz told me that Doug played the same trick on Jock Whitney and David Selznick for 30 long minutes and they had begun to think Doug slightly addled before they caught on. Try it sometime on your best friend; Sonja Henie, all in pale blue with a hat that tied under her chin looked like an illustration of the fairy princess; Constance Bennett thoroughly enjoying herself far into the night playing hearts. Elsa Maxwell met us at San Jose and took us on to lunch at Treasure Island, followed by the big preview in the afternoon—and until I see you again from Hollywood tomorrow—that's all for today!

Mystery Film Is Revived At the Little

'The Lady Vanishes,' Ace Suspense Tale, Directed by Hitchcock

For the mystery friends who were laggards when "The Lady Vanishes" played a six-day engagement downtown recently, the Little Theater has brought back the Alfred Hitchcock masterpiece.

Suspense is the greatest achievement of the English director, who has also given us "The 39 Steps" and "The Ghost Goes West." In this film Mr. Hitchcock spares not an inch of the film's 7,800 feet.

It begins serenely enough with a beautiful young English girl returning from a premarital holiday in the Alps, but every little movement has a result all its own. An elderly spinster listens to a tune from a serenading native, a collector of folk tunes annoys the apartment below him and the bride-to-be gets accidentally klunked on the head by a solitary brick. Two cricket-mad Britishers are annoyed at being asked for the sugar while they are using the lumps to illustrate a game. A tunnel brings out some writing on a window pane and a magician-passenger works overtime. The elderly spinster disappears from our lady's side and every passenger on the train denies ever having seen anyone with a girl. A familiar tune pops up again in the foreign office in London.

There are, in other words, all the ingredients of a genuinely engrossing film. Margaret Lockwood, Michael Redgrave, Dame May Whitty and Paul Lukas have the leading roles. Most of the action is played on a train speeding through the politically heated borders of Central Europe.

There is a neat short at the Little, too, "Datelines," that deserves lofty praise because it offers a refreshing and untried idea. Laura Hayes has watched for little off-the-front-page stories and has dramatized them with an eye to their originality and possible results. R. L. C.

Dr. Draper Lauds Syphilis Campaign

The Nation-wide campaign for public education on syphilis is "one of the outstanding achievements of our age," Dr. Warren F. Draper, of the United States Public Health Service, yesterday told members of the Junior League educational committee and board of directors of the Instructive Visiting Nurse Association.

"Remarkable" progress also has been made in recent years in study of cancer and pneumonia, Dr. Draper said. Deaths from pneumonia have declined from 102,500 in 1930 to 84,250 in 1938, he stated.

Gandhi's Fast Helped India, Singh Believes

Trade Envoy Sees Great Impetus Given To Unity Movement

The aim of a united and self-governing India was brought a long step closer to realization by the recent fast of Mahatma Gandhi, Sirdar J. J. Singh, president of the India Chamber of Commerce of America, said last night.

Here to help draw up the first commercial agreement ever made between India and the United States, Singh interviewed in his suite at the Mayflower Hotel, explained that the need for such a treaty had arisen from India's rapid advance toward independence. Indian-American trade relations are now regulated only by an Anglo-American convention of 1815, he said, but Indian businessmen want a direct agreement with the United States.

Electorate Enlarged

Gandhi's fast of March 3 to 7 was chiefly important because it was the first time the Mahatma interferred with the internal politics of the native states, according to Singh. Led by Gandhi, the Indian National Congress, the nationalist part of India, has gained control of 8 of the 11 provinces in British India, but until this month had not interferred with ruling princes, he explained.

But with Gandhi's victory over the Thakore Sahib of Rajkot, the Congress party has begun the fight for representative government for the subjects of native princes. Under the new constitution, which has already been applied to the provincial governments and will be applied next year to the central government of India, the electorate has been enlarged and representation increased, resulting in most cases in victory for the Congress party and its liberal reform program.

This form of government, developed in British India, the Congress party wants to extend to the native states, Singh declared. Admitting that some native rulers had started liberalizing their government, he said "unfortunately and unhappily there are very few such examples."

Sees British Support

The British government will accept the changes in the new constitution proposed by the Congress party, Singh prophesied, because the advance of the totalitarian nations in Europe makes it more than ever necessary for her to "retain the good will and friendship of 360,000,000 people in India."

The proposed commercial agreement between India and the United States will extend the most favored nation principle to Indian-American trade, but will not contain specific tariff provisions, Singh declared.

It will also give Indian businessmen "treaty merchant status" when they visit America, whereas they are now classed as tourists and their residence here is limited.

Ousted Deputy Indicted for Embezzlement

Thomas Ott Accused Of Taking $2,910 In Property as Officer

Thomas E. Ott, who was removed as chief deputy United States marshal after an audit last fall, was indicted yesterday of embezzling $2,910 worth of property while he was an officer.

The indictment was one of 47 handed up to Justice Proctor.

The charges against Ott were made in an elaborate document of 16 counts, drafted by Assistant District Attorney Howard Boyd, who was assigned by District Attorney Pine to prosecute Ott.

Among the property alleged to have been stolen by Ott was an opal ring set with eight diamonds, taken by marshals to satisfy a debt owed by Mrs. E. Genevieve Walsh, formerly of the Dodge Hotel. The sale of other jewelry paid the debt but Mrs. Walsh could not be located to receive the ring.

Those indicted were:

Housebreaking and larceny—Ralph W. Sands, 20, colored (11 indictments); Daniel Davis, 21, colored; Walter N. Childs, 21, colored; William H. Gaines, 25, colored; William Clark, 51, colored (2 indictments); Charles Brown, 20, colored; Colman Johnson, 28, colored; Raymond J. Gibson, 21, colored; Nelson Johnson, 18, colored; Bishop Hansberry, 26, colored; Ernest Brooks, 42, colored; Joseph Marton, 20, colored.

Abortion—Fred F. Deming, 44, of 2305 Eighteenth street northwest.

Receiving stolen property—Aaron Trachtenberg, 34.

Joy-riding—Frank I. Harrison, 18, colored; John H. Dawson.

Grand larceny—Anna Whitlock, 42, colored.

Violating liquor tax law—James Morton.

Carnal knowledge—William R. Boone, 24, colored.

Assault with intent to rape—Joseph W. Fulton, 35; Henry Nichols, 33.

Embezzlement by Government officer—Thomas E. Ott.

Stealing from mail boxes—John M. Nelson, 19.

Robbery—Phillip A. Shima, 23.

Embezzlement—Russell R. Riddell.

Grand larceny—Charles Hays, 18, colored; assault with dangerous weapon: Leroy Fulmer, 26, colored; forgery and uttering a forgery, Alonzo R. Rowles, 42; robbery, John F. Jordan, 20; Archie Frew, jr., 19; James W. Stiffler, 20; Harry C. DeMartinis, 22 (all four soldiers at Fort Myer), and Paul W. Bryan, a taxicab driver; assault with intent to rape, Allan Garland, 32, colored; carnal knowledge, Joseph J. Fielder; abortion, Frederick C. Mersner; homicide, Ruth M. Blair, 30, for the death of a baby found in an incinerator at 2025 I street northwest.

Mrs. Lyddane Marks 89th Year

The days when her husband, a Confederate, was held by Union forces as a spy until pardoned by Lincoln were recalled yesterday by Mrs. Mary Margaret Lyddane, celebrating her 89th brithday.

Mrs. Lyddane was given a party at her home, 3208 Q street northwest, by her children, grandchildren and great grandchildren. Her husband, the late James E. Lyddane, served in the Metropolitan Police department here 25 years.

MEN LOVE GIRLS WITH PEP

If you are peppy and full of fun, men will invite you to dances and parties.

BUT if you are cross, listless and tired, men won't be interested. Men don't like "quiet" girls. When they go to parties they want girls along who are full of pep.

So in case you need a good general system tonic, remember for 3 generations one woman has told another how to go "smiling thru" with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It helps build up more physical resistance and thus aids in giving you more pep and lessens distress from female functional disorders.

You'll find Pinkham's Compound WELL WORTH TRYING!

Back Of Mischa Elman

Almost every major development reported from Europe these days involves an augmentation of the already staggering refugee problem. Now the final collapse of republican Spain is all too likely to add new thousands to the enormous total of those who have no choice between penniless exile and the whiplash of persecution.

The plight of all refugees is tragic. That of those who are completely innocent of any responsibility for their status has aroused the pity of generous-minded people in all the democracies. Much has been done for these victims of totalitarian regimentation. But far more remains to be done, particularly by wealthy and prosperous communities which only know by hearsay of the incredible suffering involved.

That is why Washington must insure success for the concert to be given at Constitution Hall tonight in behalf of three co-operating refugee organizations. The American Committee for Christian German Refugees; the Committee for Catholic Refugees from Germany and the American Joint Distribution Committee, are all working together in a practical way which deserves the support and patronage of Washingtonians of every creed. The artist whom they sponsor is the renowned Mischa Elman. He is contributing his services gratis and his appearance tonight is one of a long series of appearances he is making throughout the country for the benefit of refugees.

The refugee problem has long since ceased being solely a Jewish problem. In steadily increasing degree it has become a Christian problem as well. It is, above all, a human problem. As such it demands not merely humanitarian sentiments, but also realization that it is a vital duty to aid those who are endeavoring to bring order out of a dislocation world-wide in its destructive effects.

That, in addition to the magic of his art, is the message which Mischa Elman brings to Washington tonight.

Wider, Please!

Not very long ago there was some excitement over a report that a dentist had perfected a technique of extracting teeth, fixing up whatever was wrong with the roots, and then putting them back in the patient's jaw to wage battle on beefsteaks for another five years.

It sounded almost as easy as having your shoes half soled or your pants pressed on the while-you-wait system. Doubtless many a sufferer rejoiced in the thought that now he could sit serenely in the anteroom reading month before last's installment of the mystery serial while tooth and toothache had it out with the doctor inside.

Now, alas, comes Dr. Lon W. Morrey, educational director of the American Dental Association, to warn us against any such optimism. The profession, says Dr. Morrey, is pretty well agreed that the thing is impracticable. There seem to be two main objections. One is a danger of infection and the other is in certain physiological changes that occur in the jaw bone after a tooth has been extracted.

Besides, Dr. Morrey points out, there is nothing new about the idea itself. Replantation and transplantation of teeth was a flourishing business in the eighteenth century, as many an old engraving testifies. In those days almost any poor devil with a full mouth and an empty stomach could earn a week's supply of meat and drink by selling his incisors or molars to some aging beau. But somehow these plebeian teeth never got used to the elegant and aristocratic environment of their new mouths. Sooner or later they managed to escape from it.

Still, even if, after nearly two centuries of experimentation, the dentists have as yet had no very impressive amount of luck with the replanting or transplanting of natural teeth, no one can question their tremendous accomplishments in other directions. The late William Dean Howells once observed that the inferiority of American teeth had made American dentists superior to any in the world, and he spoke truly. The alchemists who never succeeded in turning base metal to gold nevertheless opened the way for the far more impressive miracles of modern chemistry. And if most dentists are still unwilling to put back in your jaw the teeth they have taken from it, they are nevertheless quite prepared to put back something much better.

Very few of us possess, as a matter of birthright, smiles of such beautiful whiteness, such "quarrelets of pearl," as are fashioned in the prosthetic laboratories. Here are teeth impervious to caries, proof against the "venom'd stang that shoots the tortur'd goom alang." As plain a case as anybody could wish of art's superiority to Nature.

Copying Germany

By its action in pegging the price of cotton above world-market levels, the Administration has deprived the American farmer of export outlets and has accumulated a vast store of cotton against which the Government has loaned more than the reserve is currently worth.

Barring its intentional destruction, there are only two ways in which markets for this stored surplus can be expanded. We must either abandon the price-boosting policies which have helped to squeeze our cotton out of foreign markets or we must resort to export subsidies. And, as the President is opposed to withdrawal of loan subsidies, it is a policy of dumping which he advocates.

It is scarcely necessary to emphasize the economic folly of first raising prices by subsidies and then subsidizing further because prices are too high. More to the point is the complete inconsistency of the new program with the reciprocal trade program of the Department of State. Neither President Roosevelt's assertion to the contrary, nor Secretary Hull's grudging admission that a particular situation may require temporary emergency treatment, carries the slightest conviction in this respect.

The proposed subsidy would of course result in lower production costs of cotton textiles in foreign countries. That would lead to the imposition of compensating import duties, or, as the President suggests, application of definite import quotas to protect domestic industries against the competition of foreign goods made from this subsidized cotton. To offset the handicap imposed on American exporters of goods manufactured from high-priced cotton, still another export subsidy would be required. Nor is there any likelihood that the trend would stop at that point.

In establishing one price within the home market and another for export the United States would be copying procedure which we have self-righteously condemned when practiced by others with more excuse than we have. Only a few days ago it was decided to levy penalty duties on German goods to offset German export subsidies. What economic ground for such action is there if we are about to embark upon wholesale subsidization of our cotton exports? Moreover, by what strange process of reasoning does the President persuade himself that the creation of new obstacles to foreign trade fits into a program intended to remove such obstacles?

The simple truth is that the Administration's agricultural program, being designed to raise prices of exportable commodities above world levels, has from the beginning actively discouraged foreign trade. The irreconcilability of this program with Secretary Hull's efforts to remove artificial trade barriers is obvious. So long as no effort was made to deal with the problems presented by loss of our cotton export markets, it was possible to pretend that harmony ruled. Now that pretense is abandoned and the President has elected to follow the methods of the totalitarian states by resorting to export subsidies and import quotas.

His faith that a few years of artificially encouraged cotton exports "will bring our supplies to normal" will be shared by few, in view of the abnormal conditions created by governmental interference with the normal course of production and distribution.

"A Perfect Despotism"

Senator Capper chose an appropriate time for making his protest, before the Society of Natives, against maintenance of "a perfect despotism at the heart of this Republic." The whole country is aroused to the importance of preserving and strengthening democratic processes. It would be strange if this universal concern failed to draw attention to the complete absence of self-government in the Capital of the United States.

The issue stands out even more sharply because of current indications that Washingtonians may soon be paying local income taxes. The Supreme Court has now cleared the way for a direct levy upon District residents. And the House subcommittee on fiscal affairs is restudying the local tax bill with that in mind. The demand for political rights is sure to increase in just such proportion as District residents pay taxes to support their local government. It will be increasingly realized, as Senator Capper pointed out, that Washingtonians have all the responsibilities of citizenship. But when privileges are considered, "they are classed with criminals and lunatics."

The Senator will render a great service if he will induce more of his colleagues to give increasing attention to the anomalous position of the District. Many different views of the problem prevail on Capitol Hill. But that does not minimize the desirability of pressing for a solution that will be in keeping not merely with Washington's status as the Nation's Capital but also with the even older American tradition that "taxation without representation is tyranny."

In the meantime there is need of support, from Senator Capper and others, for the effort to modernize and simplify the local government. The superintendent of schools yesterday voiced the community viewpoint in demanding that executive control over education shall not be taken from local representatives. Criticism of the deficiencies of the Griffenhagen report in this respect is unanimous. But it must not be allowed to obscure the value of the proposals in that report which would increase, rather than impede, the development of a municipal government responsible to, and controlled by, District residents, whether elected or appointed.

House Economy Moves

For a time it seemed that efforts to economize might be defeated by log-rolling in the House. Promises to vote for the unbudgeted $250,000,000 allotment for farm parity payments were, it was rumored, being swapped for offers to support the President's $150,000,000 deficiency relief request.

Fortunately these plans, if they existed, have fallen through. For the parity payment proposal was defeated in the House as was an amendment to appropriate $60,000,000 to subsidize farm exports other than cotton. This action has now been followed by a recommendation from the House Appropriations Committee to cut the deficiency relief fund to $100,000,000. Now it is surmised that the disgruntled farm belt members may take their revenge by supporting the economy bloc which favors cuts in the relief bill.

Whatever the motives that have induced a majority of the House to take a stand against continued increases in spending, the results are encouraging. Indeed, there is good reason to believe that these economy moves are evidence of a real and increasing desire on the part of the House majority to make a real if modest start toward budget balancing. Inevitably the greatest number of votes for specific cuts in agricultural appropriations will be cast by members from urban districts. Similarly, the members from farm districts will be more inclined to cut relief outlays which are needed in urban areas.

It is always a minority of thoughtful legislators who by their response to considerations of the general public interest offset the shortsightedness of those who vote the easiest way. A brave fight for economy is now being waged by a number of able Representatives. The enthusiasm with which Mr. Woodrum's speech opposing the export subsidy proposal was received is significant.

It proved that he was not, as he feared, "one crying in the wilderness." His subsequent comment that the House rejection of the unbudgeted items was "one of the most heartening actions of this session" was justified. If the House sustains the Appropriations Committee relief cut, Mr. Woodrum will have even greater cause to believe that a definite victory against unbridled spending has been achieved.

We Note With Alarm

Now is the time for all friends of the guppy to come to the aid of that party. With college youth developing a more than avid interest in ichthyology, and some of them apparently convinced that the glass of fashion is a goldfish bowl, the S. P. C. A. had better prove itself.

Consider one month's record: At the beginning of March a Harvard student swallowed a live goldfish. Then, one (student) from Franklin and Marshall gulped down three (goldfish). After which another son of fair Harvard let a throng, or school, of twenty-four slide down his gullet, with orange juice as a chaser.

Now suppose, on the simplest actuarial basis, that the existing record is multiplied by the three on the fifteenth of each succeeding month and by eight on the thirtieth. By the end of a year the figures will look like a WPA appropriation and there won't be a poor fish left in the country.

Except, of course, the ultimate swallower, who will undoubtedly be a Harvard man. As Mother Goose might have pointed out in her well-known nursery rhyme:

Sing a song of nonsense
Brains full of mush.
Four and twenty goldfish
Take the bum's rush.
When the mouth is opened
The finny ones go "Swish!"
And there are twenty-five of them—
Get what we mean? Poor fish!

Garner And Douglas

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Gallup poll gave 42 per cent of the Democratic vote to Mr. Garner. This seems a tremendous share, but it is not particularly significant. For one thing, Mr. Garner's name has become a symbol of Democratic conservatism and has been on the front pages daily for some time, plus constant mention over many years; in the second, he has incurred the enmity of few and obviously is to be preferred to such other machine men as Harrison, Tydings, et al.

There is no comparison to the vote as recorded for him, as contrasted to the 30 per cent or so of people who registered in favor of Roosevelt for a third term. Roosevelt has been on the fire; moreover, the people who said they were for him meant that they were for him in preference to anyone else, plus the third-term tradition, etc. These Roosevelt people are last-ditch Roosevelters; the Garner people may even yawn when they declare their favorite. And if Roosevelt were a candidate!!!

No conservative can win without Roosevelt support. Any politician knows that the Democratic nomination wouldn't be worth a whoop if Roosevelt evinced his displeasure, even by silence. So a New Dealer of some sort—possibly William O. Douglas—will be named, since he will have been out of the melee for some time, and won't even bear any scars.

Now assay that poll again. It is not hard to believe that a large share of the Garner people would vote for Douglas; that all the 10 per cent Hull vote and the 10 per cent Farley vote would swing to him. Add the 8 per cent Hopkins vote, the 2 per cent Murphy vote, etc., and you would find Douglas an acceptable candidate who would draw millions of votes from progressive Republicans, who stick to nothing but the name for intrastate purposes. No Lack Of Labor

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In an account of my talk before the local council of the National Negro Congress last evening I was quoted in The Post as saying that the principal problem in the District is not demolition of houses and building new ones, but rather the lack of skilled labor to do it. Will you give me space to correct this statement, which is evidently due to telescoping.

In discussing housing policy generally, not in the District particularly, I said that the job of slum reclamation and providing an adequate supply of new dwellings is so large that it can not be done overnight, but must be carried on over a good many years. If an attempt were made to rush it too fast we would find that there are limits to our available supplies of material and of skilled labor.

At the present time and with the present program there is no lack of labor in the District. John Locher, of the Washington Building Trades Council, states that there is plenty of both skilled and unskilled labor now available.

What I would like to see is a program that will give full employment steadily, but not one that would create a boom followed by a recession. JOHN IHLDER.

'Bon Voyage!'

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "I see be the' pa-a-a-pers" that Georges Bonnet—the iron-willed, deep-visioned, candid, stalwart foreign minister of France—is "threatening" to resign. Will he make that a promise? Will he put it in writing?

Of course, if, as, and when Bonnet quits the Quai d'Orsay, he should be given some position that will constitute a suitable recognition of his "services" to the French Republic. Some job, for example, like that of second "sous-secretaire" of the committee on the disposition of useless papers in the Marquesas Islands, in the middle of the South Pacific! Bon voyage, Georges! Don't remember to come back! F. L. P.

The WPA Appropriation

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have read with interest the letter of Col. Brehon Somervell, W. P. A. administrator, New York City, published in your issue of March 26, and your editorial reply.

In Col. Somervell's very proper challenge to the misleading and confusing references to his own administration, he overlooked, I think, another joint effect of your editorial and of the cartoon which appeared on the same page. To my mind, it was unreasonable, unjustified and cruel to suggest "If WPA jobs are valuable enough to provide a rake-off for venal officials there is surely room for economy in relief outlays, etc.," and again that there are "loopholes through which large sums intended for the needy are at present diverted into other hands."

No one questions that, in this tremendously large and involved job, there are opportunities for improvement. Your editorial of Sunday very properly gives full credit to Col. Somervell for his part in improvements already made. I happen to know, through casual acquaintance with one of his associates, of very substantial sums saved through improved administration in New York City.

Lack of perfection does not justify the callous suggestion of your cartoon and the insinuating "Of course we need that additional $150,000,000." Whatever investigations may be desirable or whatever improvements may be made should go right on; but if competent, experienced, nonpartisan administrators like Col. Harrington and others think this money is needed now, and should be appropriated by April 1, then don't you think this present issue might be debated without gumming it up?

For a Fitting Memorial

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In line with many other people with whom I have discussed the pending Jefferson Memorial, and the justified opposition to the present plan, may I suggest that The Post take the lead in a drive to have the memorial changed into an amphitheater, where all concerts and outdoor civic affairs could be held.

The beauty of this setting would enhance any entertainment, and since Jefferson was such a far-seeing and vital personality, the benefit to the community would be in keeping with his life and vision for this country.

Washington needs such a place and this seems a wonderful opportunity to get it and still honor one of our greatest statesmen—in a living and fitting memorial.

Can't you—won't you try to do something about this?

Of course, I enjoy your paper each day and consider it one of the finest in the country. I don't always agree with you, but I respect your views, feeling you are honest and sincere, and one can ask no more than that.

MARY MILLER.

Suggestion To The Board

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am certain that the greater part of Washington will agree that the failure to have Miss Marian Anderson sing at the Central High School Auditorium on Easter Sunday would be a community loss.

It is the responsibility of people who are concerned with this special matter and with the entire problem of interracial good will to attempt a sensible resolution of this issue.

Why cannot the Board of Education, when it will be met with this problem again on April 5, in the spirit of friendliness and good will say:

"Yes, we shall grant the use of the Central High School Auditorium to the Howard School of Music, in order to enable them to sponsor as they wish for the entire community, both Negro and white, a concert by Miss Marian Anderson.

"It is the wish of the Board of Education that this action should not be construed as a precedent.

"Owing to the fact that several important questions of policy in the community use of buildings have arisen in the public discussion around this question, we have at our regular meeting held Wednesday, March 15, requested our committee on the community use of building to review all past actions of the Community Center Department and of the Board of Education in regard to the issuance of permits for the use of school buildings.

"When the committee is ready to present its report to the Board of Education, we shall announce a public hearing at which time groups may present their views on the entire general question of community use of buildings.

"Then after careful, dispassionate, and serious community consideration, the Board of Education will attempt to promulgate some general rules for future policy."

What is unreasonable about such a position? The Board of Education has, should and can state, if it so desires, that in regard to their action in this matter, that it was taken because an emergency for available space had arisen and that they would be willing to grant the use of the auditorium.

The Marian Anderson Citizens Committee has expressed the belief that sufficient precedent exists in the past actions of the Board of Education without any reference to this particular Marian Anderson concert, around which to formulate a policy for the future. It seems to me, therefore, that the question as to whether or not this particular concert is to be taken as a precedent is not particularly important since both the proponents and opponents of any new policy or any generalized statement of what is presumed to be the old policy will have sufficient events in the past to which they may refer to develop whatever viewpoint they think ought to prevail.

Those Hats

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Concerning women's hats and shoes, it seems that the fashion designers must have it in for the women. Why, in the name of good sense, do we have to wear hats that even the saleswomen and buyers laugh at, or put their hands up in holy horror when they place them upon our heads? The world is upset enough nowadays without crowning women with a fool's cap, and placing shoes upon our feet that are half there.

Let us hope that some designer with a sense of beauty will come to our rescue. Please send an S. O. S. call before we all lose our minds.

The Post Impressionist

The Rabbit

THE SCREAM could have come from either end of the long hall. Miss Gilbert, the night nurse, jumped from her chair at the desk and looked up and down. She picked up her flashlight and hastened toward the left wing of the ward. Somebody screamed at the other end of the hall. Miss Gilbert turned quickly and half running went into room 12.

"It's over there—over there in the corner . . . !"

"In which corner is what?" said Miss Gilbert, severely. Peeping from the covers, the patient stuck out a finger, quickly covered up again.

"Something white and large!"

Miss Gilbert carefully searched the room, flashed her light under the bed. A small white huddle revealed itself, a quivering, frightened rabbit. The large fiery eyes gave her a start. She stooped to get a closer look and to test the rabbit's tameness. It crouched close against the wall.

"It's nothing but a little rabbit."

"A rabbit! Oh! What kind of a rabbit?"

"Just a rabbit. You know, a rabbit." The nurse waved an arm. It's a rabbit all right, thought Miss Gilbert, but it's from the laboratory and probably full of deadly germs. Why in the world did the pathologist let his animals run loose, to frighten the patients and bite the nurse?

"He won't hurt you, and I'll get him out of here," Miss Gilbert told the patient. "I'll find something to get him out with, so just keep yourself calm for a moment."

"He might jump on my bed!"

The night supervisor ought to be notified. But then she would discover the door at the far end of the hall had been left open, and though that was not Miss Gilbert's fault, it would immediately become her responsibility. The night orderly was supposed to see that all doors not in use during the night were locked, but Miss Miller would say that it was Miss Gilbert's duty to see that he did it. In the end they both would hear of it.

No, Miss Gilbert had better dispose of the rabbit alone, even if it bit and killed her. She opened the mop closet; pulling out the mops, dust pans and buckets, she finally emerged with a broom. There was an empty room three doors from the one the rabbit was in, and getting him from his corner to the empty room was her problem.

She returned to find the rabbit had not moved an inch when she returned. Miss Gilbert eased to the edge of the bed and gently poked the broom at him. He didn't budge. She gave the broom another shove. The rabbit edged a little to the left. Nurse Gilbert stood erect and swore under her breath. Impatiently she gave the rabbit a nudge. He ran across the room to a corner behind a chair. She jumped on another and scolded herself for her craveness in sight of the patient. From the chair she gave the rabbit another nudge. He turned and with one leap was into the hall.

There he was, trembling near the water cooler. If she attacked him on the right flank he would run further down the corridor and she'd never get him back to the empty room. If she got around to the left he might get frightened and bite her. Heaven alone would know what kind of a death she would die, for undoubtedly the rabbit had been innoculated. Exasperated, she tiptoed a bit closer.

"Shoo—shoo! You nasty rabbit, you! Move or I'll hit you!"

Apparently the rabbit put little value on her threat. He sat very still. She became braver, came closer, gave the rabbit a push with the broom. He scurried past her and one door beyond the room which was waiting to make him its prisoner. Miss Gilbert, holding her breath, managed to get past him and over to his side before he made a move. She closed in on him, determining to make him go into the room.

A bell rang somewhere down the hall. She swept the rabbit into the vacant room and closed the door triumphantly. But when an hour later the day duty nurse arrived to relieve her, she thought it best to say nothing.

The cave was dark and had great overhangings of trees and ferns. She felt very tiny, very frightened in its vastness. An enormous white rabbit came out from under a big stone and leered at her. The rabbit was twice, three times her size! She tried to run, but with one leap the rabbit caught her and began shaking her with his enormous paws.

"Gilbert! Gilbert! Wake up! You're wanted on the phone!"

"Telephone? Oh, thanks, Jones!" Miss Gilbert presently swung herself out of bed.

"Hello . . . Yes, this is Miss Gilbert. . . Yes. What? . . . A rabbit? . . . yes, doctor . . . a white rabbit? . . . Yes, I did hear there was a white rabbit in a vacant room on Ward A . . . Oh, you're very welcome, I'm sure."

Cab Fares

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In regard to the recently proposed cab rate boost I would like to know why in the world the PUC did not show a little consideration for the cab-riding public by setting the rate at 25 cents, 50 cents, 75 cents and $1, thereby relieving much of the ill feeling that exists between driver and rider in regard to tipping.

Now, under present rate, the rider is literally forced to give the driver a quarter for a first-zone run, and under the new rate the same system will exist. It will practically be impossible for the rider to expect any change from a quarter, a half or a dollar whichever the case may be.

It is a known fact that you cannot expect a man to do a thing against his will; therefore, I would suggest that the cab companies be given a flat even-money rate such as the one mentioned above, and the driver would receive just as much in tips, if not more, than he did under the old rate. If you don't believe me, ask some of the old drivers.

Fair Enough

By Westbrook Pegler

Sober Statesmen

SO MUCH depends on the public remarks of men in this Government, particularly as to foreign affairs, that there should be an honor committee among them to hold them to sobriety during business hours and at moments when they are sounding off on the radio or for the press after school. If a man speaks in a reckless or irrational and provocative manner when he is cold sober the people who elected him are stuck with him and his remarks and have no remedy but to lick him at the polls next time around.

But whether he is elected or hired, which is to say appointed, there is an assumption that even if he is not a teetotaler, he will handle his liquor capably. The country should not have to risk the consequences of remarks tossed off, perhaps into the teeth of some paranoiac European marauder, by a Government agent who is either drunk at the time, or mentally impaired by that lingering picklement which, in some hard drinkers, persists for from 24 to 48 hours after a binge. There is no such escape in the law, however, and there are no regulations, so it devolves upon the men themselves, who make up the Government, including the houses of Congress, to impose a rule of conduct that is expected to be observed by every person who drives an automobile.

Alcohol Tends To Blur Judgment

THE HISTORY of governmental Washington is rich in amusing stories of picturesque old tosspots and nocturnal door-kickers, now preserved in marble or bronze in Statuary Hall, who delivered deathless orations when they were barely able to stand and couldn't see at all. But the memories of the Army also abound in tales of horseback generals who drank straight from the jug, and a drunkard could not get a command today.

A life-long teetotaler would not be a competent witness, but any man or woman who has had experience in liquor is eligible to testify that alcohol tends to stifle discretion and blur judgment. But businessmen trust themselves to read and sign important documents when they are feeling gigantic, and men in the Government should admit and act upon the fact that a colleague who is known to get blind now and again may deserve public exposure so that intemperate remarks may be discounted, both at home and abroad.

Stewed Statesman Can Not Be Fired

IT IS A STRANGE fact that the civil branch of Government in the elective and higher levels is the only zone of activity in this country in which a man may get drunk, stay drunk for days, or keep himself in a mildly stewed condition for years without loss of privilege or standing. A clerk may be fired, but a statesman may not be even rebuked. And a lawmaker, for example, going before his people asking re-election may not even be accused of inebriety, except in whispers which defeat themselves if he can manage to stay sober in public during his campaign.

If a newspaper reporter in the Capital were to say, with absolute truth, that a statesman was grogged up when he delivered a dangerous declaration his paper could be sued and mulcted, hands down, because even in traffc cases the humblest defendant may beat a similar charge if he knows his rights, unless tests have been made at the time. The charge is a matter of opinion and, if it is made some time after the incident and is heard a considerable time after that, proof is almost impossible.

Bellicose Speeches Aggravate Hostility

IT IS IN the field of foreign relations that irresponsible remarks may be particularly dangerous and deserve the least protection from the tolerance and etiquette of the statesmen. Bellicose speeches and statements tending to aggravate hostile feeling bring their rejoinders, and the showdown may involve the lives of millions. It is bad enough that sober fools may court wars for younger men to fight, but there seems to be no way of avoiding that risk.

In Washington it is sometimes heard that this or that person of prominence, known to the public only by name and official position, was out on the town the other night and tried to drive a hotel sofa down the street against the lights. But only a comparative few know such explanatory truths and may divide a statesman's remarks next day by just that much, leaving a quotient of 0, while the world, uninformed, takes them at face value.

G. W. Students To Trace Rise Of Modern Dance

Development of the modern dance will be illustrated in a recital tonight at 8:30 o'clock by students of George Washington University at Woodrow Wilson High School auditorium.

Forty-four students, under direction of Miss Elizabeth Burtner, instructor in physical education, will participate. Dancers will be from the Orchesis and the Junior Dance Group, of George Washington, and from Central High School, the latter developed under direction of Barbara Feiker, Jane Smith and Lucie Petta.

Students of the university's art department, directed by Miss Myrta Williams, designed the costumes, which were made by the fashion economics and costume class of the home economics department under direction of Miss Kathryn Towne.

Japan Pushes Ahead

By Mark J. Ginsbourg

The Significance Of Hainan

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Shanghai.

IN THE EARLY morning of February 10, 1939, while a thick fog still blanketed the Tongking Gulf, a strong Japanese force was landed on Hainan Island, off the southernmost tip of China. Later in the day, under the cover of an aerial barrage, the invading units entered stunned Hoihow and Kiungchow, Hainan's two chief cities.

Thus did the Japanese navy, with one sweeping stroke, redraw the strategic map of the Pacific.

The moment was well chosen. In Europe, Britain was feverishly arming herself in a race with time and Mars. Shorn of her carefully built system of alliances by the Munich agreement, France was preparing to meet Mussolini's demands for a slice of her colonial empire. To the East, the United States was in the midst of a vigorous campaign to buttress the South American markets and minds against Fascist goods and propaganda.

Badly alarmed but impotent for the moment, London, Paris and Washington contented themselves with half-hearted representations. To these, the Japanese navy and foreign office responded with sly assurances that no harm was intended to the western powers and that the occupation of the island was designed merely to check the flow of supplies to China.

These official pledges were taken seriously neither by the outside world nor by the Japanese themselves.

WHILE TOKYO thus engaged in a verbal exchange with the powers concerned, the Japanese navy lost no time in beginning to convert the occupied areas in Hainan into a powerful base. Dredging of Hoihow, a shallow port on the northern coast of Hainan, was started two days after the first landing. Work was also launched on the construction of air fields, near Hoihow and Yulin, an important port on the southern tip of the island. Fortifications were reported from Tokyo to be under construction both in Hoihow and Yulin.

These preparations were wholly incommensurate with Japan's avowed aim of checking the smuggling of war supplies to Kwangtung. If this petty object was alone in view, the newly established Japanese naval base on Waichow Island, in the bay of Tongking, could have served the purpose as well. Obviously, the Tokyo naval general staff was following a plan of much wider political and military dimensions.

Japan's Air Radius Enlarged

IT IS THIS plan—whose existence has been an open secret for many months—that is being studied with extreme care in London, Paris, Washington, Bangkok, Canberra, Manila and The Hague today. It is also this plan which has been responsible for the recent flurry of rearmament in the countries fringing the southwestern edge of the Pacific.

Before analyzing the plan it is useful to have a look at the following table of distances from Hainan to major points of strategical importance in the Pacific:

To Chungking, 800; to Hongkong, 300; to Bangkok, 700; to Singapore, 1,200; to Kunming, 600; to Rangoon, 800; the Tourane, 200; to Manila, 700.

It will be observed that all these points, each of which is a major piece in the grim international game of chess in the Pacific, have been placed with the occupation of Hainan withing striking radius of heavy Japanese bombers. With the defenses of each still woefully inadequate, they can be wiped out in one successful raid by a Japanese air armada based on Hainan.

THIS, then, has been one of the Japanese navy's major objects in seizing Hainan. The Nipponese navy has not only advanced the area of its effective striking power by about 400 miles southward from Formosa. It has also secured a jumping-off base, where it can next bounce upon any of the poorly defended, but rich and eagerly coveted countries in the southwestern Pacific.

While Britain and France may afford to ignore this constant menace for the present, it cannot but exert a profound influence upon the policies of and the public mind in Siam, Burma (where the recent riots were rumored to have been financed by Japanese agents), and the Philippines.

Nor is this all. Until a month ago, the outer defenses of the Japanese Empire were roughly strung along a triangle stretching from Shimushu Island, in the Kurile group (in extreme north), to Kasho Island, south of Formosa, and then to the secretly fortified bases in the mandated Caroline Islands, in the southern Pacific.

The south side of this triangle passed hundreds of miles off the Philippines and did not include Hongkong. With the exception of Guam, the area inclosed within the triangle was a vast expanse of ocean with a thin sprinkling of Japanese islands.

Hongkong Is Now Bottled Up

CONSIDER now the immediate effects of the Japanese seizure of Hainan. The southern side of Japan's outer defense triangle has been pushed 400 miles south, well beyond the southern tip of China. Included within this triangle now are not only a few barren islands, but also Hongkong, Guam and a larger part of Luzon Island, including Manila.

It matters but little that the line is only imaginary. Hongkong has been effectively bottled up and the Philippines have become exposed to attack from both Hainan and the Carolines.

Moreover, a foe, whether the United States, Great Britain or France, must now pierce a new Hainan-Caroline defense line before reaching the second line, stretching between Formosa and the Mariana fortified islands and the third line formed by warships and aircraft operating from bases in Japan proper.

While Japan still has an Achilles heel in the north, where Soviet airplanes and submarines stand ready for action in Vladivostok and Khabarovsk, she has become virtually impregnable in the south with the occupation of Hainan.

THE LATTER island is thus today the western terminus of an intangible, but nevertheless real "Great Wall" in the southern Pacific; it is also the sharp end of the wedge the Japanese navy has been driving south for the past 18 months.

It is not generally realized that Japan today possesses a long line of well equipped naval and air bases strung all along the east Asiatic coast, from Yuki and Rashin in Korea to Waichow and Hainan in the Gulf of Tongking.

While the navy is making every effort to insure strict secrecy, it is known that bases have already been built or are under construction in the Bocca Tigris area (in the immediate proximity to Canton and Hongkong), in Pratas (off Hongkong), in Amoy, in Tsungming and in the Tsingtao area. These bases, forming the western side of the defense triangle, insure Japan's invulnerability from the continent, as far north as the Siberian border.

The creation of the wider defense triangle has not been a mere defensive device. The Japanese navy has gone offensive. While the occupation of Hainan supplies the navy with another base for air raids on Chungking, Kweilin and Kunming and on the new routes linking China with India and Indo-China, it has primarily been a blow to Britain and France.

1,533 Get Old-Age Pensions in D. C.

A total of 1,533 Washingtonians have received old-age insurance payments since January 1, 1937, the Social Security Board announced yesterday. The average lump-sum payment was $68.98.

Applying to commercial and industrial workers, the old-age insurance system now has 277,872 "policies" listed in the District. Of 43,357,589 accounts in the Nation, lump-sum payments, averaging $66.83 have been made to 303,143 persons, the announcement said.

Chicago Students TourCapitalToday

Uniforms will flash in the halls of the Senate and House today when 40 students of Morgan Park Military Academy, of Chicago, arrive in Washington to make a tour of the city as part of their annual spring educational trip.

The boys, with four teachers and the principal, Hugh C. Price, will arrive here today at 8 a. m. on a river steamer from Old Point Comfort, Va. They will visit the Department of Justice as guests of J. Edgar Hoover.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

On Traveling At Home

CROSSING the American Continent a traveler has plenty of time to imagine that he is receiving significant impressions. Nor is this necessarily an illusion provided the traveler does not feel that it is beneath his dignity to have the same impressions as countless travelers before him, that an impression cannot be significant because it is commonplace.

After crossing the plains and the great rivers and the mountains and reaching the Pacific, a man ought to feel vividly that the United States is a very big country. And though that seems obvious enough, he can by reflecting sufficiently on that one impression teach himself some of the most important, and the most neglected, truths of politics. For realizing the sheer size of the United States, even if he knew nothing about it, he would know that here is a country that is physically too big to be managed by anyone from any one place.

He would, therefore, know that it is a country which can remain united only if there is much liberty and much self-reliance in all its regions and communities and enterprises and associations. If the traveler reflects further upon the mere bigness of the country he is crossing, he must conclude, it seems to me, that the unity of a people inhabiting such a continental area must spring, if it is to endure, not from the compulsions of law, nor even as in older and smaller countries from common habits and customs, but from a faith that all the people are devoted to the same ideals. Then he would understand many things that the sophisticated deplore, as for example the civic piety of Americans about the Constitution, and their increasing anger with what they are coming to regard as the heresy of all the revolutionary isms. This anger, he will conclude, comes finally out of an instinctive sense that so big a nation cannot be held together if its common and traditional faith disintegrates.

America Still In The Making

NO LESS commonplace than the impression of the size of America, is its youth. This has been observed so often that one tends to think it cannot be important. Yet it is no less true because it is so familiar that nothing distinguishes America so much from Europe as the fact that America is a Nation which is still in the making, whereas the European nations are nations that have been made.

In central Europe, for example, the Czechs and the Slovaks feel that from the beginning of the world and through all eternity they are Czechs and Slovaks, and if any one disputes it there will be trouble. But in the city of Chicago there are more Czechs than in any other city but Prague, yet the Chicago Czechs are manifestly not eternally Czechs; they do not feel themselves to be, like the Czechs in Prague, the finished product of history. They are being transformed by history in the making. Just as the immigrant Danes, the Saxons and the Normans in England were destined to change their nationality and become the English, so the nationality of the immigrants in Chicago is not something already evolved, but something in evolution.

This is not the only sense in which America is a young nation. America is young in that its people have not settled down permanently in any one place or in any fixed station of life. The American people are still in motion not only from place to place; they also are in motion from one kind of work and one way of living to other kinds of work and other ways of living. There are older communities where there are American families that live in the homes of their ancestors and expect their children to live on in these homes. But they are the exception rather than the rule. The great majority do not feel that they have as yet settled permanently.

Sons Expected To Go Farther

THEY FEEL that they have moved recently and they assume that they or their children will move again. This sense of motion, this sense that their ways of life are not fixed, arises out of the almost universal conviction that the ideal for man is progressive change rather than the use and perfection of that which he has inherited. There are, of course, sons who expect to inherit the business of their fathers, but they also are the exception. The great majority of the fathers expect their sons to follow a different and a better vocation, one that is better paid or socially more admired. Thus education, that passion of the American people, is not, as in older countries, a means for carrying on the traditions of the various classes, but a means by which the children slough off and, as they believe, surpass the traditions of their forefathers.

The problems of America are for these reasons distinctly different from those of Europe. The size of the country with the diversity which that brings with it, the youth of the country which comes from the fact that this is still a nation in the making, and the faith of the people in its ideal of progress which causes them to prefer change to perfection and to prefer ambition to contentment, these are the obvious things which must impress any traveler. From these obvious things there arise the real and less obvious American problems, the problems that the people are thinking and feeling about, and are trying to define, rather than the problems they hear about and read about and argue about.

For they are wondering, it seems to me, whether the things they have always assumed about America are in any fundamental sense altered, whether anything has happened which compels them to see differently than that they have hitherto seen it, the future in America.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

The Unafraid

The world is sorely frightened—
It's stark afraid and blue,
But bravely and in order
The things of spring come through.

Great lands are in a panic—
They tremble at a shot
And by a voice are routed . . .
The daffodils are not!

Great rulers move with caution
Or cringe in misery;
They question time and season—
Not so the dogwood tree!

Dark chaos and disorder
Mark all the works of men . . .
But pussywillows follow
The old ways in the glen.

Uncertainty of action
Fills every state and clime . . .
But in the soft green meadow
The bloodroot blooms on time.

"There is no peace, no pattern!"
Cries mankind in despair . . .
But look along the brook side—
The jack-in-pulpit's there!

All ways of life are shattered—
There is a plan no more,
So say you, but the birches
Gleam as they did before.

All schedules are now hopeless,
Ways of the past are done—
Yet just as through the ages
The buds burst in the sun.

A planet has the jitters—
No man seems unafraid . . .
But there's the same true courage
On hillside and in glade.

"No more do things move smoothly,
Confusion's in full swing,"
Cry millions in deep anguish
Who do not see the spring.

Can You Remember—

Away back when those things we now call dictators used to be exhibited in cages?

And, speaking of that, if the democracies unite in a war against the dictators, how about making Clyde Beatty or Frank Buck commander in chief?

"Chamberlain So Glum He Abandons Umbrella."—Headline. We still lean to a belief that the umbrella walked out on Neville.

With Apologies

When the Hitlers cease to hittle
And the Goerings no more gore;
When no Mussolinis muscle
Into "incidents" galore;
When the Adolfs cease adolfing
Then, and not before then, mister,
Can this little world relax.

"WANTED—Attorney, editorial work, thorough knowledge of the law of wills and trusts; ability digest court decisions accurately, and writing facility. Must be young. $25-$30 week. Corporate Service, 20 Cortlandt street."—New York Times.

Why job-seekers go mad.

Pronunciation Jingles

Dr. Letitia Raubicheck, of the New York public school system, is encouraging better grammar through a series of jingles. A typical one:

"Hent" for "hand" should never stand;
"Terl" for "toil" your speech will spoil.

The temptation to pitch in and help is terrific:

"Tek" for "take" makes eardrums ache;
"Live" for "leave" makes teachers grieve.

"Lest" for "last" outside I'll cast;
At "teenk" for "think" I'll never wink.

And nothing makes my nerves grow thinner
Than "deener" when one speaks of "dinner."

A year ago when Grover Whalen sternly announced that there would be no fan dancers, no bubble dancers and no nudity at his World's Fair, this department put the announcement in its "Wanna Bet?" department. Mr. Whalen was clearly spoofing. The New York Fair is now partners in a Streets of Paris concession which with Billy Rose's Bathing Beauties, will make the Streets of Cairo and Little Egypt seem like Back Bay, Boston, and Old Mother Hubbard.

A New York magistrate is imposing fines on unmuzzled dogs in proportion to the size of the dog. The bigger the pooch, the bigger the menace, he figures. Proving that hizzoner is no judge of dogs. A Great Dane or a St. Bernard is generally the best-natured old thing around, while a Peke, when irritated, can clean up the toughest joint in town.

The Call of Spring

(From the Miami Herald)

"Will exchange Olds coupe (needs paint, no tag) for small boat, outboard or inboard. Box M-103."

"Wanted—Middle-aged gentleman owning outboard, as I have fishing boat. 3003 N. W. Second ave."

Economy In Saddle

By Mark Sullivan

A Majority Mood

REFUSAL of the House to increase the appropriation for agriculture won by only a narrow margin. It was a squeak. At one stage the larger appropriation had a majority, 175 to 171. But in the final vote economy won, 204 to 191.

The other important victory for economy in this Congress, a few weeks ago, was likewise narrow. The cutting of $150,000,000 from the WPA appropriation that the President requested was accomplished in the Senate by only one vote.

The President's renewed request for the extra $150,000,000 will come up shortly. Judged by what happened to the agricultural appropriation, the new WPA appropriation will be treated in the same spirit of economy. The President may get some, even much, of the $150,000,000, but not all. Meanwhile his insistence has led to a Congressional investigation of WPA. Economy is in the saddle. It is not very secure in its seat and it does not move very fast, but it is there.

The majority economy mood is a fruit of last November's election. It is not merely that the number of conservative members of Congress, both Republican and Democratic, was materially increased. There was in addition the psychological effect. Everybody in Congress interpreted that election as meaning that the mood of the country is turning not only toward economy but toward everything that composes conservatism.

THIS JUDGMENT is accepted by nearly everybody in politics. Some are so situated that they cannot afford to admit they accept it. By past actions and utterances they are so far committed to the radical way that no last-minute conversion to conservatism would serve them. The number is small who actually think, or by effort persuade themselves to think, that the radical or so-called liberal thought can prevail in next year's Presidential election. Many a person who in public stands stoutly against conservatism, or for prudence sake remains silent, nevertheless feels that the country is going to take the conservative turn.

This mood for conservatism could express itself in either Republican victory next year, or else in control of the Democratic Party by the conservative element, and victory of that party with a conservative candidate.

Within the Democratic Party the struggle of the conservatives to control is heartened by the signs of the times. Symbol of the conservative group is Vice President Garner. He is more than a symbol. The movement to get the Democratic Presidential nomination for him is genuine. The persons who have brought this movement into the concrete form of seeking delegates, did not consult Mr. Garner before they began. After they began Mr. Garner took the position that he would not interfere with the movement. The judgment of Mr. Garner's associates is that he really wants that nomination.

ANOTHER SIGN of the seriousness with which Mr. Garner takes the movement in his behalf is the scruple with which he avoids overt breach with President Roosevelt. Mr. Garner will never take a step that will give Mr. Roosevelt occasion to exercise against him the power of veto which everybody concedes Mr. Roosevelt could put upon any candidate for the Democratic nomination whom he affirmatively disapproves. When the President's government reorganization measure (greatly de-natured) was before the Senate, and it looked as if the vote might be a tie, with the Vice President called upon to cast the deciding vote, it was the understanding of persons well informed that Mr. Garner would have voted for the President's measure.

Mr. Garner preserves peace with Mr. Roosevelt. He wants—whether for himself or for any other conservative who may get the nomination—that there shall be no breach in the Democratic party, no occasion for Mr. Roosevelt to refuse to support the nominee.

If open breach comes between the President and Mr. Garner, or between the President and the conservative Democrats generally, it will be Mr. Roosevelt who initiates it. Whether Mr. Roosevelt will do this is for those to guess who think they understand his temperament. Though Mr. Garner in public practices prudent silence, nevertheless, in the whispering gallery that political Washington is, Mr. Roosevelt undoubtedly becomes aware of private expressions of criticism of some of the President's policies that may be made either by Mr. Garner or by the coterie of conservative Democrats who compose his personal circle.

IF MR. ROOSEVELT should set himself against the Garner movement, that would end it. That Mr. Roosevelt has a veto power over the nomination everyone concedes. In that event, the Garner strength might of its own initiative move over to the support of Secretary of State Hull. Against Mr. Hull the President could have no objection of the sort he might readily have to Mr. Garner. Mr. Hull is in his Cabinet.

At the same time Mr. Hull would be as acceptable to the conservative Democrats as Mr. Garner. He has not been identified with the Administration's more radical measures. He has stuck to his function of Secretary of State and has done it well.

Whoever the individual may be, the clear sign is that the Democratic Presidential nominee next year will be a conservative—a conservative who does not excite Mr. Roosevelt's hostility, but a conservative. The only development that could upset this probability would be candidacy of Mr. Roosevelt himself. Entry of Mr. Roosevelt into the race would send the contents of the apple-cart scattering in unforeseeable directions.

Peace In Spain

By Barnet Nover

After The Civil War, What?

WITH THE surrender of Madrid and the collapse of republican resistance elsewhere in the peninsula, the Spanish civil war has come to an end. But the major questions posed by that ghastly struggle have not been settled by the victory of the Franco forces. These issues remain to plague Spain and to plague the world.

Since July, 1936, when the civil war began, the problem of Spain has been a two-fold one. There was the question regarding the regime under which the nation was to be governed. That question was basic. But almost from the outset the domestic implications of the struggle were overshadowed by the international aspects. To an important degree that still remains true today.

THE QUESTION regarding Spain's future regime has now been settled, but only in a negative sense. The republic of 1931 is dead. But whether Spain will revert to a monarchy, as some of Franco's most ardent supporters desire, and what kind of a monarchy, or whether the country will be ruled as a dictatorship, and what kind of a dictatorship, is far from clear.

Defeat is a dissolvent of unity, as shown by the events that occurred in republican Spain after the fall of Barcelona. On the other hand, victory does not necessarily make for cohesion.

Behind Franco's lines a struggle has been going on which mirrors, if in curiously distorted fashion, the struggle that has been raging in Spain for years. That struggle can be broadly described as one between the traditionalists and those desiring broad-based changes.

Falange Wants Sweeping Changes

THE LATTER ELEMENT is chiefly represented by the Falange Espanol, the Spanish Phalanx, which insists on a reorganization of Spain along totalitarian lines, with the dictator carrying through sweeping changes not only in the political system, but also in the field of industry, agriculture and civil reforms.

The Falange, in other words, "aspires to national revolution," to cite its own program. That program therefore, is directly hostile to the desire of the traditionalists to bring back Spain to her old moorings, restoring all that the republic destroyed, destroying all that the republic put into effect.

Franco thus rides a team which tends to move in opposite directions. But as long as there was the promise of victory, he was able to keep in check the centrifugal forces within his ranks. It may not be easy to do so now.

IN A SENSE, therefore, it can be said that Franco's task has now only just begun, and that task is not made any easier by the terrible amount of bloodletting and destruction which has occurred in Spain during the past 2½ years.

Nor will he have an easy time resolving the international aspects of his victory.

It is somewhat naive to assume, as some British and French statesmen do, that Germany and Italy, which contributed mightily to Franco's victory, will be content with glory alone. Even if the international situation were far different than it is, Germany and Italy would be under strong compulsion to capitalize their contributions, to get valuable concessions out of nationalist Spain as a reward for services rendered. But that compulsion is enormously accentuated by present exigencies.

LET US LOOK at the facts. Last Sunday, Premier Mussolini partly unveiled his latest program of colonial expansion. He didn't clearly specify just what he wants with regard to Tunisia, Djibouti and the Suez Canal. But he did indicate that when he does make his detailed wants known, France had better not give "No" for an answer.

To this Premier Daladier has replied offering to negotiate with Italy if definite proposals are made by the Fascist government and if no cession of territory is asked. A long period of jockeying is indicated. But the final result of this struggle will depend less on diplomatic skill than on the apparatus of force which each side can muster to support its diplomatic position.

With his troops remaining in Spain and with Franco as an ally, Mussolini would have a powerful counter in this game of power politics. To relinquish it would place him in a position of decided disadvantage. There is every reason to believe, therefore, that he will do all in his power to prevent any weakening of his position in Spain.

Germany's Stake Is Considerable

HOW ABOUT HITLER? The Spanish civil war was a factor of incalculable value in enabling him to go ahead with his plan of expansion in central Europe. The disturbed situation in the western Mediterranean, the fear of Great Britain and France that the fires raging in Spain might ignite all Europe, and last, but not least, the preoccupation of his Italian ally with the Spanish struggle, enabled him to overrun Austria and ultimately to destroy Czecho-Slovakia.

The Fuehrer's present efforts, as the plain-spoken warning to Poland reveals, is to prevent the formation of a powerful anti-German coalition. He is particularly anxious to retain the free hand he enjoys in eastern Europe so that when the time comes for a showdown with Great Britain and France he can throw Germany's full weight against the democratic powers.

There does not appear to be the slightest possibility that Nationalist Spain, now or for a long time, could be induced to join any Franco-British camp. But that fact is of only negative interest to the Fuehrer. The important fact to Germany at the moment is that Franco's Spain can be used to surround France as France, in conjunction with Britain, is today seeking to surround Germany.

THUS IT IS that, while the struggle in Spain is over, the struggle for Spain is not over at all. It has, on the contrary, only entered a new stage, not less important because it coincides with a new and critical stage in the European situation.

Dunbar Gallery Dedication Today

An art gallery will be dedicated today in honor of the late Thomas W. Hunster, first director of art in the colored public schools of the District, at 2 p. m. in Dunbar High School.

Art books and prints given by the Carnegie Corporation of New York form the collections in the gallery.

Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson will be the speaker. A portrait of Hunster will be unveiled by A. K. Savoy, assistant superintendent in charge of colored schools, and Walter L. Smith, principal, will extend thanks to the Carnegie Corporation. Mrs. Rosa N. Hampton will preside.

Poster Contest Ends Tomorrow

Posters entered by Georgetown children in the Recreation Guide cover contest must be submitted by tomorrow, the recreation committee of the Georgetown Neighborhood Council announced yesterday.

Entries are received at the Georgetown Branch Public Library. Judging will be 3:30 p. m. Saturday. Children between 11 and 16 are eligible, with a week in summer camp as first prize. Judges will be Dr. R. H. Myer, Mrs. Francoise Bell, Richard Kenah and Mrs. Robert Goodale.

Formal Washington Easter

Pineapple Confection

Like a lush fresh pineapple, the little turban perches forward on the girl's head, above. It is definitely Hawaiian in feeling and is made entirely by hand of countless loops of rural hedge braid in warm shades of toast. The snood is cranberry colored, a delicious concoction, designed for memorable Easter wear by G. Howard Hodge.

Flower Hedge

If this Easter must be a compromise with last year's wardrobe, why not try this prescription? Revive your old navy or black suit with a flower hedge bonnet of all the posies that bloom in the spring.

THE FASHION SELECTIONS on this page present a preview of the ensembles and accessories you may be seeing on April 9— and from then on late into spring. They have been chosen as a last minute cue to those late shoppers who dream of beautifully groomed Easters but who do little about it until they notice everyone else gowned in dashing new creations. A practical eye has been focused on the basic coats and frocks pictured here, but there are a few frank whimsies, such as that pineapple chapeau. For what is Easter without a silly or gay admission of feminine weakness? For fashion information concerning these styles, telephone The Post Fashion Editor, Marshall Adams, between 10 and 6 o'clock.

Genteel Accompaniment

As refined and ladylike as the baum martens she carries is the topcoat worn by the blonde, above. Hers is one of those superb all-around town coats—as lovely over a silk print for Easter Sunday as for important business appointments—worn over a tailored shirtwaist. Lewispun tweed is the fabric, which is made up in cool chalk box colors.

Chalk Stripes

The sleek town coat, above, has the same quiet rightness of a man's banker-grey business suit. Correct and commendable, this topper is of chalk-striped worsted. Its slim waist is fastened with two great buttons, its sleeves are loose and easy. Double silver foxes and a black-veiled white sailor produce an enviable ensemble for strolls along the avenue. This Easter ensemble was applauded recently at a fashion showing held at Hotel 2400.

Mad Hatter

Lana Turner, vivacious screen starlet, selects this bonnet, which she calls "Mad Hatter," for her Easter promenade along Hollywood boulevard. It is of navy pebble straw, its silly little "Happy Hooligan" crown swathed in taffeta and veiling. This hat, now part of the local scene, might be just as fetching on many a Washington lass.

Orchard Time

Fruits, fresh and natural-looking, have traveled from orchard to town to sweeten the Easter Sunday frock, above. Pears and strawberries—apples and cherries—thrive in white silhouette on this black silk crepe dress. This type of shirtmaker frock that looks like a coat has the indorsement of Parisian designers this spring.

Bed of Roses

A flower bed of pink and crimson and scarlet roses nestles under the ledge of milan straw, above. Quaint and picturesque for Easter eggnog parties. Harryson, the designing magician who plucked the French silk roses for this hat, also surrounded the model in a net of veiling.

Cosmetic Colors

A fashion trick that has gained new converts with the arrival of spring is perfect color matching of bag, shoes and cosmetic selections. Typical of this triple entente are the open-work sandals, handsomely fitted bag and the beautifying contents therein. A famous beauty specialist originated this pleasant idea of matching the color of your lips with the color on your feet.

Pin Checked

Here is one of Washington's best formulas for spring-into-summer. It is black and white silk taffeta, done in neat checks, as small as a pinpoint. Its bolero has white pique revers. The pleated dress beneath has a jabot bodice, finished off with black buttons. Cool, crisp, wearable from now on.

Easter In The Country

Artless Charmer

The blouse, above, possesses the beguiling freshness of babie's underthings. It is just as simple and innocent of of wiles, too. The charming suit accompaniment is in white waffle pique, tailored, minus a collar.

Gallantly Caped

Few country ensembles have the dash of a cape costume—at the same time being as nicely tailored as the one above. It comprises a gored woolen skirt and a three-quarter length cape of Glen Urguhart plaid, in such breath-taking combinations as pink and green, grape and white, and red, green and blue.

IF YOU DON'T REACT TO ALL THE POMP AND circumstances of an Easter Sunday in town, the casual styles on this page may be to your liking. They are definitely NOT Easter egg styles. Plain, tailored to a T, simple and right they are. They will stand you in good stead during the wear and tear they receive in a country setting as well as during your visit on April 9 to your favorite small town church. There isn't a fashion here that is not functional and easy for almost any type to wear. Pick your fashion preferences. All of the styles on this page are obtainable locally. For additional information, call Marshall Adams, The Post Fashion Editor, NAtional 4200, between 10 and 6 o'clock.

Petticoat Fever

White eyelet batiste ruffles form petticoat flounces on the two quaint little frocks above. These dainty white touches edge the scalloped necklines of the twin silk crepes worn by sisters of eight and twelve. These Sunday-go-to-meeting frocks are flower-printed in white and blue. The Easter bonnets are as Victorian as an antimacassar.

Younger Crowd

Nora Corbin, astute designer of younger crowd fashions, cut the classic sports coat above. Although created for childishly-chubby growing girls, this broad-shouldered box coat is equally good on gawky oldsters. An excellent Easter gift, instead of chocolate eggs, from practical minded parents.

Open Road

That's the name of the soft felt topper, shown above. It is in country-fresh pastel tones, such as orchid, bois de rose, acqua, and is of lightweight summer felt. Its peaked crown is accented with a wide suede band of deep garnet, royal or brown. Good for casual Easter dressers.

OLD SOUTH

Have the moonlight-and magnolia glamour of a Southern belle in this sheer, floating, white organdy with wide waltzing skirt circled with ruffles. Its snowy whiteness is set off by demure little black silk bows here and there.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Daughter of Prominent Man Is Interested in Unknown Newcomer; How Secure "Proper Introduction?"

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: How to be properly introduced to a young man with whom I am friendly is my problem. This is the situation: I am a girl nearly 20 years old and reside in a small city. My family is quite prominent and I am well known because of my father and because of my outstanding school activities. Recently a young man called at our home to consult my father on a business matter. This young man is engaged in an honorable business here in town. He and I haven't been properly introduced although we have talked to each other since we first met at my home.

Mother has instilled into my very being certain proprieties, one of which is the necessity of being properly introduced to any young man. But since this man has been in business here only a short time and lives in another city he knows very few people here. I know so little about him that it would be difficult to judge fairly and exactly just what sort of man he is. Nevertheless, I have endeavored to "draw him out," somewhat, but in such a manner as not to seem too inquisitive. He is not very talkative.

However, he says that he doesn't attend public dances, smoke or drink and is a Protestant (as I am). But I notice that he doesn't practice some of the little courtesies which women expect and receive from polite, refined gentlemen. This makes me a little wary of him. I have made him understand that before I can really enjoy his friendship, he will have to find someone (whom we both know and who is quite commendable) to introduce us.

He seems to be at a loss to know what to do. He doesn't seem to know how to "take the bull by the horns," and find a way to secure an introduction. I am hesitant to offer too many suggestions, as that would make me appear too "anxious." As a last resort, I suggested that he have my father introduce us—although that wouldn't be too advisable, for father knows nothing about his family or background and for that reason may prohibit my accepting his real friendship. We just must be introduced in the right manner, for the first questions father will ask are: "How did you met him?" "Who is he?"

I shall appreciate it if you will offer some advice as to how I should act toward him, so as to retain his respect for me. And will you tell me, too, how we may acquire a proper introduction? Please answer soon. PUZZLED.

Co-operation Vs. Aggression

DEAR PUZZLED: What you really want, it appears, is for someone to come forward and vouch for this young man's essential decency of character. Obviously, the only person who could perform that service would be one who was well acquainted and favorably impressed with his background and performance. Equally obviously, no such person exists in your immediate environment. Therefore, we must conclude that there is nothing which you, personally, can do to promote the desired "proper introduction."

It is problematic whether suitable sponsorship is available to the young man in his background. It is logical to assume that if he were accustomed to associating with girls of your sort—i. e., those who abide by the conventionalities—he could and would, almost immediately, produce acceptable credentials. He would fetch letters of indorsement (not necessarily letters of introduction) from such persons as his banker at home; or his minister; or a former teacher; or old family friends; or parents of contemporary-age friends, and present such leters to your father along with a courteous request to be allowed to call upon you at your home. The fact that such possibilities have not occurred to him—or, at least, have not been acted upon—suggest that he is a complete stranger to your way of life.

While it is not necessarily to a person's discredit to be unschooled in the technicalities of conventional procedure, I think it may safely be said that a genuine diamond-in-the-rough invariably possesses instincts which adequately compensate for lack of formal training. Thus, if this young man belonged by nature, if not by circumstance, to that level of society which your family represents. I am confident that he would know better than he seems to, how to go about getting himself on your calling list with the approval of all those rightfully concerned.

As for how "to retain his respect," it is my belief that a girl who is deserving of respect has only to be herself in order to compel the respect of any intelligent man. The sort of man who would misconstrue a nice girl's naive friendliness as an invitation to familiarity is merely damning himself, by reading his own polluted thinking into the record.

However, I think you have already gone more than half way in your efforts to negotiate a friendship in this instance, and that you would be awkwardly overreaching yourself in further minimizing the young man's appropriate responsibility in the matter. You have shown yourself to be interested, approachable and co-operative. I am sure you do not wish to be aggressive or managerial. From now on, it is very definitely the young man's problem to work out ways and means of underwriting his social acceptability. If he remains limply inadequate to the demands of the situation, you will have to dismiss him as a hopeless prospect, as a person who is essentially inelegible for admittance to your circle of friends. M. H.

Picture Hat Wins Masculine Approval

The wide-brimmed, pink straw hat trimmed with water lilies, worn by the girl at center above, was given the palm for the "type of hat men like most" when a men's jury in New York recently passed upon feminine headgear. Second place went the navy picot ribbon chou worn by the girl at upper left, and third place to the bluish white toyo turban flanged in deep red felt, shown at upper right

Directly above is Florence Reichman's personal selection of a new looking and really smart Easter bonnet. It is pancake size and shape, modeled somewhat after the World Fair theme with its perisphere cushion base of shiny straw. Its pointed trylon of paler straw is topped by two impertinent feathers ending in a cobwebby veil

Men Prefer Big, Soft Hats On Women

11 N. Y. Sophisticates And Laundry Sales Promoter Unanimous

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

WHAT kind of hats do men like to see women wear? What are the colors and shapes that make husbands and beaux sigh with appreciation, rather than cry aloud every time spring comes around with its landslide of giddy sizes and styles? Is the masculine preference toward expensive simplicity or unbridled rashness in millinery?

MARSHALL ADAMS

Tradition has it that men of discrimination like their women in small, chic hats—the kind of turban that Mrs. Harrison Williams and Joan Bennett wear so well. Well, tradition must be on a holiday, for the small smart hat angle was disapproved at a recent hat trial sponsored in a Manhattan hotel by Florence Reichman, New York millinery stylist. The little hat overwhelmingly gave way to a masculine preference for large, soft, romantic types.

Like "Sheltered" Look

Miss Reichman, a "designing" woman of action, was distressed over the slurs being made around town about the colorful new corps of spring bonnets that she and her sister modistes were hatching for Easter wear. Being a realist, she decided to put the vote up to the men themselves.

A jury of New York men-about-town attended Miss Reichman's preview, and decisions resulted: First, that the large, sentimental brimmed hat had secretly been their favorite from school days; second, that they liked a woman to look sheltered and feminine, rather than being so chic in "terrific" little hats that the defenseless male was abashed, by her.

Miss Reichman's method of obtaining new jurors was novel. After she had tirelessly assembled her little midinettes and placed beautiful straw hat bodies and trimmings in their skilled fingers, she called upon 11 of New York's most urban and sophisticated men about town. Among them were such feminine appraisers as Count Rene Bouet-Willuamez, internationally known fashion artist; John C. Fistere, architectural authority; Donald Deskey, industrial designer, and even a professional humorist, Gelett Burgess.

But They Still Wear 'Em

The coup came with the selec-selection of "the man on the street," whose selection Miss Reichman insisted upon, just to balance the sophists' point of view. Miss Reichman dauntlessly dashed out into New York's street scene and rescued her every-day man, Herbert Rosenthal, from an uneventful afternoon of laundry sales promotion.

Despite varied walks of life and viewpoints, the softly shaded, picture hat appealed to all judges, especially to Mr. Rosenthal, in contrast to a fetching collection of very ultra toques, turbans, sailors and pill boxes.

Women Like Small Hats

But notwithstanding the quaintness of big softie hats, the women themselves seem to get more set in their preference for small hats. Each day, local shops are claiming new converts to the small, neat cloche or the little suit sailor—with its absurd Hooligan crown. Miss Reichman herself goes on her chic way making and wearing tiny, beautifully executed toppers, each one perching well forword on the forehead, expectant, but not quite ready to fly away at the puff of a March wind.

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

The Lost Chord

THE "BIG NAVY" man was almost apoplectic in his indignation. "This is what the pacifists have brought us to," he exclaimed. "Why—why we haven't even the navy yards to build ships enough! And then blowing up the Washington in 1924! A perfectly good, new $45,000,000 battleship!"

She could not forget his words. Was there—could there have been a day when the world was safe enough for this Nation, for any nation, to sink its own armaments? And now . . . Seven new battleships authorized, the papers had said. And 6,000 airplanes!

IT CONTINUED to haunt her, this sinking of the Washington. While now it had become only a vague memory, yet she knew that all the peace societies and all the women's clubs had hailed the gesture as the dawn of a new era of reason, harmony, security. And everyone reading the news had immediately felt assured, happy, safe. This was the tangible fruit of the Disarmament Conference that two and a half years earlier had met with such valiant hopes in Washington. This was the end of wars—the beginning of peace.

WHAT COULD it have been like, anyway, that vague and distant world of 1924? No newsboys raucously calling headlines that made one flinch. No ominous voices coming over the radio. No sense of fear . . . of helplessness, of waiting . . . waiting . . .

She was seized with a sudden nostalgia for this past, a sudden curiosity concerning it. Well, at least she could escape into it, sense its tranquility for even a few minutes, she thought, as she turned the yellowing pages of the old newspapers. Ah—there it was! November 25, 1924, with its morning-after chronicles of what had been a day of brightest hope and promise in Washington.

What was this big front page picture? Mrs. Coolidge, a mass of flowers at her belt, and in the background the long, graceful new dirigible, the Los Angeles that she had just christened. "DEDICATED TO PEACE," the headline said. The text added: "Built for non-military purposes under the treaty with Germany."

At the conclusion of the christening a flock of white pigeons had been released, and had flown away carrying this message: "And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the Heavenly host praising God and saying 'Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will to men.'"

ANOTHER heading caught her attention: "WASHINGTON SUNK BY GUNFIRE OF THE TEXAS." The nearly completed battleship, related the story, had been sent to the bottom of the ocean off the Virginia Capes "at 10:58 yesterday morning," in fulfillment of the Washington treaty for limitation of naval armament. And around 5 o'clock in the afternoon the newly christened Los Angeles had soared away from the Naval Air Station at Anacostia to its career of "peaceful pursuits."

That had been on Tuesday, two days before Thanksgiving, she reflected. The tang of winter must have been in the air, and the brown oak leaves rattling on their branches, and the sun sinking early and far to the southward behind the forests across the Potomac. And everyone must have been full of plans for Thanksgiving . . . and carrying lilting thoughts of Christmas which was just around the corner . . . and wondering whether or not it was going to be a cold winter, and if times would keep on getting better.

YES, SHE THOUGHT, as she turned the pages of the dingy paper, it had been a world of small and safe concerns compared with that of today. Charlie Chaplin had just married his leading lady, Lita Grey. Sir Esme Howard and Col. George Harvey had spoken in a test to span the sea by radio. Leonard Kip Rhinelander had filed a suit to annul his marriage. A Florida man had won a countess as a mail order bride. Nora Bayes was at a local theater. Women were wearing hats like helmets bashed down over their eyes, collarless dresses that hung on them like flower sacks with belts at the hipline, and skirts so tight at the bottom they revealed their legs to the knee when they boarded street cars.

That was the world that was so safe that a battleship could be sunk!

And now more must be built. It was puzzling. Had everyone really been too naive before? . . . "Force is the only power!" the dictators kept thundering. And apparently the only answer to them was in terms of their own "blood and iron."

And yet . . . well, might it not have been some something merely to have had the vision of peace? "Without vision a people perish." What would life have been like today without vision—the vision of artists, of philosophers, of industrialists, of scientists? No, the high hopes of 1924 were not lost. They would always be remembered as something "seen in part" of more perfect things to come.

Understand Your Children

"Billy's always running away—what can I do?" So many mothers have this problem, need the advice of an authority on child training.

"Don't think of running away as naughtiness," such child specialists say. It's all part of your child's natural desire to explore, to find out what goes on beyond his own bacy yard.

Instead of punishing him, take him on little tours of exploration—exciting adventures you'll both enjoy.

But don't try to do his thinking for him. You want him to grow up independent, resourceful—so let him do things for himself, make his own choices. At an early age let him decide such questions as "What suit to wear?" "What book to read?"

But he'll never achieve independence of thought if you try to make him over according to your own dream pattern.

Too many parents make that mistake. Mother, who dreamed of becoming a concert pianist, keeps Daughter hammering the scales. Dad, who wanted to study medicine, constantly reminds Sonny, "You'll be a doctor when you grow up."

Better to help him discover his own interests. If you try to fit your "square peg" into a round hole, he develops a sense of failure that may follow him through life.

Collecting "Coolth" for Summer Bedrooms

by "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

So many people seemed interested in our "cushion-dot corner" which I described last time, that today I'm talking about summer bedrooms again. I've found the most perfect "three-some" for a summer bedroom, made of a filmy (but firm) new fabric, a sort of sheer madras with stripes that are chenille-like in appearance. The spread for the bed is beautifully made with a deep, fluffy-ruffle flounce as crisp as beaten egg-whites. It costs only 3.98, in single or full size, and there is a matching skirt for your boudoir table for only 2.98 with festoon valance curtains to match at the same price. The colors look good enough to eat—cool, summery shades of blue, maize, green, dusty rose, peach as well as ecru and ivory.

Consult Mary Annette or any of our other decorators at any time, without charge or obligation whatsoever; or, if you prefer an appointment, call NAtional 5100, Branch 500.

Your Figure Madam

By Ida Jean Kain

Modern Businesswoman Must Be Slim New York Policewomen Are an Example Will Lose Jobs if They Get Fat

WHAT DO YOU think is one of the biggest pitfalls to be avoided by the rookies in New York's force of policewomen? Obeesity! When a new group was taken into the department recently the police commissioner expressly warned them against getting fat.

And he was quite explicit about it! He said he did not want to see his recruits taking on weight—rapidly, or at all. He recommended that they watch their diets, climb stairs instead of taking elevators and get plenty of exercise to keep themselves in trim.

At this point you may visualize the feminine contingent in the metropolitan force as a husky group of young women, distinguished for their pronounced biceps. If so, you are very much in error. The most noticeable thing about them is their smart and very attractive appearance.

Well-Built and Slim

They are well-built and slim rather than muscular. You might even call them streamlined. So far as I could learn, none of them had made any particular hobby of exercise before joining the force. But they are all in excellent condition; they had to be to pass the tests—and are expected to stay that way.

Part of their preliminary training was a rigorous drilling in calisthenics and in the finer points of ju-jitsu. Since they put in about three hours a day at these workouts (Whew!) they are no doubt seriously impressed with the importance attached to physical fitness. Besides, if they do not keep in trim, they are subject to dismissal. It is a safe bet they follow the commissioner's suggestions.

In all positions where health and efficiency are essential, the persons in authority have come to regard obesity as a handicap to both. Excess weight is a burden on the muscles, the circulatory system and the heart; slows you up and causes you to tire much more quickly than you would with normal weight.

The business woman who is her own boss in the matters of weight control and exercise would do well to recognize their necessity. In a way, it is too bad that we don't all have some particular motive for looking after ourselves. The women whose jobs require them to keep their weight perfect don't seem to have very much trouble in doing it, and this is true of the movie star, the airline hostess, the policewoman and even of the figure columnist! When you have to keep your weight down, you don't dilly-dally about it or wonder if you can. You do.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Director Reports Startling Shortage Of Show Girls in N. Y.

Howard Hughes Is Going Back Into Pictures

New York, March 29.

DON'T PACK your bags, girls, but there's a startling shortage of "show girls" in New York. Show-girl is the technical term for the lithe, long-legged beauty who just saunters up and down looking lovely and remote. John Murray Anderson, who is staging Billy Rose's Aquacade for our World's Fair, is authority for this alarming news.

"Last season there were only three musical shows on Broadway," says the maestro, "and most of the show girls went to Hollywood or took up modeling. Now Broadway has a lot of musical comedies, and good show-girls are scarce." I know that what Murray says is true, for practically all the popular photographic and fashion-show mannequins are the rangy beauties, built like Princeton ends, only prettier, of the type once exhibited by the late Flo Ziegfeld in his girl shows.

Watching Anderson run a rehearsal of one of these enormous spectacles is more fun than seeing the show itself. He has been putting 300 lads and lassies—swimmers, dancers and mere parraders—through their Aquacade paces at the former Manhattan Opera House. What gives zing to the sight is the fact that Anderson has a nickname for everyone connected with the troupe—and in some occult fashion he identifies each one that way. In his current show he calls some of the girls "Dry Ice," "Child Frightener," "Free Killer" and "Spaniel." One big, beautiful brunette show-girl he has dubbed "Butch." Faugh!

He even tags the bosses with old handles. Rose he calls "The Mad Emperor," and Raoul Pene du Bois, costume designer, is "One More Spring." Oh yes, a John Murray Anderson rehearsal is the nearest thing to the circus of our childhoods—with the master tooting a police whistle, screaming orders and making a show out of an unruly mob of kids. Wish you would drop 'round with me.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Local gossipers of the free-swinging school did their little best to whip up a romance between Howard Hughes, the millionaire flier, and Brenda Frazier when he visited the top deb in Nassau recently. A'so blather. The truth is that Hughes is going back into pictures with a bang, and wanted to talk a film tryout with the local pet.

As expected, our World's Fair ran off a beauty contest to pick the "World's Fairest." This stake was in three classes—blondes, brunettes and carrot-tops. The No. 7 blonde chosen was Adele Jergens, tall, pretty and very soothing in a bathing suit. Then Adele hurled a dart in the party. "My hair is touched up," she told ye press, "But I guess everyone does it. Anyway, there nothing against it in the rules, is there?" Everyone calmed Adele and each other, and the ace blonde of the Fair gets her golden locks with the aid of the beautician's art. Anybody want to make anything of it?

3 Generations of Alexander Graham Bell's Descendants Attend Premiere of Film

Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Daughter Of Telephone's Inventor, Grandchildren And Great-Grandchildren in Audience

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

SOCIAL AND OFFICIAL notables turned out in droves last night for the premiere showing of the film, "The Story of Alexander Graham Bell," at Constitution Hall. The preview, screened under the auspices of the National Geographic Society, was in compliment to Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, daughter of Dr. Bell.

Hundreds of the Capital's outstanding residents saw the picture, which presents an epoch in the life of Bell when he was working on the invention that made him famous. Among those in the audience were three generations of the noted man's descendants—Mrs. Grosvenor; Melville Bell Grosvenor, a grandson; Dr. Mabel Grosvenor, Mrs. Walter Kendall Myers, and Gloria Grosvenor, granddaughters; and Helen Grosvenor, Alexander Graham Bell Grosvenor, and Gilbert Melville Grosvenor, great grandchildren. The Grosvenor clan arrived shortly before time for the performance and graciously posed for the flock of photographers awaiting them. Coming in with Mrs. Grosvenor was Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, who wore a purple chiffon frock under a metal cloth cape and a matching petal turban. Mrs. Grosvenor had on a black velvet coat with an ermine collar over a trim shirt-waist frock, made with a blouse of dark red and a skirt in two tones of gray.

Almost a full row in the center section was reserved for Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor and members of their party. Other relatives of Dr. Bell in the audience were Mrs. Melville Bell Grosvenor, Dr. Walter Kendall Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Ker, Miss Anita Ker, Mrs. William Ker, Dr. and Mrs. Harry H. Kerr, Mrs. James Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. Dion Kerr, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Laing, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McIlvaine Harris, Miss Aileen Harris, Mrs. Charles M. Marsh, Miss Betty Marsh, Miss Genevieve Marsh, Miss Theodora McCurdy, Mr. and Mrs. Julien A. Ripley, jr. Present also were Judge Robert Marsh, of New York City, a cousin of the late Mrs. Aleander Graham Bell (Mabel Hubbard) and Mrs. Marsh and their two children.

Dr. Grosvenor Welcomes Guests

From 7:45 o'clock until time for the show to begin, a steady stream of "big names" poured into Constitution Hall by all three entrances. In dinner clothes and street attire, the hundreds who made up the audience were, for the most part, there well ahead of time. Some of those who were not so prompt arrived to find the doors closed until after Dr. Grosvenor, in a brief talk, welcomed the guests on behalf of the society, of which Dr. Bell was an early president.

Many in the crowd remembered Dr. Bell, and a sizable group knew him well. Several in the audience attended his famous Wednesday evening meetings of distinguished scientists held at his residence here each winter for a number of years. Dr. Charles G. Abbot was in that group; also, Maj. William Bowie, Dr. Hugh M. Smith, Dr. C. Whitman Cross, Dr. Nelson H. Darton, Dr. Joahn A. Fleming, Dr. Austin Clark, Dr. W. D. Mendenall, Dr. C. Hart Merriam, who is one of the two living founders of the National Geographic Society; Dr. George R. Putnam, Dr. Walter T. Swingle, and Dr. Carl W. Mitman.

Many Notables In Audience

Among early arrivals last evening were Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, who, with her son, Douglas Hall, occupied a box. Admiral and Mrs. William D. Leahy also came in plenty of time to find their seats and have a look at the crowd before the picture began. The Right Rev. James Freeman, Bishop of Washington, was there with Mrs. Freeman, and still others seen coming in were Senator and Mrs. Wallace H. White; Representative and Mrs. Bruce Barton, the latter wearing a white ermine jacket over a black velvet frock; Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, whose bright red velvet frock was a gay splash of color in a box; Mme. Mehmet Munir Ertegun, wife of the Ambassador of Turkey, and the Minister of Portugal and Mme. de Bianchi.

Mrs. Charles M. Lea was in the audience; also, Maj. and Mrs. David Barry, Maj. and Mrs. E. Goring Bliss, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ralston Holmes, Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan, Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans, Mrs. Joseph Washington, Rear Admiral and Mrs. James O. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Wade H. Ellis, Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Hogan, Mr. and Mrs. Robert V. Fleming, Capt. Robert A. Bartlett, Arctic explorer; Dr. and Mrs. William M. Mann, Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Col. and Mrs. Edward B. Clark, Commander and Mrs. Alex Wotherspoon, Judge and Mrs. Charles W. Woodward, Mr. and Mrs. Corcoran Thom, Mr. and Mrs. Austin H. Clark, Dr. and Mrs. George F. Bowerman, Dr. L. S. Rowe, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Bittinger, Dr. and Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom and their daughter, Miss Vera Bloom; Representative Joseph W. Martin, jr.; Mr. and Mrs. C. Powell Minnigerode, Mrs. Oscar Westover and scores of others.

Mrs. Dennis Is Married To Col. Clark

Family and Friends Witness Ceremony At Her Home

At a ceremony witnessed only by family and close friends, Mrs. Alfred Pearce Dennis was married yesterday to Col. Elmer White Clark, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Clark, of Philadelphia. The bride is the former Mary Value Dennis, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Value, of Princess Anne, Md.

The marriage was performed at noon at the home of the bride, 800 Twenty-first street, by the Rev. Oliver J. Hart, of St. John's Church. Col. Burnside Value gave his sister in marriage, and little Renee Value, her niece, was her flower girl and only attendant. Walter A. Silliman, brother-in-law of Col. Clark, was best man.

A small luncheon followed the ceremony, after which the couple left for New York, where they will sail today for a West Indies cruise. They will be at home after May 10 at 800 Twenty-first street.

Mrs. Clark formerly was married to Alfred Pearce Dennis, who was vice chairman of the Tariff Commission before his death in 1931. Col. Clark is assistant administrator of PWA.

Mrs. W. O. Douglas Luncheon Guest Of Miss Johnson

Mrs. William O. Douglas, wife of the Supreme Court nominee, was guest of honor yesterday at a luncheon given Miss Mary V. Johnson. Mrs. Douglas and Miss Johnson are close friends and frequently play badminton together.

The party was one in a series of fetes centering around the popular wife of the appointee. Huge pansies were favors, and the ball of conversation was kept lightly aloft for more than two hours.

Among the guests was one of Washington's cleverest official hostesses, Mrs. Thurman Arnold, wife of the Assistant Attorney General, who knew Mrs. Douglas and her husband when both the latter and Mr. Arnold were teaching at Yale. Still others in the company were Mrs. John O. Herrick, Mrs. J. Fred Essary and Mrs. Bulkley Griffin.

Author Guest Of Dr. White

Dr. Arthur E. Hertzler, of Halstead, Kans., author of the best-seller, "The Horse and Buggy Doctor," was guest of honor yesterday at a luncheon given by Dr. Charles Stanley White, at his home, 1420 Sixteenth street. Dr. Hertzler arrived in Washington yesterday morning and will leave either this afternoon or tomorrow. Today he will lecture at the George Washington University School of Medicine.

A hundred guests, many of whom were from the United States Naval Hospital and Walter Reed Hospital, attended the luncheon. The company also included several from the staff of George Washington University medical school, as well as several physicians and surgenons in private practice.

Among the guests were Dr. Don Sugusto Boyd, the Minister of Panama; the Surgeon General of the Army, Maj. Gen. Charles R. Reynolds; Admiral Ross T. McIntire, Dr. Hugh Cumming, Rear Admiral Harold W. Smith, Rear Admiral Charles E. Riggs, Maj. Gen. Merritt W. Ireland, Brig. Gen. Raymond F. Metcalf, Lieut. Col. Thomas J. Callendar, Col. Henry Clay Coburn, Col. William L. Keller, Commander Harold E. Ragle.

Carlos del Mars Mark Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Carlos del Mar celebrated their eighth wedding anniversary last evening by giving a dinner at which covers were laid for 14 guests. The ranking guests were the Minister of Siam and Mme. Abhibal Rajamaitri.

This evening Mr. and Mrs. del Mar will entertain at another dinner which will be given in honor of Mrs. del Mar's sister, Mrs. Frederick Brook McFeely, of Pittsburgh. Mrs. McFeely is returning north after a vacation in Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. Church to Visit Europe, Africa on Honeymoon

Former Miss Redington, of Falls Church, And Husband Will Travel by Caravan From Algiers to Oran

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Northrup Church, jr., who were married last evening at 8:30, will sail Saturday on the Normandie for a honeymoon. They will visit Paris, Marseilles and Monte Carlo before crossing the Mediterranean to Algiers. After a caravan trip from that city to Oran, the couple will go to Germany and sail up the Rhine, stopping for several days in Cologne. After a stay in Brussels and Amsterdam, they will go to Scotland and thence to London. They will embark again at Le Havre in time to reach New York May 1.

The bride is the former Miss Mary Ann Redington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Goodwin Redington, of Falls Church, and Mr. Church is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Church, of that town. Their wedding took place at the Presbyterian Church there, the Rev. Alton B. Altfather officiating. Forsythia sprays, palms and snapdragons decorated the church. Paul Redington, jr., younger brother of the bride, sang "Oh, Promise Me" and "I Love You Truly."

John Chase Redington, of Wilton, Conn., and New York, uncle of the bride, gave her in marriage. She wore a gown of antique satin made on princess lines, with a tulle veil. She carried a bouquet of white rosebuds and lilies of the valley, tied with white ribbon streamers and with an orchid in the center.

Mrs. Aubrey Patterson Grow, the matron of honor, wore a frock of peach lace, with puffed sleeves and a hoopskirt, and an old-fashioned poke bonnet of peach velvet, with matching lace mitts. She carried a Colonial bouquet of garden flowers in pastel shades.

The Misses Kathryn Kitchen, of Washington, and Elizabeth Ward, of Falls Church, were bridesmaids, wearing costumes of sky blue marquisette, made like the matron of honor's, and similar poke bonnets and mitts of blue. They carried nosegays of garden flowers. Little Joan Cushman, of Arlington, the flower girl, wore a similar frock of the same shade and carried a basket of flower petals.

Merton Elbridge Church, the bridegroom's brother, was best man. The ushers were Edward Dana Redington, the bride's brother; Aubrey Patterson Grow James Keith and John Cavadine.

A small reception for relatives and close friends followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Redington. The former was unable to witness the ceremony, owing to illness. Mrs. Redington was attired in chartreuse chiffon, and Mrs. Church, mother of the bridegroom, had chosen a frock of black chiffon with a pattern of flowers appliqued on the bodice.

Charles Brand, Wife Entertain Dr. and Mrs. Dye

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Brand entertained at a dinner for 12 last evening in their apartment at 1661 Crescent place, having as guests of honor Dr. and Mrs. Alexander V. Dye. Dr. Dye, who is retiring as director of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, has been appointed United States Commercial Attache to Great Britain and he and his wife are being widely feted.

Mrs. Dye was honored yesterday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Samuel Day, whose husband is chief of foreign trade statistics in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Guests included Mrs. V. Coddington, Mrs. Max Moorhead, Mrs. Robert Goodale, Mrs. George Dern and Mrs. Henry Coit MacLean.

Among the many parties being planned for Dr. and Mrs. Dye is the dinner to be given Saturday evening by Mr. and Mrs. J. Klahr Huddle.

Mrs. Horning Entertains For John R. Burnses

Mrs. George D. Horning entertained at dinner in the Shoreham Blue Room last evening for Capt. and Mrs. John R. Burns, who are leaving early next month for the Philippine Islands.

The other guests included Capt. and Mrs. Robert Coughlin, Mr. and Mrs. James E. Burns, Dr. and Mrs. James T. Burns, Mr. and Mrs. James B. Horning, Mr. and Mrs. John L. Hickey, Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Coppage, Mrs. Hugh Reading, Mrs. Lee Ellmaker and George D. Horning, jr.

Spring Arrives in White House Grounds; Puerto Rico's Governor Winship Here

SPRING has definitely arrived in the White House grounds, and the sight is one of the most beautiful in Washington. In the front yard two magnolia trees, with their large purplish blossoms, are just beginning to bloom; the forsythia is out and a few daffodils are blossoming in the beds in front of the iron gate on Pennsylvania avenue.

Will Reeves, who has been head gardener at the White House for a great many years, tells me that there are 343 trees on the grounds and 91 different species. Particularly lovely right now is the weeping cherry tree in the back yard, the Japanese cherry trees by the tennis court and the Japanese quince.

GOV. BLANTON WINSHIP of Puerto Rico is in town and is staying at the 1718 H Street Club, favorite haunte of bachelors in the Foreign Service. He will give a lecture tonight at the Metropolitan Club on Puerto Rico, and a number of dinners will be given beforehand.

The 1718 H Street Club was founded by a group of men who included Walter Edge and the late Theodore Marriner of the State Department. They bought an old house and furnished it in a cherry chintz-and-hunting-print style. There are a large living room, a bar, and a library on the first floor. George T. Summerlin, Chief of Protocol of the State Department, is among the bachelors who make their home there. Gov. Winship always puts up at 1718 H street when he comes to town.

FUNNY Coincidence Department: The title of the Harvard Hasty Pudding show to be presented here next Wednesday is "Fair Enough," and it concerns the New York World's Fair. The Columbia University Players' 1939 Varsity Show, to be held tonight and tomorrow in New York, is called "Fair Enough" and the plot is centered about the New York World's Fair.

THE spring invasion of Britishers is on. Arriving shortly is Miss Clarinda Waters, daughter of Lady Butterfield of Cliffe Castle, Keighley, Yorks. Her mother was from Milwaukee and her stepfather, Sir Frederick William Louis Butterfield, was, before being knighted, Theodore Roosevelt D'Hilliers, and is related to the Oyster Bay branch of the Roosevelts.

Mrs. Hollister Sturges, of New York, is here for a visit with her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Montague Sturges. Mrs. Sturges, sr., is a sister-in-law of the Countess of Sandwich and the aunt of Lord Hinchingbrooke, who accompanied Anthony Eden here on his visit early in the winter.

PARTY NOTES: Rear Admiral and Mrs. Mark Bristol gave a dinner for 12 last night. They no longer expect to go to Turkey for the opening of an American hospital there this summer, as they had originally hoped . . . Capt. and Mrs. Harry Gwynn, who have taken the home in Georgetown formerly occupied by Mrs. Granger Blair, will entertain at a cocktail party on Friday. Capt. Gwynn once served as military attache at our legation in Guatemala . . . Glenn Abbey, of the State Department, will give a cocktail party this afternoon, and Mrs. Charles M. Lea will entertain at dinner April 17.

ALL spring hats this year do not have to be hideously unbecoming or loaded down with veils, feathers and flowers all at once, to be chic. There were some very attractive ones noted yesterday at the small cocktail party given by Mrs. Malcolm Whitaker. Mrs. Lewis Clark had on a white hat, with a crown made entirely of white flowers and a small wisp of black veiling. With this she wore a black tailored suit with a white blouse. Mrs. Morris Clark's chapeau was a lipstick red sailor with dotted red veiling, and Miss Marcia Umbsen wore a natural colored straw bonnet with black streamers. Her dress was navy blue with Roman stripes at the collar and wrists.

Mrs. Whittaker is here for a brief visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Perry Johnson, at their residence, 2205 Massachusetts avenue. For the last ten years she has made her home in Europe, but is now back in this country for good and maintains an apartment in New York.

Sherman F. Mittell Marries Miss Fannie E. Sessions

Judge Mattingly Performs Quiet Ceremony at One

At a quiet ceremony at 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, Miss Fannie Ellen Sessions became the bride of Sherman F. Mittell, editor and president of the National Home Library Foundation. Judge Robert E. Mattingly officiated.

The bride, who is the daughter of Mrs. Alonzo Bangs Sessions, of Sioux Falls, S. Dak., and the late Col. Sessions, was gowned in a French blue silk suit with dubonnet accessories and wore a corsage of dubonnet camelias. She was attended by her aunt, Miss Emily Morrison. Roy Thurman was best man for his cousin.

After a wedding trip the couple will return to Washington, April 15, to make their home. Though the engagement was announced only recently, their many friends have entertained in a whirlwind round of parties in their honor. One of the largest was the reception given for them last Sunday by Lowell Mellett at his home in Quaker Lake, Alexandria.

Immediately following the ceremony there was a reception at the Dupont Circle Apartments. Relatives and close friends of the family attended. Mr. Mittell is the son of Abraham Mittell, of Boston.

Hollander Believes Conflict Is Remote

Pierre van Passen Doubts Il Duce Will Be on Hitler's Side; Recalls Early Interview With Fuehrer

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

There will be no outbreak of war in the immediate future and, if war comes, Mussolini will not be bound to Hitler, "he will be on the side where the money is; where there is something to be gotten."

These were the predictions of Pierre van Paassen, of Holland, noted foreign correspondent and author of "Days of Our Years," who spoke last night at the annual donor banquet of the Washington Chapter of Hadassah, at the Mayflower Hotel. There was an audience of nearly 1,800, twice the number present at last year's affair. There were also contributions, assuring the transfer of 66 more children from central Europe to Palestine, and their maintenance there for two years under the Youth Aliyah movement. The amount for each child is $360.

"I am not one of those who believes Great Britain is on its last legs and will not fight," said Mr. van Paassen. "She will fight eventually, if need be, but she wants her hands free of European commitments to act freely in the Far East, where her empire lies. At Munich, Chamberlain accomplished what he had long been striving for—to turn Hitler in an Eastern direction."

Mussolini is bringing pressure on France, not because he is strong, but because he is weak, Mr. van Paassen declared, with Ethiopia on his hands, falling wage levels at home and other problems.

Tells of Early Hitler Interview

Mr. van Paassen, who was exiled from Germany because of his championship of persecuted Jewry, told of an interview he had with Hitler in 1927, in which the German dictator asserted: "When I come into power I will make life for the Jew in Germany intolerable and when I am through with those in Germany, I will begin with those in the rest of the world."

"There must still be people in those countries, 'Greater Mongolia,' I call them now, who have grown tired of being used as idiots and minors and want freedom of their minds and hands. I wonder how long this is going to last," said Mr. van Paassen.

He declared Hitler was a product of the times, placed there by international financiers and "munitioneers" who feared establishment of a real democracy dedicated to peace, "unprofitable," he said, "to the great munitions plants which had been rusting since the war."

Miss Juliet Benjamin Also on Program

Mrs. Raphael Tourover, president of the local Hadassah, presided at the banquet and also introduced as a guest speaker Miss Juliet Benjamin, a vice president of the national organization. Her talk dealt with the Zionist movement in Palestine and the vast construction program which has been completed during the past two years in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles. A new university hospital has been erected, free of debt, and has welcomed to its faculty both German and Italian scientists of international note who have been exiled from their native countries.

In contrast to the reports of brutality from abroad was the spirit of generosity and brotherhood in the gathering last night—its purpose solely to raise funds for the unfortunate people of Europe seeking refuge elsewhere, especially in Palestine.

The banquet arrangements were in charge of Mrs. Paul Pearlman, who, with Mrs. Fred Gichner, is co-chairman of the local Youth Aliyah committee. The Junior Hadassah and Business and Professional Women's group cooperated with the women of the senior organization in plans for the event. Mrs. Louis Zanoff, president of the business women, and Miss Carolyn Berenter, of the juniors, were among those at the head table.

Paul Garber Talks to Club

Paul Edward Garber, of the National Museum, yesterday addressed the Soroptimist Club at its weekly luncheon, describing the famous collection of aircraft of which he has charge.

Mr. Garber, who was introduced by Mrs. Jean Bennett, president of the club, traced the history of aeronautics from the nineteenth century when the first balloon was sent up in France. In 1870, he said, the first balloons were used across the battle lines in the Franco-Prussian War; in 1903, the Wright brothers developed their "Kitty Hawk" and in 1910, the first Zeppelin was built and the first airmail flight made from Albany to New York City.

Mr. Garber, talking on aircraft, played a new role on the Soroptimist Club program. On other occasions he has entertained the club as guest soloist and, before he was permitted to conclude his part of the entertainment yesterday, he was persuaded to sing a group of songs. He is tenor soloist at St. Thomas Episcopal Church. Mrs. Jewell Downs, a club member, accompanied him.

Several Soroptimists from Washington will attend the installation banquet of the Bronx Club in New York on April 21.

Political Study Club to Give War Veterans' Party

A war veterans' party will be given this evening at Mount Alto Hospital by the Political Study Club, of which Mrs. Edgar Briant Merritt is president.

The party will be under the supervision of Mrs. Henry Van Arsdale, chairman of the war veterans' committee of the District of Columbia Federation of Women's Clubs, assisted by Mrs. Otto Hammerlund, vice chairman; Mrs. Harry Landrus, Mrs. H. King Stone, Mrs. Wintemuth W. Sloan, Mrs. Richard Spire, Mrs. John L. McGrew, Mrs. Johan Kondrup and Mrs. George L. Pekham, all members of her committee, and Mrs. Lloyd A. Morrison.

Troops 1 and 17 of Girl Scouts Will Entertain Parents Tomorrow

GIRL SCOUTS of Troops 1 and 17, District 2, of which Mrs. Richard H. Rule is leader, will entertain their parents and members of Troop 64, under Mrs. Joseph Beattie, at an international meeting and court of awards tomorrow night at Foundry Methodist Church. The program will be from 7 to 9.

They will exhibit the troop museum, containing things they have collected during the season and copies of the troop newspaper. Each patrol will have a room decorated as a different country, with members there in native costumes to serve native foods to the guests.

Tomorrow noon, the leaders' association of District 2 will have a luncheon at the Fairfax Hotel, proceeds of which will go to its scholarship fund. Each troop will have three representatives present.

THE PHYLLIS LYMAN COLONY, National Society of New England Women, will meet at the home of Mrs. Avery T. Brunner, 3923 Twenty-second street northeast, Tuesday afternoon, for its annual election of officers. Mrs. Otto Hammerlund will preside at the business meeting, which will be preceded by a luncheon. Mrs. Brunner will be assisted by Miss Nina Urner and Mrs. Jesse N. Lutton.

THE FRONTIER NURSING SERVICE this year will receive the proceeds of the annual Derby Ball of the Kentucky Society of Washington, to be held April 17, in the large ballroom of the Willard Hotel. The ball is held each year on Thursday, April 6. Miss Virginia Murray, W. H. Burrows, H. C. Watterman and Mrs. Gertrude Mackenzie will be on the program at which the president, Parke A. Arnold, will preside.

THE FREE LANCE WRITERS, whose meeting was originally an-nounced for tonight, will meet instead on Thursday, April 6. Miss Virginia Murray, W. H. Burrows, H. C. Watterman and Mrs. Gertrude Mackenzie will be on the program at which the president, Parke A. Arnold, will preside.

THE FREE LANCE WRITERS, whose meeting was originally an-year season preceding the famous Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs, and the proceeds this year will be used by the nursing service to purchase a saddle horse to be used in the service.

Receiving with Mrs. Gordon Edmunds, the society's president, will be the past presidents of the society. Mrs. Smith Bowman is general chairman of arrangements for the ball, which is expected to be the largest and most colorful the organization has held this year; Mrs. Lorenzo Martin, chairman of decorations; William Temple, of entertainment; Miss Mae Lela Stiles, publicity; Maj. McKenzie Davison, of the floor committee, and Miss Fanny Wathen, of the program.

THE CORNELL WOMEN'S CLUB of Washington will have its annual spring tea at the home of Dr. Joseph Adams, 2915 Foxhall road, on Sunday afternoon from 4 to 6. Cornell undergraduates and girls who are contemplating entering the university will be the honor guests.

Miss Josephine Banks will act as hostess and will have receiving with her Mrs. E. A. Edson, Mrs. Francis Brotherhood and Miss Frederica Ritter.

Mrs. Charles Mudgett, of Silver Spring, who is in charge of arrangements, has announced Miss Katherine B. Strong, an undergraduate at the university, as the speaker. Recent pictures of the campus at Ithaca also will be shown.

MRS. MINNIE FROST RANDS, author of the play "The Prince of Peace" is sponsor for a group of young Washingtonians who are organized and incorporated under the name "The Prince of Peace Players." They will present the play, which was given at the Sylvan Theater and by the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, for which Mrs. Rands is drama chairman, as a protest against the rise of religious intolerance.

The play deals with world history from 69 B. C. to 19 A. D. and emphasizes "the political economy of love and human sympathy and the brotherhood of man under the Fatherhood of God." The players will present it at churches, schools and clubs in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Red Cross Unit Holds Meeting

The chairmen of the 25 auxiliaries of the production department of the District Chapter of the American Red Cross held a business meeting followed by a tea yesterday afternoon in the chapter house, 1730 E street northwest. Mrs. P. J. Altizer, chairman of the chapter production department, presided.

Miss Mabel T. Boardman, chairman of volunteer special services, and Otto Lund, chapter manager, spoke on the production of garments by volunteer workers.

Among those present were Mrs. H. G. Boutell, Mrs. Walter L. Reed, Mrs. J. L. DeWitt, Mrs. R. L. Ettenger, Mrs. J. J. Dunlap, Mrs. R. W. Howard, Mrs. Wade H. Fowler, Miss C. A. Caskey, Mrs. C. R. Bush, Mrs. Joseph Solomon, Mrs. W. H. Israelson, Mrs. Albert P. Niblack.

Delta Gammas To Convene

The annual Delta Gamma Founders' Day banquet which is usually held near March 15 was postponed this year to be held jointly with the banquet of the province convention Saturday night. The convention will be held at Wardman Park Hotel tomorrow through Sunday.

Miss Marguerite D. Winant, of New York, national president, and Miss Margaret Dodds, of Montreal, province secretary, will arrive tomorrow.

Mrs. H. H. Jacobs will be mistress of ceremonies at the banquet. With her at the speakers' table will be Miss Winant, Miss Dodds, who will preside at the convention; Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. William E. Lee, Mrs. Merle Thorpe, Miss Ida Mae Orr, president of the alumnae group; Miss Catherine Dickey, retiring president of the chapter at American University; Miss Ruth Dewey, president-elect of that group, and Mrs. Holt Marchant, who is general chairman of the convention.

Other events on the calendar for the delegates are a reception at the hotel tomorrow night at 9:30, a tea at the White House Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, breakfast at American University Sunday morning as guests of the active chapter there; attendance at the Washington Cathedral Palm Sunday service and a tour of the city that afternoon.

Founded in 1874 at the University of Mississippi in Oxford, the fraternity has become international, having four chapters in Canada, two of which will be represented at the convention. In the last year a large fraternity home has been built in Oxford, as a memorial to the founders, one of whom, Mrs. Mary Comfort Leonard, is still living at Kosciusko, Miss. There are now 51 active chapters, eight of which are in this province. There are also 54 alumnae chapters, 13 of which are in this province, and 57 alumnae associations, making a total membership of over 17,000.

Rockville Women Plan Style Show

A spring fashion show and hair styling demonstration will be sponsored by the Rockville Women's Club this afternoon at the Manor Country Club for the benefit of its student loan fund. Mrs. Thomas Griffith, president of the Rockville Club, will preside at the luncheon preceding the fashion show and the program will be in charge of Mrs. Harriet Bastable and Mrs. Ruth Vitale.

Latest fashions in hats and dresses will be modeled by a group of young women of Montgomery County. Modern modes of hairdress will be demonstrated and the newest Hollywood methods of make-up shown by beauticians.

Judge Fay Bentley Lauds Women's Council

Juvenile Court Jurist Praises Aid Given By Federation of Churches' Group; Earlene White Also Addresses Luncheon

It is not the individual but the community which has failed when it is necessary to bring a child into the Juvenile Court, Judge Fay Bentley told members of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches yesterday at their annual luncheon at Calvary Baptist Church.

Speaking on the program with Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, Judge Bentley commended the council for its work.

"You are filling in the gaps left as a result of inadequate personnel to give essential service to families whose problems come before the court," she said.

"The court is as good in its treatment of cases as the public appropriation makes it possible to be. High standards are set for the personnel, but there are only five persons to handle the human problems presented by 1,500 men and women under court orders, involving 3,000 children.

"The court is supposedly responsible for 1,257 children under supervision in their own homes, but there are only 20 persons to do that job.

"Nothing is gained by trying to blame someone else. It is your responsibility and mine—a failure in the community when there is delinquency."

Pays Tribute To Court Worker

Judge Bentley paid tribute to the outstanding work, the vision and imagination of Miss Etta Mae Russell, Juvenile Court worker maintained by the council.

She also commended the council for giving assistance in the spirit of neighborliness rather than as "Lady Bountiful." She contrasted its program with the emotional giving of those who want to see the response of the recipients and who asked for a family of a certain number in a specified locality and answering other requirements which they can "adopt" for Christmas.

"These seem to think it unreasonable if people who need help do not come up to their specifications," said Judge Bentley.

Mrs. Linzel Again Heads Council

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, who has served as president of the council for the past two years and presided at the luncheon, was reelected for another term.

Other officers include Mrs. George A. Ross, Mrs. W. O. Tufts, Mrs. Thomas J. Howerton, Mrs. F. E. Edgington, Mrs. J. Claude Keiper and Miss A. Barbara Wiegand, vice presidents; Mrs. Arthur Briscoe, treasurer; Mrs. R. W. Slanker, assistant treasurer; Miss Mary Radford, recording secretary; Mrs. Gould Wickey, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. F. Jackson, chairman of denominational representatives; Mrs. W. J. Bullis and Mrs. J. Robert Hardesty, her assistants.

The meeting yesterday was also an observance of the fifteenth anniversary of the council, with Mrs. Hardesty chairman of the anniversary committee. At the morning session, reports were given and the Rev. J. A. Mixon, chairman of welfare for the Federation of Churches, spoke.

The annual ingathering service was held in the afternoon with Miss White as guest speaker. Each denominational representative in the council took the names of new members from her denomination to the altar and presented flowers which later were distributed to the hospitals.

Church Women Should Lead

"Church women should take the lead in citizenship," Miss White told her audience. "They should not be deterred by the feeling, there is so little I can do. There is not a person but has his own circle of influence. We should all remember that it takes only a few to lead, but that it is the followers who make the success of every battle. There could be no leadership without followship.

"We should take as a great privilege instead of as a grave responsibility our duties as citizens and realize that the best service we can pay in a democracy is our everyday living. It was the character and courage of the women as well as of the men which helped found this country as a land of freedom, and it is the character and courage of the women with that of the other citizens which will maintain it on that basis today. As Christian American women, we should be both eager and prepared to render service as citizens.

"Uninformed, mass following of leaders results in chaos. Intelligent, informed followership brings about constructive action.

"We hear much of freedom of speech and freedom of the press. The third privilege is freedom of worship. Do we spend as much time as we should exercising that privilege?"

The denominational representatives participating in the program included Mrs. S. T. Hughes, Baptist; Mrs. I. W. Bittner, Brethren; Mrs. Hans Sorenson, Community; Mrs. M. D. Herron, Congregational; Mrs. F. J. Hobbs, Disciples; Mrs. Dudley N. Carpenter, Episcopal; Mrs. S. W. Stewart, Evangelical; Mrs. Alfred Gould, Evangelical and Reformed; Mrs. Bernice Johnson, First Brethren; Mrs. C. H. Hall, Friends; Mrs. J. Luther Frantz, Lutheran; Mrs. John L. Rogers, Methodist Episcopal; Mrs. John H. Ray, Methodist Episcopal South; Mrs. Wallace N. Streeter, Methodist Protestant; Mrs. Mason B. Leming, Presbyterian, U. S. A.; Mrs. John L. Parkes, Presbyterian U. S.; Miss Annie Blair, United Presbyterian, and Miss Woodie Heatwole, United Brethren.

There were 650 women of the various churches at the luncheon. Pictures of the past presidents of the council were on the souvenir menus in honor of the anniversary, and tributes were paid to each of them: the late Mrs. Harvey S. Erwin, Mrs. Louise G. Fisher, who has just sailed for India; Mrs. Benjamin Meeks, of Frederick, Md., who was a guest at the luncheon, and Mrs. Eugene V. Pugh, who is now in California. Mrs. M. Edwin Thomas, president of the International Women's Society of Baltimore, also was a luncheon guest.

Group Named To Plan Fete For First Lady

Committee Appointed For 75th Club Luncheon April 12

Committees for its annual luncheon in honor of Mrs. Roosevelt were appointed yesterday at the meeting of the 75th Club at the Methodist Building. The program for the afternoon, which was in charge of Mrs. Bruce Barton, was provided by club members, including the president, Mrs. W. T. Byrne, who read some of her own poems.

Mrs. John Murdock is general chairman of arrangements for the club's luncheon, set for April 12 at 2400 Sixteenth street. As in previous years, the proceeds will be used for welfare work. The invitations, which were written in verse by Mrs. Byrne, explain this.

The committee sub-chairman announced yesterday include Mrs. Barton, reception; Mrs. Charles Clason, reservations; Mrs. J. C. Oliver, decorations and menu; Mrs. Allen Ellender, corsages; Mrs. Luther Patrick, flags, and Mrs. Charles Leavy, place cards.

Announcement also was made of the club activities which are getting into full swing. A book reviews group is meeting under Mrs. Lister Hill's chairmanship; a foreign relations and civic events group will start next week with Mrs. O. W. McNeese as lecturer; the gardens and art group, under Mrs. Laurence Arnold, has already begun studying paintings in the Capitol and will later take trips to Williamsburg and other places of interest.

The golf group, of which Mrs. Clason is chairman, has been organized with nine members, and the swimming group, of which Mrs. Dudley White is chairman, and assisted by Mrs. Herman Eberharter, will have its first meeting Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock at the Shoreham pool.

On the program with Mrs. Byrne yesterday were Mrs. John Sparkman, who talked on "Congress," a subject in which the Congressional wives are vitally interested, and Mrs. C. Martin Logan, a guest, who sang, accompanying herself.

374,551 Tourists visited Washington and the Cherry Blossoms during last April . . . more are expected this year.

Committee Favors a Free School Board

Representatives Indicate Vote Against Subordination

By James D. Secrest.

Retention of the Board of Education as an independent agency in whatever plan for reorganization of the District government is adopted by the Kennedy subcommittee was indicated yesterday after defendants of the present school system attacked the Griffenhagen report.

With Chairman Kennedy absent, other members of the House subcommittee intimated, both at the hearing and afterward, that they believed the school board should not be made subordinate to a city manager or council.

The session was devoted entirely, however, to spokesmen of the Board of Education, and it is expected that Frank O. Everett, of Griffenhagen & Associates, will be given an opportunity at a subsequent hearing to defend the recommendations for placing the school system under the administrative head of the District.

Henry I. Quinn, who resigned from the board to defend it, attacked the Griffenhagen plan with vehemence but denied he and other school spokesmen were intent on wrecking the entire scheme for reorganization merely to save the board of education.

Several times he referred to an address made by Everett at a Board of Trade meeting and denied with some heat that "malicious misrepresentation" or "distortion" had been engaged in by critics of the Griffenhagen plan.

"This part of the report doesn't need distortion" he said.

Reciting the history of the board of education since 1900, Quinn said the proposal of making the board subordinate to the District Commissioners had been tried and rejected 30-odd years ago. The Senate had stepped in he said, to change the system and make the board an independent agency whose members are appointed by the District Court.

Efficiency Defended

"Our present system is equal in efficiency to any in the country," he said, "and there is no justification for changing it."

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, interjected the remark that the independent school system dates back to early Colonial history.

Asked by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, whether or not he believed the caliber of the members or the efficiency of the board would be improved by popular election, Quinn replied in the negative.

He pointed out that members now are often drafted for the job, and Nichols added the observation that efficiency decreases when schools become involved in politics.

Quinn also expressed the belief that a non-paid board is preferable to a salaried board.

Bates disagreed with Quinn's opinion that the board should supervise recreational activities of children in nonschool hours through the community center.

Quinn said he wanted to answer the "slurring reference" that school board members "don't come from the people or represent the people." He pointed out that the courts traditionally appoint three colored members to the board although there is no requirement in the law that they do so. Colored residents, he said, "are happy with the present system."

Concluding, Quinn told the subcommittee that he believed the District government needs reorganizing but that the job could be accomplished without legislation providing "businessmen" Commissioners are appointed.

"What we need are some commissioners who have more than a pleasant smile and political background," he said. "A local businessman who knows District problems could step in and reorganize the departments in no time at all."

Dr. Ballou Critical

Earlier Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, criticized the Griffenhagen plan as it applies to the schools but said he would not object to drawing custodial employes from a list recommended by a personnel department so long as the school administrative retained the right to hire and fire them.

He pointed out that in 43 cities of 50,000 or more population which have city managers 28 have independent school boards and 12 others have boards with varying degrees of independence. The only exceptions, he said, are St. Paul and Chattanooga.

Charles E. Drayton, chairman of the legislative committee of the board, placed in the record a report adopted by the board on March 1 with relation to the Griffenhagen plan.

Civil Service Inquiry Told Of 'Favoritism' in Promotions

Ellender

When Scranage left the division, Dixon's secretary was reassigned to a better grade, leaving the job open. How Dixon filled the position, which is a grade 6 job with a $2,300 salary, consumed the entire testimony yesterday.

Dixon said he did the appointing in his division and that Mrs. Smithers had been promoted from grade 3 to the grade 6 postion. "Please write in this record how you managed to do it," Ellender asked. The question was side-tracked by Dixon explaining why Joseph Barber, an employe of 42 years' service, wasn't promoted to Scranage's place. Scranage's successor got the job because he was in immediate line for it, he said.

Ellender observed there was no direct line for the promotion of Mrs. Smithers, and Miss Adair took the stand, saying her disappointment took the heart from her.

"How do you feel about that, Mr. Dixon?" asked Ellender. "Senator," he replied, "as superintendent, I am charged with the conduct of the work and the placement of the personnel. I gave much thought to these promotions . . ."

"Why did you dip down three grades?" Ellender pressed him.

Dixon said he considered them in all grades and Mrs. Smithers was chosen. "She is alert, apt, quick, energetic and it was my conclusion that she was the best suited," he said. "You Senators and others call at my office and it is necessary that you all be courteously treated," he added.

"Do you insinuate that the other young ladies would not have been courteous?" asked Ellender. Dixon emphatically answered in the negative.

"Well, does it require intelligence to greet a Senator, or does it requier looks?" Ellender asked.

Miss Adair said she entered the service in 1926, advanced from grade 2 to grade 4 and was in line for the promotion as Dixon's secretary. Others took the stand in turn, to tell their personal reaction to the Smithers appointment. Mrs. Virginia D. Counselman, an employe since 1934, said, "I was shocked and surprised. There was a good deal of discussion about it."

Mrs. Lillian A. Costelo, who has had 21 years service that began in the Shipping Board, said, "It knocked the heart out of me. I said, 'what's the use.'"

Mrs. D. L. Holladay, a grade 5 clerk, said: "I couldn't understand why someone in grade 4 or 5 wasn't chosen . . ."

"Have you any idea?" Ellender inquired.

"I have none," was the reply. "We could understand if it had been a political appointment. And Mr. Dixon had been a service man, too."

Donaldson said an administrative officer should have some latitude in choosing his secretary. He said a lack of funds handicaps the department in making promotions. Funds have been short for four or five years, he added. Ellender said they always found funds to promote some employes.

Mrs. Smithers was transferred to the Postoffice Department, from the Veterans' Administration, in 1936. Her salary of $1,740 was increased to $2,300 with the step-up in grade.

Ellender adjourned the hearing until 2:30 this afternoon, when other "favoritism" cases will be heard.

Security Cash Running Low, Altmeyer Tells House Group

An emergency has arisen from depletion of funds for administration of the unemployment compensation system, Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer of the Social Security Board told the House Ways and Means Committee yesterday.

He recommended that the amount the Federal Government may grant to States for this purpose be boosted from $49,000,000 to $80,000,000.

"The States are scraping the bottom of the barrel," Altmeyer said, adding that present funds will be exhausted to May 15. He added that the Government's share of the $900,000,000 collected in unemployment compensation taxes last year amounted to $90,000,000, so there would still be a $10,000,000 margin if the administrative fund were increased to $80,000,000.

The committee began hearings today on a broad liberalization of the old-age benefits system, designed to increase monthly payments, to start them two years earlier than the law now provides and to make available supplemental benefits for wives and widows of pensioners. Benefits would start January 1, 1940, instead of January 1, 1942.

The committee has decided against extending the system to cover some 6,000,000 farm hands, domestics and employes of church and charitable institutions, but is still considering the liberalizing amendments and the recommendations of Secretary Morgenthau that increases in the old-age benefits pay rolls taxes scheduled to go into effect next year be deferred and that the "full reserve" be abandoned.

Testifying in support of the liberalizing amendments, Mr. Altmeyer assured the committee the eventual cost of the liberalized old-age benefits system would be less than that of the present one. The savings, he explained, would accrue from reductions in the pensions to be paid retired single workers who under the new system would receive less than the married workers.

A single worker with 40 years in the pension plan receiving $250 a month for example, would receive under the liberalized plans only $56 a month as compared with $81.25 under the present plan. A married worker, on the other hand, would receive under the liberalized plan $84 a month as compared with $81.25 under the present plan.

The chairman questioned whether the enactment of the social security act in 1935 had deterred employers from carrying on or setting up private retirement systems. On the contrary, he testified, there had been a great increase in the number of private systems since the act was passed. He said he believed that employers having private pension systems were entitled to make deductions commensurate with the Government's old-age pensions but argued that they should not reduce the over-all benefits to members of their private systems.

Five Believed Dead 18 Days Ago Saved By Coast Guard

Seattle, March 29 (AP).—Coast Guardsmen defied a gale and pounding seas today to bring five nearly starved men marooned on a rockbound Alaskan island to the safety of the cutter Morris.

The men were given up for dead 18 days ago. Their boat, the motorship Swan, was last seen in February on a trip along Kodiak Island, Alaska. The Coast Guard said the Swan broke up.

A surf boat that landed yesterday on Tugidak Island with food supplies overturned in the surf. Today the Coast Guardsmen set out with the rescued men and reached the Morris.

A sixth member of the Swan crew was responsible for the Morris' help. Jack McCord rowed all the way to Atilak, on nearby Kodiak Island. Saturday he got help.

Reich Rumored About to Absorb Tiny Liechtenstein

Vaduz, Liechtenstein, March 29 (AP). Liechtenstein was filled with rumors tonight of an impending change in the status of the independent principality and its 11,000 inhabitants.

There was talk that Liechtenstein, whose 65 square miles are little more than the area of New York's Staten Island, might be incorporated outright in the German Reich or be made a "protectorate" like Slovakia. It lies between Switzerland and the German Tyrol.

The government insisted the rumors were baseless. However, the ruling prince, 32-year-old Franz Joseph, holds membership in Adolf Hitler's S. A., black-uniformed storm troopers.

Engineer Explains Operation at Backstage Broadcast Here

Washington audiences yesterday had an opportunity to watch both ends of a television demonstration at the same time. Inside workings of the television were presented by Philco Radio in the Raleigh Hotel.

Audiences not only saw the transmitted images of performers on the tiny radio-set screen but also were taken "backstage" while the broadcast was going on and could see the actors in front of the television camera and microphone even as their pictures and voices were transmitted to three receiving sets.

Performers from the Capitol, Earle and National theaters took part in the demonstration and the intricate operations of television were explained by Arthur Murray, Philco's television engineer.

Now that television has "left the research laboratory and has entered the American home," said Murray, one of the biggest problems facing producers is program material. Lack of entertaining and practical television talent, he added, has put a crimp into development of the enterprise for home consumption.

The United States, he said, now has five large companies interested in television and Philco has been conducting field tests since 1935.

Bill Would Bar $200 Workers From Wage Act

in the day, recommended that control of funds for the wage-hour division be restored to Secretary Perkins

The action threatened to reopen a sharp controversy since both the Senate and House voted recently to give Andrews complete jurisdiction over funds for his division. The committee's action would not apply to the current year's appropriation.

Both the committee and Secretary Perkins contended independent administration of the wage-hour law funds would increase costs and the committee further asserted that "endless confusion would ensue."

Although the bill's total was $377,810 less than the amount recommended by the budget bureau, it exceeded the Department's current appropriation by $2,730,920. The committee said the increase could be attributed directly to the cost of administering the new wage-hour law.

Praising the achievements of the conciliation service in averting threatened strikes and settling others, the committee recommended an increase of $25,000 for the service over the budget estimates to provide 15 additional conciliators.

The committee also added $22,120 to the bill to give the public contracts division additional personnel after L. Metcalfe Walling, administrator, testified his division had been able to investigate only 4,000 of the 12,000 Government contracts covered by the 2-year-old Walsh-Healey law.

Artists' Model Will Marry

ANITA COUNIHAN COLBY, former McKinley "Tech" High School beauty, better known as the girl on the magazine cover, will marry Charles "Chuck" Hornburg, jr., Dartmouth College graduate, of Minneapolis, it was reported in New York yesterday. She is the daughter of Cartoonist Bud Counihan. Announcement of her engagement came as a surprise to her relatives in Washington

House Committee Splits Veterans' Recompense Bill

A proposal to combine in one bill an old-age pension for all veterans with increased benefits for disabled veterans and their survivors was defeated in a House committee yesterday.

Splitting the bill into two parts, the House World War Veterans Committee favorably reported certain sections dealing with increased benefits but failed to approve the proposal to pay $40 a month pension to all veterans over 65. The pension measure will be considered in committee next week.

Members said yesterday that the omnibus bill, combining both proposals, would possibly be defeated in the House or subjected to Presidential veto because of the pension section. They said that by splitting the bill, pensions could be considered on their own merits, apart from the increased benefits.

Stinson yesterday morning denied Mrs. Stinson's statement that their marriage was never consummated, but asserted his wife's emotional condition was "such that I thought it undesirable to return to her room again."

He admitted that after the separation he agreed to pay the salary of Miss Jessica Shoemaker, Mrs. Stinson's nurse, for one year at $125 a month and get her a car "because I felt she had been treated badly for really noble service to Mrs. Stinson."

Will Proviso Revealed

Mrs. Stinson has charged that Miss Shoemaker, who is yet to take the stand, was in the conspiracy to keep her drugged until Stinson had married her and used up her money.

It was also brought out yesterday that Stinson at one time had made a will in which he arranged to leave Miss Shoemaker $50,000 from the trust fund. A dress purchased for the nurse and shipped to his lawyer never was explained to Mrs. Stinson, he said, "because I had very little chance to explain anything to her after we were married."

He denied that either of the two bracelets he bought at a dressmaker's establishment in New York went to Miss Shoemaker, declaring one costing $35 went to a model who was the niece of the dressmaker "as a courtesy because they had been so nice to us" and the other to a "personal friend whose name I had rather not bring into this."

"Did the bracelet have semiprecious stones in it, at that price?" Justice Luhring exclaimed. "No, it was just a little trinket, but imported," Stinson replied.

$5,000 for Dresses

Justice Luhring also expressed interest in a dressmaker's bill of $5,000. "Were there any sables or minks in that?" he asked, but Stinson assured there were "just a few little dinner gowns," one of which cost $500.

To the minister who married him to the widow, who once published two books of verse, Stinson gave a check for $100. "I wouldn't think of handing a minister less," he declared.

The clerk of the court in Bar Harbor was given $25 for "a little charity in which he was interested," Stinson said and not as a fee for appearing at the wedding. He said he returned to Bar Harbor last spring to see the clerk "to get him to swear to what took place while we were there."

The really big quarrel that caused his wife to telephone her lawyers to have his power of attorney revoked occurred in New York early in October after the wedding in September, Stinson said, and was over a cloth of gold dress.

"I wanted her to get the dress and wear it to a reception we were to attend on my birthday. She wanted me to buy an antique bookcase for myself," he said.

Neither his wife nor himself drank cocktails to "any extent" although they often attended and gave cocktail parties, Stinson declared, asserting that "as for myself, I'm allergic to alcohol."

Crowds Growing

Stinson objected to reference by Alvin L. Newmyer, attorney for Mrs. Stinson, to "my wife as Mrs. Crounse," declaring he did not think "it shows the proper respect."

Crowds for the Stinson case have been growing throughout the week. Yesterday the hall was filled with groups waiting for a chance to get into the filled courtroom. Justice Luhring has expressed the hope that testimony will be completed this week.

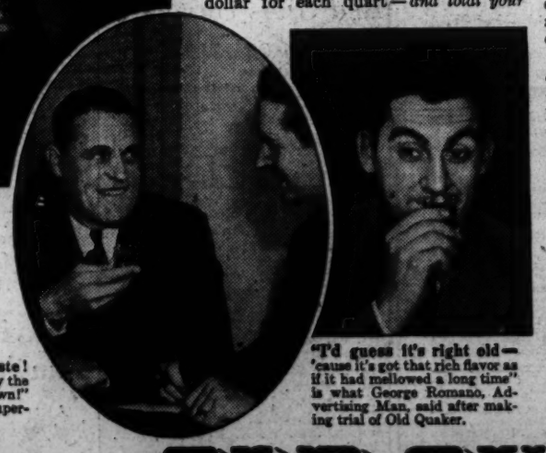
HOW TO BUY FINE WHISKEY FOR LESS MONEY AS REVEALED BY 960 OUT OF 1,000 MEN!

"Man—what a rich flavor! Say—that's the smoothest whiskey I ever swallowed!" remarks W. F. Killian, New Jersey Hotel Man, after trying Old Quaker.

"Um! Real rich taste! Judge it's mighty old by the slick way it goes down!" says John W. Wise, Supervisory Timekeeper.



"I'd guess it's right old—'cause it's got that rich flavor as if it had mellowed a long time" is what George Romano, Advertising Man, said after making trial of Old Quaker.

Out of 1,000 Men in Dramatic Survey—960 Find Old Quaker—Now 3 Years Old—a Smooth, Mild, Rich Whiskey, Yet It Sells at a Rock-Bottom Low Price!

● The next time you get ready to buy a bottle of fine, rich, expensive whiskey—do this: Figure how many quarts you buy in a year's time. Then—knock off a dollar for each quart—and total your savings! Here's why we make such a suggestion:

We went to 1,000 men, from 22 states, and poured each one of them a drink of delicious Old Quaker. "Taste it!" we asked them. "Smell it! Swallow a drink of it! Then give us your honest opinion!"

We were amazed at their answer. Not one of these men knew the name, age, or price of the whiskey he was trying—yet 960 out of 1,000 commented on Old Quaker's rich, mild mellowness . . . its delicate aroma, its delicious taste! They proved it a whiskey you'll be glad to drink . . . proud to serve—even though Old Quaker's price is unbelievably low!

Why Not Save Money?

If you agree with these 960 out of 1,000 men—you've made a money-saving discovery. You can probably cut your whiskey bills a third—for Old Quaker, aged for 3 full years in temperature-controlled warehouses, has the taste of expensive whiskey at a real rock-bottom price! Why not see for yourself—and say "Old Quaker"—the next time you buy!

"Tastes like real old whiskey! Goes down the hatch extra smooth"—Frank J. McCready, Grocery Clerk.

D. C. May Get First Claim to Tax U. S. Pay

Revenue Jurisdiction Will Be Discussed By House Fiscal Unit Tomorrow

Representative Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts, yesterday said he believed the District should have a prior claim in taxing the incomes of Federal employes working in Washington, regardless of where they maintain a legal or voting residence.

This question of taxing jurisdiction will be discussed when the House sub-committee on fiscal affairs meets tomorrow to start rewriting the District revenue bill in the light of the Supreme Court decision on reciprocal Federal-State income taxation.

"It seems to me that a Federal employe who lives here the year around and benefits from the customary municipal services the District provides should pay an income tax to the District rather than to a State where he may vote," Bates said.

Objects to Sales Tax

Bates, a member of the sub-committee charged with handling the revenue bill, reiterated his approval of the principle of the income tax and his objections to a sales tax.

The sub-committee now stands 3 to 2 for an income tax, as against a sales tax, but the threat of losing revenue to the States, together with the lack of any accurate estimates as to what a personal income tax would yield in the District, may lead to the adoption of a compromise plan.

Besides Bates, Representatives Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, and Schwert (Democrat), of New York, are on record as favorable to an income tax in preference to a sales tax.

Bates said he does not favor lessening the tax burden on realty property, however, and believes that the 60 per cent share that real estate now bears is not excessive.

Meeting Delayed Day

Commissioner Hazen and David McCoach discussed the local tax problem yesterday with Vernon L. West, principal assistant corporation counsel, but came to no definite conclusions. Hazen expressed the belief that a lowering of the income tax provision of the Pond report, but retention of all the levies proposed, including the sales tax, is desirable.

The House subcommittee meeting, scheduled for today, was postponed until tomorrow to give District officials an opportunity to attend the Overton hearing in the Senate.

The subcommittee, meeting in executive session, will have the assistance of the same tax specialists who wrote the present tax report in revising the bill.

Chairman King and other members of the Senate District Committee also have been asked to sit in with the subcommittee in order to expedite the measure through Congress.

Capital News In Brief

Girl Cadets to Step

Girl cadets, girl drum majors and a women's military band will march in the Army Day parade, April 6, officials of the Military Order of the World War announced yesterday.

Six companies of girls—three from Washington-Lee High School, of Arlington, Va., and three from George Washington High School in Alexandria—will march.

Other women's groups will include the American Legion Auxiliary, the Daughter of Union Veterans, with their band, and the four Bethels of Job's Daughters.

A platoon of the Pershing Rifles will come from the University of Maryland's R. O. T. C. unit to take part in the parade also.

His name is Willie Fly and will he fly?

He will. He has just been employed by Pennsylvania-Central Airlines to pilot one of the big transports every other day between Washington and Detroit.

Fly, the flier, is 28, single, and was graduated from the Naval Academy in 1933. He has spent five years as a transport pilot.

Youthful Gang Seized

An organized gang of pocketbook snatchers, all its members between the ages of 14 and 17, was broken up early yesterday with the arrest of five Mount Rainier (Md.) boys, charged with approximately 40 robberies in Northwest Washington.

The youths were traced by license numbers of a car in which two of them made their escape, grabbing a purse from Mrs. Bessie L. Burgess, 3810 Twenty-sixth street northeast, as she was walking in the 1900 block of Quincy street northeast Tuesday night. A witness gave police the tag numbers, and the arrests were by Officer Louis Mackall, of the Prince Georges County police.

The Course of True Love

Speedy action by neighbors in a rooming house in the first block of Myrtle street northeast last night confined a squabble to one room and damage to lacerated feelings.

They padlocked the door of a room in which a swain and his lady love were in vociferous disagreement and called police. The young man, police reported, was deprived of a razor and he and the girl were incarcerated for investigation.

Christ Is Hope of Civilization, Dr. Forsyth Tells Conference

Methodist Episcopal Audience Warns 'There Isn't a Hope in a Carload Of Dictators, Not Even a Trainload'

The hope of civilization rests not in dictators, but in Jesus Christ, Dr. N. F. Forsyth, of Chicago, last night told delegates at the 76th Annual Washington Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

Speaking at Asbury M. E. Church, Eleventh and K streets northwest, Dr. Forsyth, executive of the Methodist Episcopal Board of Education, told his listeners that "there isn't a hope for civilization in a carload of dictators . . . not even in a trainload of them."

Highlight of the "Educational Night" program of the opening day's sessions, his address was delivered before an audience of more than 1,000 delegates and guests, who also heard Dr. A. R. Howard, of the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals; Dr. Dwight O. W. Holmes, of Morgan College, and Dr. C. K. Brown, of the Southwest Conference. Joseph H. Jenkins, president of the Conference Board of Education, presided last night.

The conference was launched earlier in the day with addresses of welcome from Dr. George C. Ruhland of the District Health Department, representing Commissioner Hazen; Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, Dr. J. L. S. Holloman, Dr. H. T. Medford and Perry W. Howard. Bishop A. P. Shaw, A. M., D. D., presided. Ezra E. Williams gave the response. Dr. Robert M. Williams is Asbury pastor.

The afternoon program included a statistical session, Ministers' Wives Association annual meeting, missionary sessions and other features.

Making a stirring appeal for more adult leadership in the church and church schools, Dr. Forsyth insisted the hope of the future depends on the adults, because "adults set the patterns for youth to follow."

"There will be no advances in church school work until the church teaches parents how to instruct their children in religion," said he, adding that "in these critical days we need a new sense of urgency."

Highlighting today's schedule will be "Unification Night," at 8 p. m., when three outstanding clergymen will discuss "United Methodism Faces the Future." They will be Dr. John W. Rustin, of Mount Vernon Place M. E. Church South; Dr. James H. Straughn, Methodist Protestant Church, and Dr. Willis J. King, Methodist Episcopal Church. The Mount Vernon Place choir, directed by Deane Shure, will sing.

Two Girls Robbed Separately Point To Same Suspect

Two girl store clerks yesterday identified a 29-year-old colored man as the bandit who robbed them in separate holdups in the last two months. Harry Henry Taylor, of 489 L street southeast, was charged with robbery at the Fourt Precinct Station.

Betty Ball, who manages a cleaning and pressing shop at 707 Fourth street southwest, said Taylor had entered her shop on March 23, choked her and robbed her of $6 and her wrist watch. Betty Gitomer, who with her father runs a drug store at 1030 Fourth street southwest, said she was robbed of $40 at the point of a pistol on February 8.

Paving Broken, 'Phone Wires Cut By 50-Ton Crane

Traffic was blocked, telephone lines severed and trees dismantled yesterday as laborers worked for two hours removing a 50-ton crane that broke through the paving at Ridge road and Ely place southeast.

Having completed work on the west bank of the Anacostia River in construction of the new Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge, the huge derrick was needed on the opposite shore. Engineers decided that the machine was too heavy to cross the bridge, so a round-about route via Fifteenth street, Benning road and Anacostia road was used.

Lewis Explains Relief Report For Congress

House Sub-Committee To Hear Street and Miss Hill Today

The House sub-committee on appropriations yesterday heard Burdette G. Lewis, special relief investigator, explain his report and today will hear Elwood Street, welfare director, and Miss Alice Hill, head of the Public Assistance Division, defend the present administration of relief.

Lewis is understood to have recommended the dismissal of Miss Hill and Street. The sub-committee has no authority to discharge them, but can withhold appropriations for their salaries.

He also explained how all of his findings, as carried in his report, were checked six times. In each instance the checking was made without the knowledge of other investigators, Lewis said.

Members of the sub-committee indicated they were impressed with the testimony of Lewis and his recommendations. They declined to predict what action will be taken, but intimated that the general relief appropriation will not be increased above the $900,000 voted last year.

Lewis is understood to have told the sub-committee that enough money could be saved by proper administration of relief funds and elimination of chiselers to care for worthy applicants who have been denied assistance.

Lee to Address Student Congress

Senator Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma, will speak at 9 a. m. today in the North Interior Building auditorium before the National Student Congress of Delta Sigma Rho, honorary forensic society.

More than 150 delegates from 40 colleges and universities are expected at the three-day convention, which will debate revision of the neutrality, revision of the national labor relations act, national defense and monopolies.

Elman Concert Here Tonight To Aid German Refugees

Seats Still Available for Non-Sectarian Recital; $100,000 Sought in Series Of 25 Performances by Violinist

Seats still are available for the Mischa Elman nonsectarian refugee concert tonight in Constitution Hall, it was announced last night.

The violinist, who gave his first concert at 5 in his native Russia, came to this country when he was 17, a recognized virtuoso. At the height of a brilliant career, he has taken a step unheard of in the history of music—he is devoting a concert tour to charity.

Since January 21, when the tour opened in New York, the proceeds of his concerts have gone to a fund for German refugees. The American Committee for Christian German Refugees, the Committee for Catholic Refugees from Germany, and the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee share equally in the funds.

Sponsors are hopeful $100,000 will be raised. Al Smith is general chairman. Concerts will be given in 25 cities.

Elman has had personal experience with persecution. Not only have many of his wife's relations suffered in Germany, but he himself was born and reared in Czarist Russia ghettos.

When he was a child, his father attempted to enroll him in a St. Petersburg conservatory, but because of the Czar's anti-Semitic regulations, the elder Elman was barred from hotels. The boy's musical genius so impressed officials that his father eventually was granted permission to live in the capital while Mischa was studying.

ABC Board Seeks Fingerprinting of License Applicants

Finger-printing of applicants for liquor licenses was proposed yesterday by the ABC board, it was learned.

The proposal was referred to Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal for a legal opinion.

It was understood that out-of-town applicants desiring new or transfer licenses could not be readily checked and the fingerprinting would be used for that purpose.

Gen. Grahl Elected To Head Adjutants

Brig. Gen. Charles H. Grahl, of Des Moines, adjutant general of the Iowa National Guard, was elected president of the National Guard Adjutant General School Association at the close of its annual meeting here yesterday.

He succeeds Brig. Gen. William F. Ladd, of Hartford, Conn. Col. John S. Bersey, of Lansing, Mich., was elected secretary.

Brooklyn Mother Seeks Son Here, Missing 3 Years

After three years of worrying and patient waiting, a middle-aged Norwegian woman, torn between love for her son and fear of traveling to a strange city, took her first train ride in hopes of finding her missing son here.

DANIELSON

In October, 1936, Finn Robar Danielson, then 19, left his home in Brooklyn to search for a job in Washington. Christmas week of that year he wrote his mother, Mrs. Julia Danielson, that he had at last found work and that he hoped some day "to make something of himself."

No further word was heard from the boy until a family friend, a Bronx girl, saw him on a downtown Capital street last year.

Three trips to the Missing Persons Bureau have brought no results so far, but Mrs. Danielson is determined that if Finn is in the city she will see him before she leaves.

"Maybe the company that first employed him knows where he is," she said, "it's been so long since I've seen him, and if I don't see him now I never will again. He is the youngest of my four children and I'm worried about him."

If any one has seen Finn Romar Danielson, or knows anything about him, his worried mother is waiting at 1515 Trinidad avenue northeast. Her telephone number is ATlantic 1337-R.

A.F.L. Union Wins Right To Bargain With W.U.

The Commercial Telegraphers' Union (A. F. L.) here won, 453 to 148, an NLRB election to determine the bargaining agent for employes of the Western Union Telegraph Co., it was announced yesterday. The Association of Western Union Employes (independent) polled the low figure.

Family Welfare Association Elects Officers

Director Davies Calls Family the Basis of Modern Democracy

The basis of modern democracy is the family, for it is in the family that the individual gets his first experience of social life, Stanley P. Davies, director of the Family Welfare Association of America, told 100 members of the Family Service Association, Washington affiliate of the national organization, at a meeting in the Young Women's Christian Association building, last night.

"By identifying himself and his interests with those of a group the individual first becomes a social personality," he added.

Practically every individual problem resolves itself into a family problem, Davies pointed out, as anxiety for his dependents increases the worry of the unemployed, and fears for the children often lead to hostility between a mother and her unemployed husband. On the other hand the many homeless "wrecks of humanity" who become "chronic drifters" show how miserable a man can become who has no family, he declared.

Woodson P. Houghton, newly elected president of the association, a Community Chest agency, reported that during 1938 the group had helped more families than in 1937, although its resources had been smaller. The society aims at helping families that are slipping before they actually need relief, he said, finding new opportunities for those who need them or helping them to make the best of what they have. The society helped 2,850 different families in 1938, the report continued.

Besides President Houghton, the following officers were elected: Charles C. Glover, jr., and William Floyd Crosby, vice presidents; Norman E. Towson, treasurer, and William H. Savin, secretary and director. The following were re-elected to the board of managers for a three-year term: William Floyd Crosby, David Edward Finley, Mrs. Wilfred L. Goodwyn, Mrs. E. K. Morris, Newbold Noyes and Evan H. Tucker. Canon Anson Phelps Stokes was re-elected to serve until July 1, 1939, and Dean Noble C. Powell was elected to succeed him on that date. Other new members elected to the board were Miss Marion Shouse, Mrs. Sadie G. Mays and Doxey A. Wilkerson.

Unified Playgrounds Win Support

House Sub-Committee Backs Supervision By Department Of Schools

A plan to place the Department of Playgrounds under the Board of Education has received the indorsement of the House District subcommittee on appropriations, it was learned yesterday.

Under the plan the public playgrounds under Miss Sybil Baker, supervisor of playgrounds, would be placed under the direct supervision of the schools.

At the present time, the District's play facilities have three controlling agencies, the Department of Playgrounds, the Community Center and the National Capital Parks.

Now in Playground Department.

The Community Center, which is under the schools, would be placed in charge of the 42 playgrounds that now are within the playground department.

Recreation centers under the National Capital Parks, including Takoma, Fort Dupont, Banneker, East and West Potomac, and the Sixteenth Street Reservoir grounds, would remain under the Federal agency.

Chairman Ross Collins, of the House District sub-committee on appropriations, first sponsored a similar plan three years ago. Recently he conferred with District officials on the plan, which they have indorsed.

Louis Barrett, who has served as co-ordinator of the three playground facilities, at present lacks the power to actually head the three groups.

Wender Backs Plan

Elizabeth K. Peeples, head of the Community Center, has not been informed of the proposed plan. On other occasions, civic groups have submitted plans for reorganization of the local setup, but all have met with failure.

Harry Wender, vice president of the City-Wide Playground Council, when informed of the proposed plan said it would have his support.

"I am certain the entire playground facilities can be handled efficiently by the schools," Wender said.

It was learned that under the new setup, Miss Baker would head the playground division, and Mrs. Peeples, the community centers. Estimates on the savings under the proposed reorganization have been placed as high as $30,000.

Life Begins at 70

Dr. Hilton, 50 Years a Druggist, Still Can't Make a Sandwich

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

Fantastic as it sounds, Dr. Samuel L. Hilton has been a druggist for more than a half century without ever having learned how to make a sandwich, demonstrate radio sets or give a sales talk on the latest fiction.

Twelve days ago he observed his seventy-third birthday anniversary, still at work in the same pharmacy at Twenty-second and L streets northwest, which he has conducted since July 4, 1889. He plans to keep at his mortar and pestle indefinitely and is quite confident he will never be tempted to install toys, high chairs or any of the other appurtenances of the twentieth century "drug store."

Dr. Hilton, who is a past president of the American Pharmaceutical Association, deals only in drugs and biologicals, not even handling candy or periodicals. His specialized knowledge, stock and facilities are frequently utilized by other druggists, when they find themselves confronted with some complex prescription.

Has Filled Prescriptions for Notables

When the great actress, Eleanora Duse, played in Washington nearly two decades ago she was advised beforehand in New York to have whatever medicine she might need compounded at the little apothecary's shop at Twenty-second and L. John Drew, uncle of John Barrymore, was another patron and more than one President have bought their remedies from Hilton's since Benjamin's Harrison's administration.

"Professional stores like mine, as contrasted with the commercial type, are on the increase," says Dr. Hilton. "I think the time will come, when separation of the pharmacy from other lines of business will be mandatory."

Born in Washington on March 18, 1866, he was graduated in pharmacy here in 1888 after having served a four-year apprenticeship. He joined the American Pharmaceutical Association in 1890 and was elected its president in 1921. His inaugural address at the New Orleans convention was the opening gun of a campaign to build a monumental home for the organization. The drive was climaxed in 1935 with the opening of the imposing marble headquarters structure opposite the Lincoln Memorial

Official of National Group

For the last 15 years Dr. Hilton has been chairman of the association's council and he has served as treasurer of the United States Pharmacopoeia Convention since 1910. This unit assembles every 10 years to revise the Pharmacopoeia, which is the druggist's standard bible. He attended the 1890 convention as a guest, the one in 1900 as an alternate and the 1910, 1920 and 1930 assemblies as a delegate. Association members who have attended as many of these important meetings can be numbered on the fingers of one hand. Dr. Hilton already is making plans for the 1940 session.

DR. SAMUEL L. HILTON

His grandfather was a pallbearer at the funeral of George Washington, as attested by the legend on the former's tombstone in Alxandria's Methodist Protestant Cemetery. The relic which the veteran apothecary cherishes most is a leaf from the account book of the old Leadbetter pharmacy in Alexandria. Just below the middle of the page is an entry of a nine-pence sale to Samuel Hilton, the grandfather.

Cards Pound Chase and Kelley, Beat Nats, 6-2

Davis Allows Griffs 5 Hits In 6 Innings

Gas House Gang Garners 6-0 Lead Before Locals Score; St. Louis Outhit, 9-8

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 29.—Combining some of the worst features of their hitting, pitching and fielding, the Nats succeeded in losing a ball game again today. Their flourishing little losing streak of three straight was embellished this afternoon by a 6-to-2 licking by the St. Louis Cardinals.

By the time the Nats got around to scoring some runs for themselves, in the eighth inning, the Cardinals had a 6-to-0 lead, and the ball game. The Nats had no runs to that point, because Curt Davis, one of the better pitchers in the National League, held them to exactly five hits in a six-inning job for the gas house gang.

The victims of the Cardinals' eight hits were Ken Chase and Harry Kelley. Young Chase was stirring some delight within the chest of Manager Bucky Harris until the fifth inning. Up to that point, he had allowed the Cardinals no runs and no hits whatsover. But in the fifth and sixth he yielded up three runs.

Kelley was greeted warmly by the Cardinals in the seventh. They nudged him for three runs before he could get the side out.

The fact is that the Nats actually outhit the gashouse gang, 9 to 8, but with men on bases they were an impotent crew, striking out, popping up and otherwise causing Curt Davis no trouble. There was great danger of a shut-out for the Nats until the eighth, when Rookie Johnny Welaj whacked one of Bill McGee's pitches for a home run into the hedges bordering left-field.

It wasn't all Chase's fault that the Cardinals broke the 0-0 tie with a run in the fifth after Owen made their first hit of the game—a single to left-center. Bobby Estalella played the ball as if there were a heavy fog in the outfield and by the time he had finished playing with it Owen was on second, from which point Mr. Davis himself

14-Day Race Meeting Opens at Bowie Track

Airplane Heads Entry List of Eleven Eligibles Named for Feature; First Maryland Racing Ever Held in March

By Walter Haight.

Thoroughbred horse racing, referred to as the "sport of kings" by the winners and "that darned racket" by the losers, makes its first 1939 stand in nearby Maryland today when Bowie opens a 14-day meeting. From 2:30 p. m., when a field of rollicking 2-year-olds is scheduled to arrive at the half-mile pole until the snow flies, and probably after, the bangtails will bang around the circuit—Bowie to Havre de Grace to Pimlico to Charles Town—making some richer and some poorer, while providing the thrills that turf fans, with the exception of winter vacationists, have not seen for three months.

For the first time in Maryland racing history, the sport is being conducted in March. Snow and ice that put an end to last fall's session at Bowie served to move up the time lost by the Prince Georges track.

Seven-Race Card

In distinct contrast to the frigid weather encountered after Thanksgiving Day last November, a crowd of several hundred gathered under a warm sun outside the secretary's office yesterday while waiting for the first entry list. The line-up for today is a typical Bowie card of seven races, topped by the $5,000 added Rowe Memorial Handicap, a sprint of 6 furlongs.

Eleven of the 17 eligibles were named overnight for the stake. The list is headed by Airflame, the speedster from the A. G. Vanderbilt barn and assigned top weight of 122 pounds. Airflame, a fair performer at Santa Anita, may be the favorite in the field but will have his work cut out for him. The son of Ariel will tackle a formidable opposition, including horses which raced during the winter and those who stayed in this section.

Honey Cloud to Start

Honey Cloud, owned by Whitey Abel, is slated to face the starter. The big horse hopes to pick up where he left off in Maryland last fall when he was a stake sensation. Honey Cloud did not fare well in California, but is unbeaten over the Bowie track. Florida will be represented in the Rowe lineup by Wise Prince, Drudgery and others. Rough Time, Yancy Christmas' Maryland-bred star, comes to the test after racing at Oaklawn while Old Rosebush and Bunny Baby came to Bowie from New Orleans.

The stay-at-homes will hold a strong hand in the sprint. Lady Maryland, Washington owned and Athelwold, W. L. Brann's stablemate of Challedon, have worked well and may be ready to make serious efforts at the first asking.

The daily double at Bowie is on the first and second races and the fans will have to figure on the new crop of juveniles for half of the twin wager. As usual, the 2-year-olds hold the opening position on the program. Two youngsters with Florida racing behind them will tackle six juveniles making their first start on any race track.

Alperstein Draws Bye At Madison

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Madison, Wis., March 29.—Ben Alperstein, national featherweight champion from the University of Maryland, who will seek lightweight honors this year, got a bye in the draw for the intercollegiate boxing tournament today, but three boys from Catholic University and two from the University of Virginia will have to start from scratch in their quest for national titles.

Alperstein consequently will not make his debut until Thursday night, while his contemporaries swing into action in the afternoon in the preliminary matches. It is a large, star-studded field assembled here for the three-day program, and the eight men who come out on top in their respective division can rightfully call themselves champions.

Ashby Barksdale, Virginia 145-pounder, will be the first boxer from the Middle Atlantic district in the ring, meeting Clarence Esterle, of Superior (Wis.) State, Thursday afternoon. Joe Bunsa, Catholic University's 155-pounder, is on the program, facing Ed Harvey, of Loyola of the South. Both have their tasks cut out for them, for Esterle and Harvey are rated among the best in their divisions.

Fred Stant, Catholic's middleweight entry, boxes another Loyolan in Bill Klause, but it is Jay Turner, 175-pounder, who faces the toughest preliminary assignment. Turner, a potent right-hand walloper, drew Syracuse's Americo Wojciesjas, reputedly one of the most promising youngsters in the East. If Turner gets by the muscular Pole he stands an excellent chance of winning the championship

Sonnenberg Badly Hurt in Bout With Casey in Boston

The bout had proceeded 35 minutes when Casey, former titlist, picked up the former Dartmouth football star and dropped him over his shoulder. Sonnenberg struck the ring head first.

He attempted to rise, but fell back unconscious. Handlers and the referee rushed to his side and, after a hurried examination, carried him from the ring and he was taken to the hospital.

League Meeting Tonight

An important meeting of A and B divisions of the National City Baseball League will be held tonight at 8 o'clock at Atlas Sport hcp. Vic Gauzza, president of the circuit, requests all teams interested in obtaining franchises to have a representative attend.

District Girl, Mrs. Page Meet At Pinehurst

Helen Dettweiler Wins; Jean Cothran Bows in Upset

By the Associated Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 29.—Fifteen-year-old Jeanne Cline, Bloomington, Ill., sensation, couldn't keep the pace today and she lost in the second round of the women's North and South golf tournament to Katherine MacCloskey, of Pittsburgh, one down on the eighteenth hole.

Miss MacCloskey's quarter-final opponent will be Dorothy Kirby, of Atlanta, Ga., who eliminated Helen Sigel, of Philadelphia, 2 and 1.

Mrs. Estelle Lawson Page, of Chapel Hill, N. C., the 1937 national champion, edged out Helen Waring, of Pinehurst, 6 and 4. Her next opponent will be Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, who defeated Mrs. Thomas R. Rudel, of Forest Hills, N. J., 3 and 2.

Mrs. W. G. Hamilton, jr., of Philadelphia, upset the defending champion, Jane Cothran, of Greenville, S. C., 3 and 1, and will meet Deborah Verry, of Worcester, Mass., tomorrow. Miss Verry won on the nineteenth hole over Mrs. Edward Stevens, of Greenwich, Conn

Mrs. William Hockenjos, of West Orange, N. J., found the going easy in her 4-and-2 triumph over Mrs. Karl Scheidt, of Philadelphia. Her opponent will be Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., victor, 8 and 7, over Mrs. Theo Weidersein, of Philadelphia.

Pinehurst, N. C.—Miss Dettweiler played Mrs. Thomas R. Rudel, of New Jersey, today in a second-round match and won by putting on a brilliant finish. Mrs. Rudel is one of the better players from the metropolitan sector and held Miss Dettweiler even until they came into the home stretch when a 2 at the fourteenth and a birdie 3 at the fifteenth, gave the Washington player a safe margin. She won 3 and 2.

In the Consolation of the championship flight Mrs. Leo Walper and Mrs. Myron Davy, Washington, will battle it out. Both ladies won today. Mrs. Walper defeated Mrs. J. P. Meador, Aberdeen, 1 up, and Mrs Davy defeated Miss Linder Sherer, New York, easily, 5 and 3.

Mrs. J. R. DeFarges, Columbia Country Club, Washington, was defeated today in the fourth flight by Mrs. H. N. Nesbitt, of New York, 3 and 1.

Jones Holds Putting Key to Success Today

Former 'Grand Slam' Champ Expects to Better Previous Showings at Augusta; Rated 40-1; Snead, Guldahl, Picard Co-favorites

By the Associated Press.

Augusta, Ga., March 29.—Robert Tyre Jones, jr., retired "grand slam" champion of golf, figured today he might make a fair showing in the sixth annual Augusta national tournament starting tomorrow "if I can get some putts to drop."

"When you're putting well, you're bound to score low," remarked the Atlanta lawyer who arranged this all-star show for his lone annual return to competition. "If you can't hit the cup, you certainly can't score well."

SNEAD

In the five tournaments already played here by the "fairway masters" over one of the most-talked-of courses in the world, Jones has failed to finish higher than 13th place. He has been a favorite in the "book" and with the galleries, but too many putts lifted his scores.

On the eve of the blue-ribbon golfing event, Jones was rated no better than 40 to 1.

The Nation's ruling champions, along with titleholders of other days—both amateurs and professionals—were out today getting the feel of the fairways and greens preparatory to the start of play in the $5,000 invitation event. The first round of 18 holes has been scheduled to get under way at 1 p. m., Eastern standard time.

Samuel Jackson Snead, walloping West Virginian who finished out of the money last year when he was rolling up one of the biggest bankrolls a golfer has won in 12 months; Henry Picard, the Hershey, "hammerer" who won the 1938 show, and Ralph Guldahl, the National Open champion, were betting favorites at 8 to 1.

JONES

Tall, blond Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., who registered victories in the "national" in the inaugural in 1934 and again in 1936, was rated at 14 to 1. Byron Nelson,

Mowbray New Leader in U. S. Pin Tourney

Hank Mowbray, another of Baltimore's pace-setting delegation in the National Duckpin Bowling Congress Tournament at Lucky Strike, took the lead in the all-important all-events class yesterday, when bowling with the Jimmy Marks "A" Five he totaled 1223 for the singles, doubles and team total.

Mowbray displaced a fellow townsman, Wesley Askew, whose total of 1214 looked better and better as the crack District delegation and others completed their sets in the tourney that ends on Saturday.

The Marks team fell way down in the totals with a 1,750 count led by Jake Wessel's 380 set. The best doubles set of the visitors was 820 by Mowbray and George Kuhn, who took over second place with 820, with Mowbray's 435 set leading the way.

Mowbray also took over the singles lead with a powerful 440 count from games of 124-153 and 163. A teammate, Kuhn, went among the leaders with 417.

Mowbray added his 440 singles, 435 doubles and 348 team sets, the latter hurt by a second game of 95, for the all-events lead that may withstand Saturday's day-long efforts of the Connecticut, Georgia, District and other delegations.

Should his singles and all-events totals stand up, along with his second place doubles score, Mowbray will undoubtedly be the biggest money winner of the several hundred entries.

Cy Young Happy on 72d Birthday

Once Peer of Pitchers, Now 'Foot-Loose, Fancy Free,' He Says

By the Associated Press.

Columbus, Ohio, March 29.—On this, his seventy-second birthday, the venerable "Cy" Young describes himself as foot-loose and fancy-free.

His big shoulders slumped slightly, his lanky legs crossed, Denton T. Young, once a peer among major league baseball hurlers, puffed contentedly today on a new pipe in the chamber of Ohio's Senate, where he's an assistant sergeant at arms.

"Cy"—short for Cyclone from the days when his fast ball was the envy of every kid—is taking life easy, or as he phrases it:

"Not get excited about anything, just going along trying to keep a little busy. You might say I'm just loose-footed; I can pick up and go just as I please. Maybe, after the Senate quits working, I'll go back to the farm (at Peoli, Ohio) for a while. Maybe I'll go over to the World's Fair.

CY YOUNG

"Feeling fine now, but not like

Puffs on New Pipe, Seems Contented in Ohio Senate Job

doing too much. Sometimes they want me to talk at banquets. You see, I'm not much of a talker, but I get along all right if I stick to my own line. Boys want to know how to be pitchers, but most of them don't have a chance to train properly.

"My arm still feels good, but I know the old whip ain't there. That's all over. It's about time for the teams to start North isn't it? Looks like I'll get to see a few more games. It's nothing to me any more, but I like to go out and watch 'em. Just sit there, not getting excited."

That's "Cy" now—unexcitable, even when his Senate co-workers presented him with the new pipe on his birthday today, 28 years after he had hurled more major league baseball games than any other pitcher ever has.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 29.—On the chance that you might be interested in National League baseball, we are taking as our text today the St. Louis Cardinals' Gas House Gang. It doesn't exist any more. The rollicking, rootin', tootin' fun-loving outfit that would fight or frolic at anybody's suggestion has been suppressed.

POVICH

The Gas House Gang began actually to disintegrate last year when Dizzy Dean, one of its mouthiest members, was sold to the Cubs for $185,000 to help pay the overhead of a club that wasn't doing so well at the gate. A year before it had suffered the loss of one of its most bellicose figures when Lippy Lou Durocher was traded to the Brooklyn Dodgers. The club was still plenty picturesque with such as Pepper Martin and his Mudcat Band which featured Frenchy Bordagaray, the only mustachioed player in baseball; Lon Warneke and his hill-billy yodeling, Fiddler Bill McGee and his mountain airs, and Pepper Martin with his mouthorgan.

But now even the mudcat band and its antics are no more. Branch Rickey, the general manager of the club, ruled it out by official ukase. And now the the irrepressible Pepper Martin who used to regale anybody who would listen with such orchestrations as "Susie My Toes are Cold," and "They've Come to Get You, Willie," is unhappy. On an evening at St. Petersburg these days he merely sits and broods, or perhaps he steps across the street to the pool hall to watch vacantly the goings-on there, or shuffles in his pocket for a stray nickel to drop in the jook-music slot.

Kept Rickey at Arms Length

What else was there to expect after Branch Rickey got control of the club. For the best part of 15 years, Cardinal managers had successfully kept Rickey at arms' length. Club Owner Sam Breadon never permitted General Manager Rickey to interfere with the operations of the Cardinals, limiting him to supervision of the Cards' farm teams and direction of its scouting system. But a year ago Breadon weakened and Rickey was put in charge of the works.

He began casting reproving eyes at the fun-making of the Cardinal club. It was to be expected. All his life Rickey has been a staunch Methodist and teetotaler. Even when he was playing ball himself in the big leagues he wouldn't play on Sundays. And when Rickey was managing the Cardinals, he absented himself from the park on the Sabbath. Burt Shotten was the Cards' special Sunday manager.

As we were saying, from 1925 when Breadon fired Rickey as manager in mid-season and made him a glorified scout, until last year, the Cards' owner never permitted his general manager to impose his will on the team managers. But now Rickey is boss, and his first move was to fire Frankie Frisch as manager and give the job to one of his own boys, Ray Blades, whom nobody has yet accused of being even a good minor league manager.

Rickey was a fair sort of catcher when the St. Louis Browns brought him up from the Texas League in 1905 and traded him to the Yankees that summer. But his health broke and he went to the University of Michigan for a law course. He thought his baseball was behind him until the Browns hired him in 1913 as business manager. A year later he was manager of the club getting the job held by Tex Stovall. The late Ban Johnson ordered Stovall fired as the Browns' manager. He didn't like the fellow for his habit of spitting in the umpire's eye, and otherwise causing a ruckus.

Hornsby Quit—He Didn't Get Fired

He managed the Browns with no particular successor for three years and then when a syndicate of townspeople bought the bankrupt Cardinal franchise Rickey was hired as general manager of the National League club. Sam Breadon bought the Cardinals at something like 20 cents on the dollar in 1919 and installed Rickey as manager.

Until midseason of 1925 Rickey managed the Cardinals, except on Sundays, but all of a suddon Breadon booted him up stairs into the general management and made Rogers Hornsby the manager. One of Hornsby's first acts was to hire Grover Cleveland Alexander, who was no teetotaler, and the straight-placed Rickey didn't like that. He didn't like Hornsby, either, for that matter, because Hornsby was not exactly a paragon personally.

There's no truth to the theory that Breadon fired Hornsby after the Cardinals won the pennant and the World Series with the Yankees in 1926. Hornsby quit. He quit despite the fact that he was offered $50,000 to manage the club in 1927. He quit because he didn't like Rickey. "Either fire Rickey or trade me," said Hornsby to Breadon. Breadon traded Hornsby to the Giants for Frankie Frisch.

It was an even swap. Hornsby couldn't get along with Rickey and Frisch couldn't get along with John McGraw. He was suspended by McGraw in 1926 and down through the years Frisch has never explained that suspension. And McGraw, too, never bothered to amplify it. But the suspicion is that McGraw, with his characteristic bluffness, called Frisch so many names and inferred that all ex-college players were dumb that Frisch upped and quit in a great hate for the Giants' manager.

Breadon Hired and Fired as He Pleased

Rickey has been credited with operating behind the scenes in the dramatic discharges of a succession of Cardinal managers. But he wasn't. Breadon, for all his respect for Rickey, hired and fired as he saw fit. He gave Bob O'Farrell the managerial job in 1927 and fired him because he lost by a game to the Pirates. But he did it in a sort of a nice way. He fired O'Farrell as a $20,000 manager and hired him as a $25,000 catcher. He gave the job to Bill McKechnie in 1928 and was pretty happy when McKechnie won the pennant that season, but he was very unhappy when McKechnie lost to the Yankees in four straight World Series games and fired him almost immediately.

One reason Breadon was so prolific in firing his managers was that pennant-winning manager were easy to pluck. The Cardinals had won two pennants in three years under different managers. So Breadon hired Billy Southworth to run the club and when he failed to win a pennant he brought McKechnie back. Tired of McKechnie, he gave the job to Gabby Street in 1930 and was rewarded with two straight flags.

Frisch, you remember, got the job in '33 and won a pennant in '34. But he tangled with Rickey because Rickey insisted that he give the young products of Rickey's farm system a shot at regular positions on the Cardinals. That would have been all right for Frisch except for the fact that Rickey's boys weren't good ball players. He raised a fuss and for three years he stood Rickey off. But Rickey eventually got the boss's ear and Frisch was fired and Rickey got Roy Blades for the job. The suspicion is that on the day that happened Rickey turned the Blades toward himself.

On the Line —With Considine

New York, March 29.—Each day it becomes a little more apparent that this impending New York horse-race season will be the last of its kind, or certainly one of the last. New Jersey is going to have pari-mutuel racing. It's inevitable. The New Jersey church people are against it, and the New York bookies have amassed a sizable campaign fund to fight it. But Frank Hague wants racing, so New Jersey will get it.

CONSIDINE

For 25 years New York racing has been tolerated by a peculiar statute that prohibited gambling but provided for no punitive action in the case of racing violations. In other words, racing in New York has had a sub rosa flavor of lawlessness, and if it weren't for the perseverance of a number of prominent sporting families the sport might long since have surrendered to the ever-present baser elements of the game. Instead, New York has been the yardstick of the rest of the country's racing, from an ethical standpoint at least, and her bookies have prospered by basking in the aura of this respectability—this partly lawless respectability.

Now they are in for a fall. The only question is how long they will be able to make a fat living beneath the stands at Belmont, Jamaica, Saratoga, Aqueduct, etc., pluckily offering odds of 7-to-5 on 3-to-1 shots. For when the pari-mutuel comes to New Jersey, amid a hullabaloo over how much that State is going to get as its tax cut, New York's Legislature is certain to grab its own racing by the lapels and demand its own cut.

Closer to New York Bettors

One of the reasons for this will be that one of the New Jersey tracks will be closer to Times Square than any of the New York tracks. We have it on good authority that the first Jersey track will be directly across the Hudson from midtown Manhattan, and can be reached in five minutes by way of the new Lincoln Tunnel. A lot of New York money, fresh money, is going to sluice through that tunnel, become mangled in the maw of the Jersey mutuel machines, and finish up in the Jersey treasury. It won't necessarily be the same money that goes to the New York bookies each year—and never gets around to the New York treasury. This will be new money, brought to Jersey by the thousands of small bettors who'll patronize the Jersey "machines," whereas they wouldn't think of going to one of the swanker New York tracks and exposing themselves to the chilly hands of a bookie.

Nobody will ever be able to compute how much the State of New York has lost, in justifiable tax money, since the Charles Evans Hughes ban on New York racing was lifted in 1913. Nobody doubts that more money is bet in New York each racing day than in any other gee-gee sanctuary in the world, including the fabulous Santa Anita and Hialeah, where you get trampled on in the $50 window's line.

Joseph M. Shalleck, the New York attorney who drafted the constitutions for pari-mutuel racing in New Hampshire and Texas, probably has a better idea of New York's daily track "handle"—none of it subject to the commonly accepted State tax on horse-racing—than any other interested party. He made a survey of New York's bookies some

Dapper Dans Down D. & H., for Post-A. A. U. Title

Capacity Crowd at Eastern Sees Missed Foul Shots Lose Last Contest for Delhuds

United Typewriter-Dapper Dans won the unlimited class championship of The Washington Post-A. A. U. basketball tournament last night before a capacity crowd in Eastern gymnasium by defeating Delaware & Hudson, 40-37, in thrill-packed final-round clash.

An erring eye from the foul line cost the Delhuds the victory, as they outscored Dapper Dans, 17-14, from the field but made good only 3 foul shots out of 12, while the winners were scoring 11 times from the charity stripe.

Billy Mitchell's 15-point total led the attack of the Dans, with the former George Washington ace, Jack Butterworth, contributing 13 points, while Tommy Folliard's 7 field goals, a majority of the sensational variety, led the losers, with Gerald Burns' 10 points next.

The eventual winners started with a rush and were out in front, 11 to 3, with ten minutes of the first half remaining, But D. & H. rallied, to bring the score to 15 to 11, with five minutes to play. Billy Mitchell's field goal increased the lead to 17 to 11, when Folliard and Kiesel scored in succession and Folliard scored again while falling, to tie the score at the half-time whistle.

Again at the start of the second half the Dapper Dans started strong and led, 29 to 19, but Burns dropped three from midcourt and Folliard was again successful with a 2-pointer to bring the score to 31 to 28, with ten minutes to play. Delhuds took the lead for the first time as they continued a scoring spree, 36 to 35, but it was their final gesture.

Hollidge knotted the count at 36-all, Mitchell scored with a long shot for 38 to 36, and after Acky Viani dropped a foul for the losers Butterworth and Hollidge scored from the foul line for the Typos and the game ended, 40 to 37.

Ollie Tipton, high-scoring ace of the winners in previous games, was held to a lone foul shot by Walker, but after it was evident that his point spree was stopped, he was the center of the passing attack that led to many of the scores.

Merrick, St. Martin's In 145-Pound Finals

The Merrick Boys Club and St. Martin's won their way to Saturday night's 145-pound finals by comparative comfortable scores. Merrick turned in a 29-20 victory over a tired Alexandria Boys Club team, while St. Martin's breezed home ahead of the St. Mary's Boys Club, 43-32.

Alexandria's boys, winners over Columbia Beverage in a hard-fought battle Monday night, played in the city series in their hometown Tuesday night and showed the effects of their tough schedule last night. They found Merrick in a scoring mood and failed to keep up with the local club. Dick Greer and Bob Magee led the Merrick attack.

St. Martin's became a slight favorite in the finals by brushing off St. Mary's with George Larrick in sensational scoring form. St. Martin's took an early lead and was never headed.

Two Teams Tie for Senior Ring Titles

National Guard, Fort Myer Draw For Championships

By Lewis F. Atchison.

The gloved fists of two service teams, Fort Myer and the District National Guard, punched 30 points out of the moist hides of their opponents last night at Turner's Arena, to tie for the senior boxing championship in the annual District A. A. U. tournament.

In the novice class it was the stout-hearted standard bearer of Merrick Boys Club that carried off the team honors, nosing out Pete's Athletic Club by a 40-to-30 margin.

The absence of Leon Miller, Fort Myer heavyweight, cost his mates a clear claim to the championship, for with the burly Cavalryman in action, win or lose, the troopers would have scored at least five more points. Miller was unable to appear, according to the official announcement, because he fell off his horse and contracted influenza. His inability to apear cost Chester Morris an opportunity of displaying his vaunted knockout punch, but Chester got the title anyway.

Presents Trophies

In was a rousing evening of the old Roman pastime, culminated by the appearance in the ring of civic leaders and finalists for the distribution of the prizes. James A. Sullivan, representing the Casey Club, Knights of Columbus, presented a handsome trophy to Merrick Club in the name of his organization, and Dr. John Fitzpatrick, provost of Columbus University, presented the senior award. Maj. Ernest W. Brown presented bathrobes in the name of the District Boxing Commission, to the new champions.

Billy Kekeris, National Guard 147-pounder who put Bib Williams, unattached, to sleep in the second round of their bout, was adjudged the outstanding senior in the tournament. Bobby Bradigan, Pete's A. C. 126-pounder, who scored a stunning upset at the expense of Bernie Mor-

Belle Haven Golf Club In Midst of 'Face Lifting'

Alexandria Course Enlarging Tees, Building Additional Locker Space and Cocktail Room

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The approaching golf season at Belle Haven's sporty layout on the banks of the Potomac in Alexandria will continue on about the same even keel, according to Tommy Ryan, pro-greenskeeper and one of the most popular of the local P.-G. A. members.

Club and course improvements, such as a remodeled seventh green, enlarged tees, a new cocktail room and additional locker space are in progress at the nine-hole layout, that through a different sets of tees on each nine presents 18-varied holes.

The seventeenth and sixteenth holes will be a better par 3 number when Ryan completes his proposed changes. The green will be built up in back and, to speed play, traps may be substituted for the lake. This would eliminate fishing for balls that has been a necessity after each missed shot.

The tees have been improved with new seed and sod and several extra ones have been added.

Visitors' Locker Room

The new modernistic cocktail room is already a money-maker, while downstairs Ryan gave up part of his golf shop to be converted into a locker room for visiting teams. Belle Haven is host to several team matches each year.

Club officers are: President, R. O. Marshall; vice president, Dr. Nelson Gray, and secretary-treasurer, C. C. Brown. Harry W. Anderson is greens committee chairman; R. L. Kane, golf committee head, and Robert H. Blickle, captain of the club team.

Ryan, who built the course 14 years ago, then went to the Winchester Club and then returned, is entering his tenth year as head of the greens force and golf shop. Tommy is champion of the Mid-Atlantic's golfing greenkeepers and is capable of holding his own in the sectional pro affairs. He has turned author, with a story of his course-operating plan in the last Greenskeepers Magazine.

Keeping his mind on the Belle Haven Club is an effort for the likeable fellow now, for his principal

FBI Five Beats Medicos For Title

Federal Bureau of Investigation won the Government Basketball League championship last night by taking its second straight victory over Army Medical Center in a playoff series at Bolling Field, 41 to 43.

Although the final score would indicate little difference between the hot rivals, in reality the G-men were never seriously threatened, as Robinson and the Thompson brothers, Jim and Herbie, led a fast attack.

The most sensational basket of the game came six seconds before the final whistle. After learning from the scorer that time remained for just one play, Jimmy Thompson sank one from beyond midfloor.

C. U. Hockey Team Defeats Georgetown

Hoyas Bow, 6-2, Minus 4 Regular Players; 1,300 Watch

Catholic University's hard-hitting Cardinals ran over the Georgetown Ice Hockey Club last night, overwhelming the Hilltop's unofficial team, 6-2, at the Ice Palace before 1,300 spectators.

Sweeping up and down the ice in unstoppable fashion during the first two periods, the Cardinals were far too powerful for Georgetown, which was minus four of its best players, and easily won the first sanctioned athletic meeting in many years between the close local rivals.

Due to last-minute developments the Hoyas took the ice without J. Smith, Vinnie Powers, Bob McBride and Bob Duffy who were laid low by stomach trouble, according to unconfirmed reports.

Georgetown and Catholic University will play the second of a proposed lengthy series to determine the city's collegiate hockey championship soon after the Easter recess, it was announced following the game.

And even then the announcer's voice could scarcely be heard above the roar of the near-capacity gathering, which still was applauding some of the roughest, most spectacular action of the season. The match, from a technical standpoint, was loose and marked by atrocious shooting, and even poor skating by the more inexperienced Georgetown substitutes. But with the spectators it was a humdinger.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

RUNYON

We can see where Leo McCarey, the movie director and producer, has played a mighty low-down trick on the other Hollywood fellows with his picture "Love Affair."

Here they all are up to their hip pockets in a Western dime-novel cycle, with Abraham Lincoln's spirit waiting just around the corner to start cycling like mad as soon as the last Redskin bites the dust, and McCarey goes and springs a brand new type of picture on them without an Indian, or an outlaw or a flag in it, and knocks us cash customers of the cinema into a regular bog of lachrymoseness.

If there is any justice in Hollywood, steps will be taken against McCarey for this outrageous treachery. What does he expect those other directors and producers to do now with all the old time stage coaches and six pistols and reproductions of log cabins in Illinois and false whiskers they have assembled, anyway?

Not to mention the bales of script borrowed in substance from Beadie's and Street & Smith's and Bob Sherwood's opus, and "The American Way?" And another thing that smacks of dirty work at the crossroads is that McCarey has with infinite cunning evolved a picture that does not look as if it can be cycled, which is to say copped.

He has constructed it more of spirit and mood than anything else and that is going to make it mighty tough on the rest of the boys when the movie magnates send for them after hearing how "Love Affair" is sucking in us cash customers and asks them what about turning out something like "Love Affair."

Strictly "Eye-Wipers"

We sobbed with such fluency when we saw the picture recently that the manager to the theater came around and said we would either have to bring a tub with us the next time he displayed a tear-snatcher or keep out of his joint entirely. He said the salt content of our tears was utterly ruining his carpets.

We called his attention to a lot of other fellows around us who seemed deeply affected by the picture but the manager said they did not count. He said they were strictly eye-wipers and snufflers and nose-blowers, who kept their tears below the high-water mark and did not endanger his furnishings.

We claim "Love Affair" is a great picture. At least it is great entertainment and as we have said before and will undoubtedly say again, that is the true test of greatness in a movie, as far as us cash customers are concerned, if it is not entertainment.

Charles Boyer and Irene Dunne are the stars of "Love Affair." In our opinion, Boyer, a Frenchman, is today the greatest romantic actor on the screen by seven lengths. In the first place, he can act. He is always completely believable. In the second place he has something that no other actor in Hollywood possesses to the same extent, and that is romantic interest for the gentlemen cash customers.

Asset to an Actor

Now let us tell you something. That romantic interest for the gentlemen customers is an overlooked but enormously valuable asset to an actor. We are not talking about Boyer's romantic appeal. That is something he has for the ladies. Interest is another matter. Boyer's romantic interest for the gentlemen lies in his appearance, his manners and his methods.

He is the fellow many of the gentlemen cash customers would like to be—that is, in romance. Well, anyway, we would. As a rule the gentlemen are inclined to resent an actor who has romantic appeal to the ladies. As a rule, he should be resented. When you find an actor who has romantic appeal to the ladies and romantic interest for the gentlemen, you have the perfect actor for both commercial and entertainment purposes.

In short, the gentlemen like Boyer, at least for the moment. We do not know how long he will hang on with them. The gentlemen cash customers are much more fickle than the ladies toward their movie favorites and especially toward romantic actors. The actor may develop mannerisms, or become so typed by the producers, that the gentlemen will quit on him over night and never want to see his kisser again.

You would be surprised how little the gentlemen like some actors, romantic and otherwise, who are big stars and big draws, but who owe most of their popularity to the ladies. We get around among our fellow cash customers quite a bit and listen to what they have to say about pictures and actors and actresses and we make bold to assert that there are not five actors in Hollywood who enjoy complete popularity with both the ladies and gentlemen, as Boyer does just now.

Golden Terror Faces McCoy On Arena Mat

Hooded Villain's 13th Appearance Here; Four Prelim Bouts

Claimant to the unofficial unpopularity crown of the premises, the Golden Terror returns to Turner's Arena tonight for a session of calisthenics with Bibber McCoy in the feature event of the weekly wrestling show.

It will be the hooded villain's thirteenth appearance on Promoter Joe Turner's property, but he isn't a bit superstitious about it. The Terror's old battle cry—something about he'll get by with the help of a foul or two, still rings true. A bit of a strangle hold will overcome a lot of jinxes or unfavorable omens, if the referee happens to be looking the other way.

A number of former Terror opponents are scheduled to appear in the preliminaries, which include a 45-minute time limit semi-final between Red Ryan and Hank Methany. Thirty-minute matches involve Jack Hader vs. Gene Bowman; Dropkick Murphy vs. Alonzo Woods; and George Pencheff vs. Ernie Powers.

Bill to Remove $3,000 Daily Tax on Pimlico Killed

Baltimore Delegates Win, 77-33

Measure Would Have Benefited Operators By $75,000 Annually

Annapolis, Md., March 29 (AP).—Baltimore County delegates united to kill a bill which would have removed the $3,000 daily tax on Pimlico racetrack, a bill called on the floor "a creature of Robert Carman, paid lobbyist for the multimillionaire bosses of Pimlico.

By a 77-33 vote, the Baltimore County delegation won a battle to lay the bill on the table, and then clinched the victory with a motion to reconsider the vote and lay the reconsideration on the table, making it impossible to revive the bill this session.

Delegate Paul O. Miles (Democrat), Baltimore County, said the bill, introduced by Delegates Thomas E. Dempsey (Democrat) Third Baltimore, was a "decietful, dishonest measure."

Would Reduce Daily Fee

Miles said the bill purported to be a plan to reduce the daily license fee of Pimlico track to $2,000 in 1940 and $1,000 in 1941. Actually, he said, it was a bill to eliminate the fee paid Baltimore County entirely, because it followed wording of a recent court of appeals decision upholding the law which said the present law would have been unconstitutional had it been otherwise drawn.

Pimlico was originally part of Baltimore County before it was ceded to Baltimore City in 1918. Part of the cession contract was the statute requiring Pimlico to pay $3,000 daily to Baltimore County in addition to the regular $6,000 daily State fee.

Bill Unconstitutional

"This measure would benefit no one in Baltimore City," Delegate Milton Tolle (Democrat), Baltimore County, argued. "It would only benefit the operators of the race track by $75,000 annually."

Tolle also said the measure was deliberately drawn to make it unconstitutional, to abrogate both the 1918 law and the proposed reduction in daily license fee, and let the track go free of its debt to Baltimore County.

Proponents of the bill argued it was an unfair burden on a legitimate Baltimore City industry.

PHENOMENAL, a keen factor from the start, moved into sharp contention in the stretch run and responded willingly at the finish. QUICK CHANGE, slow to settle in her stride, moved around her field entering the stretch and was going best of all at the finish. TOWN LEAGUE, on the inside, had good speed and took a brief lead in the stretch, but was no match for the winner. POLLY FAIR set a brisk pace, but weakened in the final stages. CIRCUS NIGHT closed well from a slow beginning. NANAHCUB showed no speed at any stage of the running. The others were outrun.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 2:33. Off 2:35½. Winner, Medway Stable's ch. f. (3), by Westwick—Grotto. Trained by G. Alexandra. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23, 0:47, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LADY HAV, $7.10, $3.00, $2.80; HOLIDAY TEA, $3.00, $3.10; EXPRESS, $9.20.

LADY HAV, favorite, kept within striking distance of the leaders on the inside the first half mile, came around her field entering the stretch and won going away at the finish. HOLIDAY TEA, away slowly, swung to the outside rounding the turn for home and was going well at the finish. EXPRESS followed the early pace of DOMANIO and hung on well in the final stages. DOMANIO set a fast early pace, but weakened in the closing strides. MAD DE MIE, outrun early, closed well. OH FUDGE raced evenly. The others were never prominent.

Daily Double, Phenomenal and Lady Hav, Paid $33.60.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800. For maiden 2-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:03. Off 3:07. Winner, Flying Horse Farm's ch. g. (2), by MacKenzie II—Les Lacques. Trained by W. E. Collins. Value to winner, $600; second, $125; third, $50; fourth, $25. Time, 0:23 1-5, 0:47 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MALAYAN, $9.50, $4.90, $3.40; WHIM WHAM, $4.10, $3.40; SHIPMADILLY, $4.70.

MALAYAN went to the front at once, opened up a daylight lead on her field, losing no ground rounding the turn and was ridden out smartly at the finish. WHIM WHAM, favorite, away slower than usual, circled her field rounding the turn for home and made a bold bid, but was not good enough. SHIPMADILLY followed in closest pursuit of the winner in the opening furlong, but gave way to the first two in the final stages. FORTUNATE BOOP had no excuses. The rest were never in contention.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:32. Off 3:33½. Winner, S. H. Fairbanks' blk f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—U BOAT, $6.70, $4.30, $3.10; POSTERITY, $4.90, $3.20; NOTICE ME, $4.20.

U BOAT raced POSTERITY into defeat the first half mile, widened out on his field thereafter and won going away with speed to spare. POSTERITY kept pace with the winner in the opening stages and just did last to save the place from the fast-closing NOTICE ME. The latter, far out of it in the early running, closed with determination on the inside through the stretch and just failed to get up in time. SHE'S RIGHT had no excuses. TERPSICHORE, favorite, performed in dull fashion and showed no speed at any time.

FIFTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:01. Off 4:01½. Winner, Jerry McCarthy Stable's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—O'BANTAM, $33.00, $14.30, $7.30; GHOST QUEEN, $6.50, $5.40; DETROIT BULL, $7.40.

O'BANTAM, unable to keep up with the fast early pace, saved ground on the rail going down the backstretch, slipped through on the rail coming into the homestretch and going to the outside, just did get up in time to out nod GHOST QUEEN. The latter took command after going a half mile and opened up a good lead rounding for home, but failed to last. DETROIT BULL assumed command at the start, gave way to GHOST QUEEN and came on again on the inside in the stretch drive. PALAMEDE, favorite, far out of it most of the journey, made a bold rush in the run to the wire and was going strong at the finish. ODDESA FRANK raced evenly.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward, maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:30. Off 4:32. Winner, Myrtle M. Brooks' blk. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SWING IT, $30.20, $10.20, $6.80; LOVERNA, $5.00, $4.90; BERT W., $5.20.

SWING IT went to the front immediately, was hard urged all the way to maintain her advantage and just did last. LOVERNA was up on the inside, closed gamely at the finish. BERT W., off slowly, moved around his field on the outside and gave a good effort. FLUSHING gradually improved his position and finished full of run. VENEER tired after forcing the pace of the winner the early part of it. The others never were prominent.

SEVENTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:00. Off 5:01. Winner, R. Robertson's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ASSIST, $6.20, $4.30, $3.70; GOLDEN X, $9.10, $5.60; HERMOSILLO, $4.90.

ASSIST, favorite, went to the front at once, opened up a commanding lead on the field and withstood a determined bid from GOLDEN X in the final stages. The latter, slow to get going, moved around his field on the far side, came with a rush in the stretch and just failed to gain the decision. HERMOSILLO lay within striking distance of the leader most of the way and was best of the others. NIPPONESE, on the inside most of the trip, hung on well at the finish. LAST ROMANCE closed with a rush.

EIGHTH RACE—One and three-sixteenths miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:30. Off 5:31½. Winner, A. S. Halliwell's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PEEDEEQUE, $8.30, $6.50, $4.00; BUSBY, $10.80, $6.90; ALPENGLOW, $5.10.

PEEDEEQUE, taken off the early pace, moved around his field rounding for home and was hard ridden out to overtake BUSBY at the finish. The latter, kept within striking distance, took command after leaving the half-mile pole and made a game bid, but was not good enough. ALPENGLOW set most of the early pace and gave way to BUSBY, but was best of the others. OUR TEDDY gave a good performance. DAVID W. closed a big gap. BOSONIA had no excuses. ALMAC had brief speed.

Long before the most ardent racing fans are out of bed, the business of the turf begins for man and beast in the stables surrounding the track. Here's a typical shot of stable activity at the Prince George's County track

Tropical Park, Fla., March 29 (AP). Entering the winner's circle for the first time this winter, O'Bantam, a stretch-running son of Transmute from the Jerry McCarthy Stable, just got up to snatch a photo decision from the Medway Stable's Ghost Queen in the West Palm Beach Purse here today. The chestnut 5-year-old, second longest-priced horse in the field of eight, returned $33 for $2 and covered the mile and 70 yards in 1:43 1-5.

Four horses pounded past the wire heads apart. The Bomar Stable's Detroit Bull was third and Mrs. K. Ramsey's Palamede, the slow-starting favorite, fourth. Eddie Arcaro, accepting his first mount since his victory on Day Off in the Louisiana Derby Sunday, had Palamede running over horses when it was too late. The gelding was a bad last for almost six furlongs.

Three of the starters—Palamede, Your Buddy and Dnieper—are eligible for the $10,000 Tropical Handicap, April 8.

Ghost Queen and Detroit Bull, the speed horses of the lot, put up a pretty battle for early command.

Washington Loan & Trust Forms Club

Bank's Employes Organize for Social And Sports Activities

The personnel of the Washington Loan and Trust Co. met in the board room at the main office yesterday afternoon to form a club for social, educational and sports activities and to bring the employes of the various departments and offices into closer touch with one another. After adoption of a charter and by-laws an election of officers was held, resulting in the choice of the following: President, Herbert D. Lawson, jr.; vice president, Lundeen V. Steele; treasurer, John L. Cain; secretary, Jeannette Fuchs, and assistant secretary, Leona E. Draeger.

The executive committee will be composed of the elected officers and a number chosen by each department of the institution for the purpose of co-operating all of the proposed activities. Meetings of the club will be held every month in addition to other gatherings for social and recreational objectives. Four standing committees will be appointed by the president—educational, entertainment, athletic and welfare. The name adopted for the organization is the Washington Loan & Trust Club. The meeting concluded with a resolution of thanks to Harry G. Meem, president of the bank, for his support of the undertaking.

A. I. B. Talk

Another of the talks sponsored by the public education committee of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, was presented by Hans W. Ireland before the Commercial Club of the McKinley High School yesterday. Mr. Ireland, who is assistant treasurer of the American Security & Trust Co., discussed the problem of investing money. His talk was a contribution to the program of educating the public concerning banks and their functions.

McKesson & Robbins

According to Lester A. Reeves, Washington representative of McKesson & Robbins, sales for the first two months of 1938. Of these $22,819,788 against $23,122,487 in the first two monthsb of 1938. Of these totals, sales of the drug and sundries department for the two months of 1939 accounted for $16,836,446 against $17,792,346 in 1938. All figures, which are preliminary, were adjusted to eliminate sales assumed to be fictitious under the former Coster-Musica regime.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, March 29 (AP). (U. S. Dept. Agr.)—Scattered lots of small volume were being sold from spot lines of fine territory wools today. Good French combing length fine territory wools in original bags were bringing 65 to 68 cents, scoured basis. Grades combing three-eighths blood territory wools have received a little demand at 59 to 61 cents, scoured basis. Spot fleece wools were quiet, but orders were taken for delivery in late April or early May on country packed mixed grade lots of three-eighths and quarter blood bright fleece wools at prices in the range 26 to 28 cents in the grease, Eastern points.

Steel Activity Slows at End Of 1st Quarter

Operating Rate Dips At Detroit, Chicago And Birmingham

The steel industry winds up the first quarter on a note of hesitation, according to the weekly review of Iron Age today. March business made no substantial gains. Sales of some products barely broke even with those of February, exceptions being tin plates and structural steel.

Production of ingots is estimated by the Iron Age to be slightly lower this week at 55 per cent of the industry's capacity. The change in the average is insignificant, but of importance is the fact that in the Birmingham district, where operations have been steady for several weeks, there has been a drop of three furnaces, reducing the rate from 72 per cent to 60½ per cent, while in Detroit, where buying by the automobile industry has been below expectations, one plant has reduced to 10 open hearths out of 16 available. While Pittsburgh district operations remain steady at 52 per cent, the Chicago district has dropped 3 points to 53½ per cent, the Cleveland-Lorain district is 2 points lower at 53 per cent and the St. Louis district has dropped sharply to 45 per cent.

Partly offsetting these losses are gains in the Wheeling-Weirton area, which is up 11 points to 76 per cent, and in the Youngstown district, which is up 1 point to 51 per cent.

If the steel industry were solely dependent on current buying, operating rates would be lower than they are. However, the volume of business that has been placed during the last two or three months, particularly in rails, track accessories, car material, structural steel and tin plate, is a sustaining factor in operating schedules.

Despite the discouragement caused by the failure of steel business to expand in the degree that had been expected by many in the trade, there is still confidence that the second quarter will make a fairly good showing, possibly bringing some improvement over the first quarter.

Argentina Makes Barter Agreement With Germany

Buenos Aires, March 29. — An agreement has been signed between the Argentine foreign office and the Germany Embassy, under which Germany purchases cereals and wool in return for Argentine purchases of railway materials.

Germany has been allocated the tender for rolling stock for the Argentine State Railways conditional upon German purchases within six months of 100,000 tons of Argentine wheat and thereafter about 8,000 tons of wool. This deal is entirely apart from the normal arrangements of Argentine-German Treaty dealings and simply affects the Reich's immediate requirements for its internal uses.

Argentina will buy principally 60 locomotives and 900 wagons for the state railroads. The deal regarding wool will coincide with delivery of the railway materials. It is estimated that the wheat sales will represent about 6,000,000 pesos and the sales of wool 8,000,000 pesos.

Prime Issues Advance in Light Trading Merchandising Stocks the Day's Favorites Best Rails and Utilities Up, Steels Down

New York, March 29.—Stocks moved irregularly higher under leadership of pivotal and selected issues on the smallest volume in more than a month today. Merchandising issues recorded the widest gains while the choicer rails and power stocks averaged fair advances. Steels dipped a bit on lukewarm predictions of new business from the automobile industry. Oils, rail equipments, foods and coppers moved narrowly. Aircrafts made small independent gains. Bonds were generally as dull and lethargic as share descriptions.

Foreign exchange markets showed signs of calming down after the nervous period occasioned by the Italian Premier's speech, the loyalist surrender in Spain and other European developments. While there were further offerings of French francs, sterling, Dutch and Swiss funds, gold engagements declined and controls were effective in holding most quotations steady.

Foreign News Better

While the news from abroad was more reassuring, or at least less alarming, dispatches from domestic fronts contained little to encourage the buying side. One generally expressed view in Wall street was that even if the cotton subsidy succeeds in removing a substantial part of the gigantic stocks of the staple held by the Government, such benefit to one section of the population would be more than offset by losses in other lines of trade. Brazil and Argentina, for example, will no doubt be irritated by the scheme which a large number of financial men believe will be throwing good money after bad. These two countries were recently wooed by Washington with promises of favored treatment if they buy more from the United States.

Passage by the House Appropriations Committee of $100,000,000 more for the WPA instead of the $150,000,000 asked looked more like a point for the President than one for the economy advocates. Actually more disturbing was the launching of a fresh drive by the Federal Trade Commission, this time against corn refining interests.

Steel common was today's most active stock, showing a small improvement, and General Motors and Chrysler also added fractions. Coppers held well, considering the action of the Chilean Senate in approving a 10 per cent tax on copper company profits to provide earthquake relief funds. The proposal is actually about as drastic as the export tax on the metal plan, which was dropped in favor of the profits levy.

In the rail division, Union Pacific was a strong feature, ending with a 3-point gain. Atchison was up a point. Sears Roebuck and International Harvester were among individual stocks to show good advances.

The composite for the 100 key big board stocks closed 0.19 point higher on sales of 456,280 shares in 638 listed shares, of which 320 advanced, 138 declined and 180 were unchanged.

Treasury Bonds in Demand

Listed bond trading remained a dull affair today, with best investment issues still firm and the speculative groups variable. Another sprinkling of new highs appeared among United States Treasury obligations. Railroad bonds were uncertain, as the legislative situation discourages activity. In the foreign section movements were wide and irregular. Danish issues remained sharply depressed because of the expansionist drive of Chancellor Hitler. Trading in all bonds amounted to $5,440,000.

Movements in the bulk of Treasury bonds were minor, but a few larger advances were recorded and they sufficed to provide new tops. The guaranteed issues of the farm and home corporations were firm, as the steady advance of the Treasury issues is making them more attractive on a comparative basis. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were maintained at their highs.

Secondary rail liens gathered a little strength, here and there, from the good performances of equities. New York Central, Southern Pacific and similar bonds were fractionally better, but bonds of some other roads declined. The borderline and default issues hardly moved. Changes in holding company obligations were mostly toward lower levels, but industrial convertibles were firm. Local tractions, communications and other special groups were uncertain.

Danish government and City of Copenhagen bonds fell to lows of the year, owing to fears that demands for the territory ceded to that country after the World War soon will be made by Germany. Polish issues and others that might be affected by the German moves were soft, but German bonds were firm. Italians were steady. The Latin-American default group was neglected, as fresh steps in the situation are awaited.

Cotton Price Range Narrow

New York, March 29 (AP).—Considerable activity was generated in the cotton market today by President Roosevelt's announcement of an export subsidy plan, but price swings were narrow in comparison with the gyrations of Liverpool and other foreign cotton trading centers.

Old crop deliveries finished 6 to 7 points down while the new crop months moved up 6 to 9. At the start the market met heavy liquidation, particularly from Bombay accounts in near months.

U. S. Banks Begin Year With Record Total of Deposits

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation announced yesterday that banks started 1939 with the largest total of deposits in history.

A summary of the condition reports made by the 13,659 insured commercial banks on December 31, 1938, showed deposits totaling $49,779,000,000, which was 5 per cent more than a year ago. Assets of the banks likewise were at a record high of $56,800,000,000, or about 5 per cent more than a year ago.

The report also showed that while the banks invested more of their funds in Federal, State and local Governmental bonds, their loans and discounts declined, at the end of 1938.

The banks held $14,507,000,000 of obligations of the Federal Government and its agencies, and $3,011,000,000 of the obligations of States and their subsidivisions.

At the end of 1938, the capital accounts of the banks amounted to 11.3 per cent of total assets, compared with 11.8 per cent a year ago.

I. B. A. Favors Removal Of Tax Exemptions

St. Louis, March 29 (AP).—The Investment Bankers Association is willing to support a constitutional amendment to remove the tax exemption of income from future issues of Federal, State and municipal bonds, John S. Clark, of Cleveland, chairman of its committee on municipal securities, said today.

Clark, speaking at a forum meeting of the Investment Bankers' Mississippi Valley section, asserted, however, that the association was opposed to President Roosevelt's plan to establish the taxing power by Congressional enactment.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, March 29.—The stock market finished with irregular price changes today. Traders proceeded cautiously throughout the session and volume of transfers was negligible. The industrial group was uneven, small losses in the majority. Gilt-edged issues had a firmer tone. Fractional advances occurred in the transatlantic list.

Paris—A steadier tone appeared in late bourse dealings today although final prices were narrowly lower. Government bonds and Bank of France shares were easier while internationals were irregular. Royal Dutch declined 94 francs and Suez Canal added 125.

Liverpool—Support of an export subsidy proposal for American cotton by President Roosevelt brought on a heavy liquidating movement in cotton futures today. Off 20 to 25 points at the day's extreme lows, prices recovered after the New York market opened and finished at or near the best or 5 to 16 net lower. Some top orders were caught on the decline. Wheat futures finished irregular, ¼d higher to ¼d lower in quiet trading. Further Far East bookings of grain were offset by liberal issuance of March tenders.

Seaboard Revenue Rises in Month

Norfolk, Va., March 29.—An increase in total operating revenues for February of $246,569 or 6 per cent over February, 1938, was announced today by L. R. Powell, jr., chief executive officer of the Seaboard Railway.

Freight revenue amounted to $2,693,372, an increase of $145,022 or 5.69 per cent over the same month last year, and, with the exception of February, 1937, was the highest for any February since 1931. Passenger revenue for February, 1938, was $758,818, as compared with $637,215 for February, 1938, an increase of $121,603, or 19.08 per cent, and was greater than passenger revenue for any month since February, 1930. Net railway operating income for February, 1939, amounted to $299,965, an increase of $91,073 over February, 1938.

Cleveland, March 29 (AP).—Erie Railroad's annual report showed today 1938 freight revenues of $59,371,227, a decline of 17.6 per cent from 1937, and passenger revenues of $4,874,471, a fall of 8.4 per cent.

Total operating revenues of $69,509,060 compared with $83,925,726 the previous year, a decline of 17.1 per cent. This left a previously reported net railway operating income of $3,214,328 for last year, or $10,399,679 under 1937, a more prosperous year for business generally. Operating expenses decreased 8.02 per cent last year.

Am. Roll. Mill Loss for 1938 Is $1,307,880

Net Profit in Year Previous Amounted To $8,231,334

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 29.—American Rolling Mill Co., of Middletown, Ohio, reported today for 1938 net loss of $1,307,880 after all charges, including $3,516,405 for depreciation and depletion. In 1937 net income amounted to $8,231,334, equal, after provision for preferred stock, to $2.55 a share on the common. George M. Verity, chairman, and Charles R. Hook, president of the steel making concern, said of the year's results:

"The drastic decline in industrial activity resulted in such a low percentage of operations over such a substantial period that, together with the constant attack on steel prices by many uninformed persons and with the natural competitive situation, it ultimately resulted in a breaking down of price structures throughout the iron and steel industry."

Electric Bond & Share

Electric Bond & Share Co. today reported for 1938 net income of $9,401,251, equal after preferred dividends to 18 cents a share on common stock. This compared with 1937 net income of $10,642,146, or 42 cents a share on common stock.

20th Century Fox

Twentieth Century-Fox Film Corporation reported for 1938 consolidated net income of $7,252,466, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $3.35 a share on common stock, compared with $8,617,114, or $4.11 a common share, in 1937.

Seaboard Oil

Seaboard Oil Co. of Delaware reported today for 1938 consolidated net profit of $1,895,790, equal to $1.52 a share on the capital stock, compared with $2,447,130, or $1.97 a share in 1937. The company has extensive producing interests in Western States.

United Biscuit

United Biscuit Co. of America and subsidiary companies reported for 1938 net profit of $1,030,245 after all charges, equal after preferred dividend requirements to $2.07 a share on common stock, compared with $961,361, or $1.90 a common share, in 1937. Bakeries are throughout the country.

Wesson Oil

Wesson Oil & Snowdrift Co., cottonseed oil refiners, reported for six months, ended February 25, net net profit of $18,822 equal to 6 cents a share on the $4 preferred stock, compared with $1,718,347, or $1.59 a share on the common after provision for preferred dividends in the comparable period a year ago.

Mexican Oil Sales Cut Nearly in Half

Mexico City, March 29.—Production of crude oil in Mexico for February is estimated privately at 2,500,000 barrels. Exports in that month were about 1,427,000 barrels, of which approximately 672,000 were shipped to Italy and about 553,000 to Germany. The remainder was shipped to the United States and South America, some being used in ships' bunkers. Average monthly exports before expropriation were 2,080,500 barrels, whereas since expropriation shipments have averaged 1,200,000 barrels.

I. B. M. President Sees Big Market In South America

New York, March 29.—South America is one of our best future markets, and the United States should put forth every possible effort to assist in developing the resources of South American countries, Thomas J. Watson, president of International Business Machines Corporation, said today on his return from a visit to principal South American countries.

"I visited Peru, Chile, the Argentine and Brazil, in the interest of the International Business Machines Corporation, the International Chamber of Commerce, and the Inter-American Commercial Arbitration Commission," he said. "In meeting political, financial and industrial leaders of the various countries, I found a very friendly spirit toward the United States.

"I believe that the United States should put forth every effort to assist in the development of the resources of South America.

Indians Loom As 'Dark Horse' In High Series

Anacostia, With Fine Pitching, Figures to Pull Several Upsets

By Bill Burnett.

(This is the second of a series of articles discussing the 1939 prospects of each of the seven interhigh baseball teams entered in the annual race beginning next month.)

Splitting the public school baseball tangle into eastern and western divisions may cut down the number of games each team will be forced to play, but it will do nothing to lessen the caliber of competition Anacostia, the newest club in the series, will have to face.

Due to its location, the little school down on the flats will be in the same league with Eastern, winner of 11 out of the last 15 baseball series, and McKinley, which has dropped below fourth place only three times in 20 years of competition.

Lund Is Confident

However, Coach Roland Lund looks on the chances of his tiny squad with considerable satisfaction, and even certainty. He has only 25 out for baseball, as compared with 130 for Eastern and numbers graduating down to 50 at the other schools. But he still smiles when he talks of the coming season.

"Tell you why," he says, "I've got two of the likeliest-looking pitchers in the series. They's both right-handers—not a Cuban among them—and their names are Art Faircloth and Jack Burroughs."

Lund doesn't end his praise with his right-handed pitchers, though. He has two novices, Earl Watkins and Hank Tanner, who hurl from the port side and both have speed.

Yesterday Anacostia held a practice session with Eastern, its mother school, and a team that promises it a deal of trouble. Tanner started on the mound for the Indians. He was wild as the proverbial March hare—he walked two runs across in one inning—but he showed considerable promise, nonetheless.

Only Three Graduation Losses

Though only three Anacostia lettermen of 1938 were lost by graduation, the total number of veterans out at present is three—Capt. Perry Seaman at second, Bob Gordon in rightfield, and Burroughs on the mound. Three other stalwarts on whom Lund fastened hopes, but who will be scholastically ineligible for half the season, are Otis Scott, first; Dick Farr, catcher, and Earl Smith, third.

In Farr's place behind the bat will probably be Del Coon, the gridder who suffered a broken leg early in the season. He was good enough to earn all-American Legion honors last season. Lambert Anderson, converted cage star, will take over Smith's hot-corner job, and two clever first sackers have turned up in Elmer Leukhardt and Frank McLaughlin.

Anacostia's schedule:

April 4, at Episcopal; 18, Western; 21, at Eastern (Interhigh); 25, at Roosevelt; 28, at Tech (Interhigh); May 2, Central; 5, G. W. Frosh; 10, Tech at Eastern (Interhigh); 12, Bethesda; 16, at Eastern (Interhigh); 19, Wilson; 26, at Mont-Blair.

Anacostia High School Hurlers in Practice Windups

Down In Front

With Richards Vidmer

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 29. Sometimes you know more of what a man thinks by the way in which he says something than the words which he speaks. For almost a fortnight I have paid daily visits to the dugouts at Waterfront Park, and, in the process of renewing old friendships with the major league managers passing through, have listened to what they had to say about their teams in the coming pennant parades.

VIDMER

But also I have noticed the manner in which they discussed their possibilities, and here they are:

Joe McCarthy, New York Yankees—Even with three American League championships and three resulting World Series victories behind him, the pilot of the American League favorites remains a conservative. He will discuss his team and its players in a friendly way, but he refuses to make reckless predictions and maintains an attitude of reserve, constantly reminding you that accidents can happen to any ball club and no rising star is certain to shine.

Frank, Outspoken

Ray Blades, St. Louis Cardinals—New as a major league manager this year, the leader of what once was the Gas House Gang is most eager to please those who want to know what he thinks of his team. He is frank and outspoken, enthusiastic over his task of assembling a pennant contender without being overly optimistic about the results he may attain.

Joe Cronin, Boston Red Sox—Friendly, affable and with a sincere handshake of greeting, the Boston's pilot eyes turn serious and convincing when he speaks of his Red Sox. He radiates enthusiasm with a determined attitude, as though he knew the task of beating the Yankees is a large one, but is convinced that it can be done if every player produces his best efforts every minute.

Man in a Mask

Bill McKechnie, Cincinnati Reds—Quietly reserved, outwardly plain-spoken, Bill McKechnie listens to what others have to say of his team and his players rather than advancing his own ideas concerning their ability and potentialities. He answers questions with questions of his own. Realizing that the Reds have been made a favorite in the National League race this year, he takes the responsibility with apparent calm and appears pleased that so many think so well of this club.

Del Baker, Detroit Tigers—Like Blades, the new manager of the Tigers is eager to make a good impression on those who come to question him and hides nothing from the prying reporter. He is enthusiastic about his new job and determined to make good. Every minute his players are on the field he is the busiest person around, watching every move, never missing a trick.

Chase encouraged trouble for himself in the sixth by walking Johnny Mize and pitching a single to Terry Moore. Then he pitched singles to Gutteridge and Davis and the Cardinals' lead bloomed to 3-0.

With the entrance of Kelley into the game in the seventh it burgeoned into a 6-0 score. Kelley's first act was to walk Stu Martin and then Slaughter got a cheap double with a drive that took a freak hop over Buddy Myer's shoulder. Pepper Martin singled to drive in two of the three runs the Cards scored in the inning.

Thereafter Kelley allowed one hit, but that hit was no bunt. It was a tremendous triple by Johnny Mize into right field in the ninth at a time when, happily for the Nats, none was on base.

Reds' Rookies Blank Red Sox, 1-0

Sarasota, Fla., March 29 (I.N.S.).—Two Cincinnati Reds rookies, Thompson and Livengood, shut out the Boston Red Sox, 1 to 0, today. Making his first start since his arm ailment put him on the sidelines, Lefty Grove hurled three scoreless innings for Boston.

Athletics Shell Cleveland, 15-6

Lake Charles, La., March 29 (I.N.S.).—Lou Finney and Frank Hayes, letting go with circuit clouts, helped the Philadelphia Athletics shell the Cleveland Indians, 15 to 6, in an exhibition today. Jeff Heath scored a four-bagger for the Indians.

Duke U. Nine Routs Colby College, 26-8

Durham, N. C., March 29 (AP).—Duke University's baseball club evidently puts little faith in the air-tight, low-scoring game Coach Jack Coombs learned as a pitcher with the Philadelphia Athletics in "the good old days."

Coombs' Duke team today slaughtered his alma mater, Colby College, 26 to 8. In its opening game last week against another New England College, Springfield, Duke won, 33 to 1.

Jesbauer's 381 Set High At Arcadia

City Bank No. 1 went four games out in front in Bankers' League play list night at Arcadia by winning two from Munsey Trust. Hamilton won a pair over American Security and Trust No. 2, and Riggs took three from National Metropolitan No. 1.

Jesbauer, of the Munsey team, had a 158 game and 381 set to lead the individuals, while City Bank No. 2 had 595 and Riggs 1,692.

Brookland Merchants

Kilber's 152 and Sherwood's 393 led the Brookland Merchants League scoring last night, while high team totals were a 583 game by Brookland Garage, and 1,653 set by Sims Radio.

Sims won two from Brookland Garage and tied DePerinia for the league lead, as the latter lost two to United Delicatessen. DePerinia's lead on total pins, however.

Temple Minor League

Standard Brand cut to one game the Senators' slim lead in the Temple Minor League by defeating its rival, 2-1, as Julius Frager rolled 369.

Frank's Tavern broke a nine-game losing streak at the expense of Hoffer's Market, winning the final of their match with a 611. The Tavernmen thus snapped out of a disastrous slump which followed their recent 34 straight victories. Mathews led Hoffer's with 353.

Southeast League

Maryland Market figured in an upset by taking two from the third place Square Deal of the Southeast League behind Herb Young's 356. The losers wasted George Honey's high set for the night, 384.

The fourth place Shaffer's team took a 2-1 decision from East Capitol, despite the losers' ten consecutive marks the last game.

Recreation League

By taking three games from Sammy's Liquor Store, American Window Cleaning Co. rollers deadlocked the pennant chase in Recreation League, with the University Shop team. Fred Murphy's 397 and Earl Gochenour's 386 were high for the winers, while Ed Edinger's 412 and Ed Cleary's 380 were tops for the losing Roofer boys.

Standards Five Takes First Place

Bureau of Standards took undisputed possession of first place in the Government-Y. M. C. A. Basketball League last night by outclassing Library of Congress, 34-20, at the Central "Y" gym.

The final round of the qualifying play has been moved up to tonight so that the championships may get under way at once. Ten teams will see action tonight, starting at 7 o'clock.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Recently W. Howard Woolworth, promoter of the Canadian-American events, better known to bridge players as Uncle Bing, defeated two of New York's flashiest experts, making an overtrick at six no trump, redoubled, through a quasi squeeze.

His partner was that slightly built skeptic, Arthur Jarmel, who stepped out of character for the deal to plunge the always optimistic Uncle Bing into six no trump. Jarmel's bid was not without reason, however, for a long solid suit such as he held, in addition to real tricks, often brings disastrous discarding problems to the defense. It so developed in this case, and Uncle Bing's fake attempt at a finesse finished the business. East, pared down to two poorly protected queens, covered the sly and tempting proffer of the jack, and our friend from Buffalo felled both the king and queen of hearts with his singleton ace.

Whist Rule Runs Afoul

Here is the play in detail:

West led the three of diamonds, and eight diamond tricks were run off immediately, forcing both East and West to make almost blind discards. This situation developed:

Uncle Bing played the heart jack and East, in a quandary, probably went back to that old whist rule of "always cover an honor with an honor" to solve his problem. He played the queen. The lone ace in the South hand won, dummy was re-entered with the club ace, and the good hearts cashed. The king of clubs accounted for the thirteenth trick.

Jarmel, who was delighted at the outcome of the hand, is frequently the source of wit, mixing words and confusing phrases to the merriment of the bridge players.

At the end of his session with Uncle Bing, he took a hand that was troubling him to Dr. R. H. Ecker, jr., the master's individual champion, to obtain his views of the bidding.

"I want your opinion," he said to the holder of the master's individual title, "because you are the master individualist."

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

Upon leaving Room 357, Senate Office Building, where the civil service investigations are proceeding, Senator Ellender (Democrat), of Louisiana, observed Tuesday that some good will come from these "little hearings." This was an optimistic note, for the Senator, when in the midst of the previous involvements of the Tuesday hearing, must have been plagued with the thoughts of whither he was drifting. If he wasn't, everyone else was.

For if ever there was an exposition of Federal red tape, Ellender was then privileged to hear it. It bound up everything but the table legs in the room. It began to unfold when Edward Henkel, chief clerk of the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department, took the stand to tell what should have been the simple story of Miss Mary E. North, a stenographer in the chaplain's office, who worked 20 years without reward and drew a letter of reprimand for trying to get a promotion.

Now this should have been a simple yarn of a blighted hope and of justice that seems to have miscarried. But the plot became so involved in the narration of all the Government procedure surrounding the case that it took the form of a profound problem in corporation law, a matter for a high tribunal to bewilder over. Ellender, at one point, cried out that he could not follow through, and when Vice Admiral Andrews, one of the characters in the melodrama, was called for but found to be presently at sea, a reporter whispered that "all of us are, and if I get any more like this, I'll ask for reclassification."

And, when all the hammering was finished, the kernel that came from the hard shell was simply this: the Navy Department was such a stickler for form that an employe who had been there 20 years didn't know how one of the intricate papers should be filled out—and this form as important as one which would carry an appeal for promotion! Miss North's dilemma resulted in the letter of reprimand which, in turn, was responsible for the hearings Ellender now holds.

What all of this will lead to none can say. The hearings go on, and will, indefinitely. Some day, the record, a voluminous one, will be laid before Congress. From present indications, it will note that no responsible Federal personnel people are in attendance, other than those summoned to appear. It will note that these take leave of the hearing the moment they are dismissed. It will note that there is no uniform system of promotions, of efficiency ratings, in the departments and agencies. In all, the Federal personnel setup will occur to the Congressmen as a very vague and haphazard business.

THE Congressmen will see that the personnel officers—who attended the hearings under compulsion—are optimistic over the June 24 Executive orders which are supposed to create a new order in the service. And maybe the Congressmen will follow that cue, and saying, "all will be well," just leave it at that.

THE MARITIME COMMISSION is interested in Federal employes who want a course (evening) on naval architecture and marine engineering. It has tentatively arranged with George Washington University to offer an evening school course in this field. Candidates must have civil service status and, perhaps, a background of experience. You may contact P. W. Melton, training section, Penthouse of the Agriculture Department Administration Building.

NOW the Federal personnel directors, who have more than a trifle of a job, are being looked to in taking the lead to cut down accidents in the service. Comments W. T. Cameron, chief safety adviser, Labor Department Division of Labor Standards: "Today in the Federal Government service, exclusive of employes on emergency relief projects, we are sacrificing the lives of 300 Government workers a year, causing injury to about 35,000 others and wasting millions of dollars in accident costs." The cure, he adds, is "perfectly within the realm of possibility through the alert and sincere leadership of personnel directors and other Government officials."

Bob Burns Says—

I guess everyone of us every once in a while feels like they'd like to drop everything and go off some place and just be a hermit. Of course, very few people ever do this because they haven't got the nerve I guess. But I had one uncle, that was my Uncle Hermy, he got disgusted with everythin' and he went way back in the mountains. The first few years some of us went back there and tried to get him to come back to civilization but he wouldn't listen to us. Thirty-five years passed. Finally, he must have figured that maybe he was wrong and he'd give civilization another chance.

One night he showed up at our house with bag and baggage. He started poppin' questions at us right away. He says, "Did Bryan ever get elected?"

Paw says, "No."

Hermy says, "Are all the people workin'?"

Paw says, "No."

He says, "Have all the folks found out how silly wars are?"

Paw says, "No."

Uncle says, "Well, you don't need to unpack my things—I'm going back to the mountains."

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Danny Is in High Spirits

Where ill is all that you can see
A hidden blessing there may be.
—Danny Meadow Mouse.

Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse were living right next door to two of their very worst enemies, Mr. and Mrs. Harrier the Marsh Hawks. In the beginning it wasn't by choice that they had such dangerous folk for close neighbors, although it was from choice now. Peter Rabbit was having hard work to believe this.

"I don't believe a word of it," declared Peter, flatly and most impolitely, when Danny told him that he and Nanny Meadow Mouse were glad to have the Harriers for such close neighors. The nest of the latter, built on the ground, almost covered the entrance to the underground home of Danny and Nanny.

Danny chuckled. It was a funny, squeaky, little chuckle. "Once I wouldn't have believed it myself," said he. "No, sir, I wouldn't have believed it. When that nest was begun right side of us Nanny and I thought that nothing could be worse. We thought we never had been in greater danger. We thought we were in the very worst of luck to have those always hungry robbers choose this place for their home. And all the time it was good luck. We just didn't see it, that was all. You know a lot depends on how you look at things."

Peter nodded. "I know," said he. "But I never would be able to see any good luck in having my worst enemies for my nearest neighbors. That doesn't make sense, Danny Meadow Mouse."

Once more Danny chuckled his squeaky little chuckle. "It doesn't sound like sense, but it is," said he. "You probably think that we are living in the most dangerous place in the world. Nanny and I thought so at first and were scared half to death. But the truth is we are living in the safest place. Don't you see that now?"

"No I don't. I think you are talking foolishness," replied Peter.

"That is where you are wrong," squeaked Danny. "Those Hawks do all their hunting in the daytime, don't they?"

"Yes," agreed Peter.

"Well we are like you—able to see in daytime or at night and preferring the latter to go about much. So all we have to do is to stay at home and sleep through the day, and go out where we please at night. We are perfectly safe from them then," explained Danny.

"I hadn't thought of that," replied Peter.

"And there is something more you hadn't thought of," continued Danny. "Those robbers don't expect to find us right close to where they live. They don't do much of any hunting right close around home. They go off to other parts of the Greens Meadows. So if we were living way off on the other side of the Green Meadows we really would be in much more danger if we ventured out in daytime than we would if living right next door.

Peter thought this over. "I hadn't thought of that either," said he.

"There is something else you haven't thought of. We didn't think of it either, but we found it out," said Danny.

"All right, I'm listening. What is it?" said Peter.

"It is safer for us around here at night than it was before they came," replied Danny.

"I suppose it is if you say so. You ought to know. For myself I don't see it," said Peter.

"Hooty the Horned Owl and Spooky the Screech Owl keep away from here now. They do their hunting somewhere else. It is the same way with Reddy Fox and Mrs. Reddy. They don't want trouble, so they keep away too. Anyway after the Black Shadows arrive and Mr. and Mrs. Harrier settle down for the night Nanny and I can go about more freely than at any time since we were protected by snow in winter. We may have dangerous neighbors, but we never have felt safer."

Torrio Jailed As U. S. Opens Tax Trial

Jury Locked Up, Judge Gives Prisoners Same Treatment

By Bob Considine.

Copyright, 1939, by International News Service.

New York, March 29.—While his attorney, Max Steuer, vainly fumed, little Johnny Torrio, charged with chiseling on his income tax returns in his lush years as a gang lord, tonight was ordered locked up in the Federal house of detention by Federal Judge John W. Clancy.

Free until tonight on $50,000 bail, the chubby mentor of Al Capone was jailed immediately, and unexpectedly, after Steuer and United States Attorney John T. Cahill's staff had agreed upon a jury of seven men and five women.

Judge Clancy then ordered the jury locked up for the night, and as Torrio and his four co-defendants arose to leave, Clancy announced that he was remanding them to jail. It was the first time since the Dutch Schultz trial that a Federal judge has taken this precaution in a tax case.

Judge Defends Action

"If I lock the jury up it is also logical for me to lock up the defendants."

The G-men who sat behind Torrio and the other defendants moved in on them and quickly removed Torrio, who once boasted that he was "too small to be hit by a bullet and too big to be prosecuted."

Two alternate jurors will be selected tomorrow morning, after which young Assistant United States Attorney Seymour Klein, who has been investigating Torrio's finances for three years, will deliver his opening address—in which he will tell the story of the little man who rose from a bartender to become undisputed gang chieftain over territory that extends from Chicago to New York.

So great was Torrio's power, the Government will contend, that the murderous Schultz called him "boss" and invited him to take a sizable cut of all his enterprises. Torrio's chauffeur and general handy man was a flabby Brooklynite known as Al Brown. Brown long since became Al Capone and from Alcatraz, where he is serving a similar sentence to the one which faces Torrio, Capone has sent a 20,000-word deposition, "putting the finger on" his former boss.

Faces 12-Year Term

Faced with a possible 12-year sentence and a $30,000 fine, Torrio is charged with criminally evading payment of $86,643.41 income tax in 1933, 1934 and 1935. Also named in the indictment and present in court today were William Slockbower, Torrio's brother-in-law; John D'Agostino, a New Jersey whisky runner; Louis G. Lacava, the Capone mob's bookkeeper, and James LaPenna.

The figure on Torrio's own evasion is comparatively small compared to his gigantic tax payments in the past. He was hit for a $300,000 tax levy in 1932 by the Bureau of Internal Revenue.

When once again he got into tax trouble, in 1937, he offered to toss the Government another $100,000 if they'd call it all off.

He came up to this figure after a preliminary offer of $10,000, but even the $100,000 figure wouldn't suffice.

Plane Is Reported To Have Blown Up In Mississippi

Prentiss, Miss., March 29 (AP).—Sheriff A. H. Polk received reports tonight that a plane fell and exploded in the swamps 10 miles northeast of here.

"There was some talk that it might be an Army or Navy plane, but no one gave a good description," the sheriff said. "A searching party was organized immediately, but rain and the high water in the swamp prevented it from entering."

He said efforts to enter the marshy area tonight were abandoned, but that a party would attempt to reach the ship at daybreak.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Dr. Walter Bauer conducts the Department of Agriculture Orchestra Wednesday night in Agriculture Auditorium. Soloists: Anne O'Brien, harp, and Irving Ginberg, violin. Program: Overture to Ruslan and Liudmila" (Glinka), Sailors' Chorus from "Der fliegende Hollaender" (Wagner), Adagio Cantabile for solo violin and men's chorus (Tartini) "Ave Maria" (Brahms), "Dance Song" (Weinzierl), Chorale and Variations for harp and orchestra (Widor), Symphony No. 4 in E flat major (Bruckner).

Repeating the program presented Monday night, the Department of Agriculture Orchestra, assisted by the men's and women's sections of the Symphonic Chorus, played for another full house of auditors last evening. If interest continues to grow, it will not be long ere the organization will have to give the same program thrice to accommodate all who would like to hear it. In this particular case, the repetition benefited a reviewer who was unable, because of a conflicting concert, to attend the first performance.

Dr. Walter Bauer began his diversified and interesting program with the familiar spirited overture to Glinka's "Ruslan and Liudmila," one of the two operas which form the foundation of the Russian nationalistic school of music, the other being "A Life for the Tsar." It was more than a century ago that Mikhail Ivanovich Glinka determined to break away from the foreign influences which dominated music in his native land and to use folk themes. By this decision he became the "prophet-patriarch" of an artistic impulse that is still active.

After the overture came the "Matrosenchor," from the first act of Wagner's "Der fliegende Hollaender," sung by the men's section of the Symphonic Chorus against an orchestral background. The male crorus also participated in an unusual arrangement of the so-called "Adagio Cantabile," by Giuseppe Tartini, humming the accompaniment to Irving Ginberg's solo violin in the first movement of the G major sonata.

The women's section of the Symphonic Chorus then joined the orchestra in an "Ave Maria," by Brahms, and the contrasting liveliness of Max von Weinzierl's "Dance Song," a melodically attractive and rhythmically urgent piece. The first half of the concert closed with Charles Marie Widor's beautifully scored Chorale and Variations for harp and orchestra, in which Anne O'Brien handled the solo part with dextrous skill.

Anton Bruckner's "Romantic" symphony in E flat major constituted the latter part of the program. Dr. Bauer believes that this work has not previously been performed in Washington, and I for one am willing to agree with him, because Bruckner's music has been very slow making its way to the American public. The fourth symphony is a good introduction to Bruckner, for it presents that very serious composer in an aspect most likely to win favor and arouse curiosity. The title "Romantic" was attached by Bruckner himself to emphasize its particular character of imaginative poesy.

Bruckner was a devout Catholic and before he turned his hand to writing symphonies he composed a number of masses and other liturgical works. His style grew out of the masses and motets of the Italian school, especially those of Gabrieli, and in all his symphonies, even in the second movement of the "Romantic" fourth, one finds a chorale. His deeply-rooted and sincere religious convictions colored all his music with mysticism, and for that reason most of his symphonies have an austere beauty which grows gradually upon the listener.

Auditors last evening must have noticed in the symphony certain Wagnerian cadences. These are not accidental but deliberate, because Bruckner's admiration for Wagner was almost idolatrous. Yet the two composers are poles apart, separated by fundamental differences in character. Compared to the sensuous Wagner, Bruckner was an ascetic; the one delighted in tone-color of the most complex weaving, while the other sought his impressive effects by tonal contrast between the sections of the orchestra.

Club to Hear McClellan

Dr. William McClellan, president of the Potomac Electric Power Co., will be guest speaker at the weekly meeting of the Cosmopolitan Club, to be held at 12:30 p. m. today in the Carlton Hotel.

Francis Barber, Fire Captain, Dies

Capt. Francis P. Barber, 46, of No. 3 Engine Company, D. C. Fire Department, died of a heart attack yesterday at his home, 1278 Neal street northeast. He had been off duty for about a week with a cold.

He was appointed to his present post in April of last year after working his way up through the ranks. A veteran of the World War, he joined the department in 1918.

He was cited for his leadership and valor, for his work in the Knickerbocker disaster and the Kann's warehouse fire. He was seriously injured several times in line of duty.

He leaves his wife, Mrs. Armetta Barber; a daughter, Blanche; two sons, Francis, jr., and Donald, and a brother, Philip Earl Barber.

Mrs. C. B. Holbrook Dies; Secretary To CCC Director

Mrs. Claire B. Holbrook, secretary to Robert Fechner, director of the CCC since its founding in 1933, died yesterday at Providence Hospital.

Mrs. Holbrook, a past president of the Ellen Spenser Mussey Tent No. 1, Daughters of the Union Veterans of the Civil War, was the widow of Wesley F. Holbrook and the daughter of the late Capt. John W. and Catherine Bechtol.

Born in Berkeley Springs, W. Va., she had lived in Washington 15 years. She leaves a son, Edwin P. Holbrook, of Philadelphia; a daughter, Mrs. Donald Whitmeyer, of Silver Spring, Md., with whom she lived, and three sisters, Mrs. Andrew White, of Baltimore; Mrs. Everett F. Warner, of Washington, and Mrs. Charles H. Knott, of Takoma Park, Md.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m., Saturday, at St. Michael's Church in Silver Spring. Burial will be in Berkeley Springs, W. Va.

Miss Coulson Is Chairman In Folk Fete

Other Appointments Announced at Meeting In Raleigh Hotel

Miss Edith Coulson, of the Council of Social Agencies, last night was named chairman of the reception and entertainment committee for the National Folk Festival, to be held April 27, 28 and 29, at Constitution Hall.

The appointment was anounced at a meeting in the Raleigh Hotel, with Miss Sara Gertrude Knott, director of the festival, as chairman.

Other appointments included Miss Elizabeth M. Andrews, principal of Bancroft School, chairman of the school co-operative committee; Miss Evelyn S. Evans, of the General Land Office, chairman of hall arrangements; Mrs. Charles B. Sinclair, chairman of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers co-operative committee; Miss Mary Newcomb, chairman of the parochial schools co-operative committee, and Mrs. W. B. Armstrong, of Cabin John, Md., chairman for the Montgomery County schools.

Others present at the meeting were Mrs. Gertrude Lyons, of the D. C. Federation of Music Clubs; Miss Isabelle Foster, Paul Junior High School music instructor; Miss Mabel V. Holgate, of the Washington Pipers Guild; Miss Margaret Valiant, of Farm Security Administration; Miss Hilda Mathews, of the Federal Housing Administration, and Ladislaus J. Esunas, of the Baltic American Society of Washington.

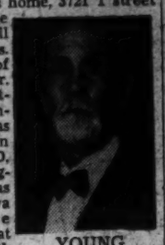
Rowed 90 Miles To Quit Memphis

Helena, Ark., March 29 (AP).—Hope Brewster, 22, Memphis violinist, whose 90-mile solo jaunt down the Mississippi River in a $2 skiff started speedboat and airplane searches, identified herself today in a hotel here and expressed wonder over the excitement she had caused.

"I had planned to stay here in Helena and find work. But I don't guess I'd better now, after all this fuss," she said. "I just wanted to get away from Memphis."

Wm. H. Young, Union Veteran, Dies Here at Ninety-Six

William H. Young, 96, veteran of the Civil War and doorkeeper in the House of Representatives, died yesterday at his home, 3721 T street northwest. He had been ill about ten days.



YOUNG

A native of Indiana, Mr. Young enlisted in the Union Army as a private in Company D, 13th Iowa Regiment, known as "Crocker's Iowa Brigade." He saw action at Shiloh, Corinth and Vicksburg, and was taken prisoner during the Atlanta campaign. He remained in the Andersonville, Ga., prison from July 22, 1864, until the end of the war, when he came to Washington to take part in the grand review of the Union Army.

Returning to his home at Hedrick, Ia., he was a farmer for some years and then went into the banking business. From 1883 to 1920 he was president of the First National Bank of Hedrick.

In 1925 he came to live with his daughter, Mrs. Lucius Clark, whose husband was then chancellor of the American University here. At that time he was appointed doorkeeper at the diplomatic gallery in the House of Representatives, and from then until his last illness he never missed a day at his post.

He was a member of Garfield Lodge, No. 485, of the Masonic Order in Hedrick; the Ottumwa (Ia.) Lodge of the Knights Templar, and the Hedrick post, Grand Army of the Republic.

Besides his daughter, who lives in Winter Park, Fla., he is survived by a son, Waldo W. Young, of this city.
